New Tiffany Color Symphonies

Sper And Rogan At Pathe

Norman L. Sper and George R. Rogan, co-authors of "The Minstrel Man," the talking picture which Universal is making with Eddie Leonard, have been added to the writing staff at the Pathe Studios in Culver City.

Eugene Walter With Radio

William Le Baron, vice-president in charge of production for Radio Pictures has won the signature of Eugene Walter, playwright, to an RKO contract. Mr. Walter's first assignment is to do the dialogue for "Help Yourself to Happiness," the Red Book Magazine story from the pen of Frank R. Adams.

Owen Moore In "High Voltage"

Owen Moore, who recently deserted the silent drama to play one of the leading roles in the stage production, "The Marriage Bed," returns to the screen to play a featured part in William Boyd's new Pathe production, "High Voltage."

Schoedsack Enroute To N. Y.

Ernest B. Schoedsack, who, with Merian C. Cooper produced "Grass" and "Chang" and recently concluded the final touches on Paramount's "The Four Feathers," has left Hollywood for New York. His partner, Cooper, has been in the city for the past two weeks.

Baggot To Direct Denny

King Baggot has returned to the Universal fold and will direct Reginald Denny's next picture, "Let Me Explain."

Hal Skelly To Hollywood

Hal Skelly, who created the role of Skid in the Arthur Hopkins-George Manker Watters stage hit, "Burlesque," will leave New York today for Hollywood where he will play the principal male role in Paramount's talking film version of the play. Nancy Carroll will have the principal feminine role. Ralph Theadore, Oscar Levant and Charles D. Brown already are in Hollywood rehearsing for scenes in the film under the direction of John Cromwell and Edward Sutherland.

"Insidious Dr. Fu Manchu"

Charles Stevenson, character actor, was engaged recently for the role of General Petrie in Paramount's talking picture version of Sax Rohmer's "The Insidious Dr. Fu Manchu."

Lawford Davidson, Noble Johnson, Evelyn Selbie and Charles Giblyn were assigned to the cast.

Boles Re-Signed By Laemmle

The contract of John Boles has been renewed and the former stage star will remain at Universal to play in talkies for at least another two years, it has been announced by Carl Laemmle, Jr.

Nils Asther

Cast For "The Midway"

Tiffany-Stahl announces that the cast of "The Midway" (tentative) starring Joe E. Brown, includes Virginia Bradford and Helen Foster, the leads, Wallace MacDonald, Wm. Davidson, Richard Tucker, Barton Hopburn, Joan Standing and Allan Cavan. It is being directed by Albert Ray.

Christie-MacLean Production

Al Christie has lined up a high powered cast for the Douglas MacLean all talking feature production, "Divorce Made Easy," which is to go into recording within a very short time. In addition to Marie Prevost, who has been announced as playing opposite MacLean, will be Johnny Arthur, Jack Duffy, Frances Lee and Dot Farley in the picture, which is being adapted by Alfred A. Cohn from the farce comedy which was bought by Christie from Wilson Collison.

"Copy," All-Talking M-G-M Short

Norman Houston, who, with James Gleason, is responsible for the racy backstage dialogue in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Broadway Melody," has been elevated to the rank of director by that company. Houston's first assignment for M-G-M will be an all-talking short, "Copy," a newspaper comedy drama by Kendall Banning, with dialogue by Houston. Roscoe Karnes will work in this film.

Players For "She Knew Men"

J. L. Warner has announced plans for the production of "She Knew Men," the final picture on Warner Bros. current schedule of eighteen Special Warner Winners. This story which will completely round out the program for 1927-28 will be started sometime in April. Davey Lee will be a player and others chosen up to this time include Betty Bronson, Gertrude Olmstead, John T. Murray and Edmund Breese.

"Wonder Of Women"

Using a moving train as his first set, Clarence Brown traveled about two hundred miles on a specially constructed railroad track at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, obtaining his first sequence last week for "Wonder of Women." The new picture will have dialogue and is an adaptation of Hermann Sudermann's "Stephen Trumholt's Wife."

Lewis Stone has the part of the musician and Peggy Wood will make her screen debut has the chief feminine role. In support cast of "Wonder of Women" are Ethlyn Clair, and Mary Doran.

The Rooneys In A Feature

The Rooney Family, consisting of Pat. Sr., Marion Bent, and Pat Rooney 3rd, will make a six reel feature for Universal in addition to the two reelers they are now producing. Edgar Allan Woolf, who writes the Rooney's vaudeville material and is responsible for the two short subjects made thus far, will write the scenario for the feature.

"OH! THOSE TWO BOYS"

THEY'LL raise the roof right off the house if you don't have it nailed down tight! And they'll wreck the dignity of the town's worst grouch! But while they are wreckers inside they'll build for you out in front—out where the tickets are bought.

Two funnier boys than Monty Collins and Vernon Dent would be hard to find. And you'll wait a long time before you find another pair that will make a quicker bid for public favor than these two boys in MERMAID COMEDIES.

VERNON DENT

MONTY COLLINS

They established their prestige in "SOCIAL PRESTIGE". And they whooped 'er up in "WHOOPEE BOYS". And now "PARLOR PESTS" makes it three knockouts in a row. If you care more for laughter in your house than for solemn dignity, you can't afford to pass up one of these

"Jeanne Eagels in 'THE LETTER' gives one of the most gorgeous portrayals ever caught upon the silver sheet. A talking picture triumph." —New York American

"Intelligently produced and most competently acted. True passages of life-like drama. Compellingly performed." —New York Times

"'THE LETTER' accomplishes still another step forward in the eye-opening development of the talking film. Miss Eagels gives a performance that holds the spectator from first to last with compelling intensity. Reginald Owen as the husband and O. P. Heggie are admirable. Herbert Marshall is his own engaging self." —New York Telegram

"'THE LETTER' is the best all-talking picture we have seen so far. Paramount seems to have the way to make talking pictures sound as well as they appear."

—New York Journal of Commerce

"'THE LETTER' proves that both the legitimate stage and the silent drama have a real menace close upon their heels. It marks a new epoch in the talking screen."

—New York Morning Telegraph

"Jeanne Eagels does a magnificent piece of work. The most ambitious 100% dialogue picture to reach a cinema house. Voices are well synchronized, all registering well. Certainly the talkies have done right by this one."

—New York Daily News

"'THE LETTER' represents another step forward toward mechanical perfection in the audible photodrama. None of the jarring eruditics that marked the earlier talking films is present. The film progresses with all the smoothness that one would expect of a workmanlike stage play."

—Brooklyn Daily Eagle

"THE LETTER must certainly be the best talking screen play that has yet been devised."

—New York Herald Tribune

Harry Pollard I Salute You!

(No. 627—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation)

IN THE FRONT RANK AS A MOVING PICTURE DIRECTOR—
IN THE FRONT RANK AS A MOVIETONE DIRECTOR—
IN THE FRONT RANK AS A SKILLED SCENARIST—
IN THE FRONT RANK AS AN ACTOR ON STAGE AND SCREEN—
THAT'S HARRY POLLARD.

WHEN ALL THESE SUPER-QUALITIES OF SHOWMANSHIP ARE FOUND combined in one human being, it is not stretching the point to say he is a genius.

YEARS AGO HE GAVE YOU HIS EXTREMELY ORIGINAL AND POPULAR series of "Leather Pushers." He gave you "California Straight Ahead." He gave you "The Cohens and Kellys." He gave you "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

AND NOW HE IS GIVING YOU "SHOW BOAT"—THE TOPMOST PEAK in all his high peaks of achievement. Mr. Pollard has lived and breathed "Show Boat." He has given it his heart and head. He is entitled to the credit for whipping the scenario into the final shape which brought out the really great and lasting qualities of Edna Ferber's wonderful book. He chose the cast—and what choosing! He directed not only the silent picture, but so quickly has he mastered the sound technique that he directed that also.

IT WILL INTEREST YOU TO KNOW THAT IN ONE OUTSTANDING characteristic, Mr. Pollard is much unlike other talented directors, in that he is a business man and an economist. When he spends money it shows on the screen—not on the floor of the cutting room. He spends lavishly where it will accomplish results, but niggardly where it will not.

I SAY THAT WHEN ANY MAN IN THIS BUSINESS SHOWS SUCH loyalty to his company and to the industry, he is entitled to just such a public tribute as I now give him.

WHEN YOU SEE "SHOW BOAT" YOU WILL CONCUR IN EVERY WORD I have written!

HARRY POLLARD, I SALUTE YOU!

Some Exhibitor's letters that Exhibitors should Read

From Andrew Battiston,
Manager of Ritz Theatre, Irwin, Pa.

"We have finished a two-day engagement of your first subject, 'Moulin Rouge,' and want to tell you how well pleased we were with the results obtained on this picture. The picture did as well for us, in fact, better, than some of the specials which we have played. On the opening day we came within a few dollars of equalling our box office record for one of the biggest specials of the year. On the second day of the showing we exceeded the record on the special by more than thirty per cent."

From C. C. Dunsmoor,
Capitol Theatre, Marshalltown, Iowa.

"I thought 'Moulin Rouge' might have been an accident, but when I played 'Tommy Atkins' I knew you have some real productions. Story and direction smooth, appeal positively what we Americans want—real locations, no sham. More power to you fellows, you have got something and will reach the top with such productions. Advise availability of other four. They will make me money."

From H. G. Steely,
Siluria, Ala.

"We were more than well pleased with 'Tommy Atkins' and 'Honeymoon Abroad.' The players were good and the directing excellent, and everything about them were real. We are glad we have several more of World Wide pictures."

From Henry I. Mader,
Clifton Theatre, Circleville, Ohio.

"I was very much pleased with the 'Tommy Atkins' picture which I screened Saturday. The picture was above my expectations."

From Lee A. Ochs,
New York Independent Theatre Operator

"I booked the picture 'Woman in the Night' for my theatres, and I wish every independent exhibitor in the United States believed in the World Wide proposition as much as I do. I am also looking forward to equally good results from both 'Honeymoon Abroad' and 'Tommy Atkins.' If you do one-half the things you claim you are going to do, you will be a Godsend to the independent exhibitors. Good luck to you!"

From Fred J. Greene,
Rialto Theatre, Woonsocket, R. I.

"I have just received the approved contracts on World Wide Pictures for my town. As an independent exhibitor, I feel that I should like to take this opportunity to wish Mr. Williams and yourself the greatest success in your new venture. It is concerns such as yours that give the Independent exhibitor a ray of hope, and I'm sure that every Independent exhibitor in this great country of ours will give you full co-operation."

From S. P. Briggs,
State Theatre, Denver, Col.

"I fully expect my patrons at the State Theatre to back up my judgment that 'Tommy Atkins' and 'Honeymoon Abroad' are two well worth while productions. I am convinced that a hearty welcome awaits the entrance of World Wide Pictures in the distribution field. I have always been an advocate of 'the internationalization of the screen' (with apologies to 'Jaydee Williams'). Our people like variety—in fact, it is the life of the entertainment business—and they like the truth. I believe World Wide will give them both. There is nothing too good for the State Theatre, and therefore, I expect to do a lot of business with you."

Thank you, Gentlemen—

But we're barely started. Better and Better Pictures and "Exhibitor's Choice Selling" must win.

The Chain Theatre Manager

And His Importance in the Industry

By William A. Johnston

THERE is an old copybook maxim which says: "A chain is as strong as its weakest link". And that is true of the chain situation in this industry.

Too little attention, we are convinced, is paid to the status of and the service rendered by the managers of chain houses—the men on the firing-line, the chaps who have the actual, everyday handling of the million dollar palaces and the fine neighborhood theatres.

Reduced to its lowest terms, the chain will be just as successful as its personnel makes it, and that goes all the way from the executive at the top to the man in the local situation.

Some of the top executives realize this fact and proceed accordingly. Others do not. The latter seem to regard the house manager as nothing more than a rubber stamp. They load him down with a mass of details; issue orders without knowing whether they fit the local situation, and in general make it all but impossible for him to do the very thing that he must do if the chain is to succeed—namely, deliver the goods.

We believe this shortsighted policy proceeds from a lack of knowledge of some of the elementary principles of human nature. You cannot get the most out of personnel by putting an iron roof over it. You may pay for lip-service and perfunctory effort but you can't buy enthusiasm. The only way you can capture that priceless ingredient is by giving the man who is working for you something to work for; and that something is far more than mere money.

The development and conservation of loyalty is based on treating the employee as if he had some brains. If he hasn't, the reflection is not on him, but on the man who hired him. It consists likewise in not forgetting that he, too, is human; not a superman, capable of performing miracles.

Of course, the house manager likes to be treated like a human being. The personal touch develops his loyalty. In a certain big industrial organization, which has all but a monopoly in its field, the worker is made to feel that the top office is interested in his welfare. For example, in this way: each employee, when he is hired, of course fills out a blank, containing, among other facts, the date of his birth. And on every recurring birthday, as long as he remains with the company, he receives a remembrance from the home office. Not a gift of great value, but simply a congratulatory letter, or some other token of esteem. And it comes from the President of the company.

We know, of course, that not all the top chain executives are delinquent and shortsighted and unbusinesslike in their handling of employees. There are those who understand the organization of loyalty as one of the chief functions of the real executive. These men are not only great showmen; they are first class administrative officers of big enterprises.

What About the House Manager?

An Interview With Harold B. Franklin

OPPORTUNITIES for the intelligent and able chain theatre manager were never greater than they are now.

This is the view of Harold B. Franklin, President of Fox-West Coast Theatres, Inc., and outstanding executive in the difficult field of successful chain operation.

A firm believer in the modern method of conducting theatres on a large scale, Mr. Franklin is equally emphatic in the belief that the house manager must supply the needed personal touch in contact with the public.

Successful chain operation is producing a modern type of house manager, he points out. Just as theatre operation has been modernized, so the manager himself, if he is successful, has kept pace with the new development.

New Standards

New standards are being established. And they apply equally to personnel as to the types of theatres now being operated by the chains.

"The need for good men is just as important as it ever was and chain operation of necessity demands house managers of ability and character to represent and carry out the policies of the company," Mr. Franklin declared.

"Those at the top recognize fully that you can't run a chain successfully from one desk. Success depends to a great extent upon the man in the local situation."

A great deal is heard nowadays about home office rule as applied to the man in the field. In many instances, it is considered a handicap to the local situation because of the hard and fast rules that are supposed to be imposed on the house manager.

But Mr. Franklin's analysis of the situation, from the viewpoint of his own great success as a theatre executive, defines the responsibilities and mission of both divisions of operation.

Home Office And Field

"The home office," Mr. Franklin declares," has immeasureably increased the source of supply for ideas, and helps for the guidance of the man in the local chain theatre.

"I do not believe, for example, that the house manager could buy as well as the chain's purchasing department, and that applies not only to pictures but to uniforms, or any articles that are used in the theatre.

"In the same way, the aid of a real live advertising department at the home office cannot fail to guide the house manager and be of great help to him.

"Add the home office resources, and ideas to the initiative of a good local man and you have come as close to establishing as ideal a plan of chain operation as has yet been devised."

The house manager is the company's own representative in contacting the public. He must intelligently interpret the policies of the company. And above all he must make himself felt in the conduct of the house, so that the greatest possible good will may be created in the community.

In the industry's new era, Mr. Franklin sees chain operation of theatres playing a big, perhaps the major, part.

At no time, in his view, have film rental grosses been as great as they are now. And the reason for this he assigns to chain operation, particularly in the big cities.

The biggest profits, he says, are going to film companies closely affiliated with the chains, and these have already reached figures that are "astounding." Grosses have been stabilized through chain operation; there is very little fluctuation. Profits and expenses can be figured now with great certainty.

But what has all this to do with the house manager?

The Vital Contact

This, and importantly: he is in a vital spot because he is the point of contact with the consumer to reach whom, ultimately, all this great activity is carried on—namely, the public.

Not only so, but without proper local management of theatres, added to home office direction, the great grosses would not be forthcoming.

The stabilization process, Mr. Franklin continues, is accentuated by the building of fine theatres throughout the country. The leadership in this movement he attributes to the chains.

Again, the importance of the house manager comes clearly into view. As new houses are built—West Coast opened twenty-five last year—new opportunities are opened for the vigorous, modern type of manager.

The West Coast building activity will be continued. New houses are planned at San Francisco, San Diego and other cities along the Pacific Slope, and the premiere of the new Fox at Seattle is in the offing.

His Record

In his direction of Fox West Coast Theatres, Mr. Franklin is continuing the remarkable record he made in his earlier activities leading up to his management of the Famous Players-Lasky Theatre Department, prior to his present position.

His first conspicuous position was as a vaudeville booker for a circuit of forty small houses. When, a few years later, he became managing director of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, he soon attained national recognition though the innovations he introduced there, many of which have been incorporated into the policy of de luxe houses throughout the country.

The theatre, under Franklin's direction, became famous. With Paramount, he Qualities That Win Success for the House Manager Are:

A real appreciation of and sympathy for the business he is engaged in.

Thorough understanding and practical knowledge of advertising as applied to the local house.

Familiarity with every department of theatre operation, and service to the public.

He must be public spirited and fully able to take his place in community affairs.

Naturally, he must be of good appearance and, in every way, a worthy representative of his company.

Granting intelligence to start with, the house manager who has these qualities cannot help but be a success.

planned some of the biggest theatres, now household words throughout America.

The record of his achievements is well known. And, on the record, he has long been recognized as an outstanding leader in the industry.

His words of advice to house managers; his estimate of what they must have to succeed, are based on the broadest knowledge of the theatre in all its ramifications, gained over a period of years in meeting and solving problems such as confront exhibitors of all ranks, the house manager no less than the managing director.

The New Era

The building of magnificent playhouses ushered in a new era in the industry. These structures have come to be recognized not only as splendid additions to the architecture of cities and towns throughout America, but also as community institutions equal to any, in importance and influence upon their localities.

The day by day handling and administration of these institutions is, of course, one of the most important of all the activities in the industry.

As Mr. Franklin points out, the house manager must be public-spirited and able to take his place in the affairs of his community. He stresses this point in the enumeration of qualities that win success in theatre management.

Likewise, the house manager needs a full appreciation and sympathy for the business in which he is engaged. This comprehends not only qualities that go to make up the real showman, but an understanding that he is the industry's outpost on the firing-line—the vital contact with the public.

In the handling of advertising, the house manager has back of him the resources of the home office in the creation of ideas to be applied locally. It is here that the skill of the man in the local situation comes into play. It is his job to coordinate his theatre with the home office campaign, if it is being conducted on a national scale, for instance; and to avail himself specifically of the great source of supply which Mr. Franklin discusses above.

Maxims

In the adjoining columns, Mr. Franklin states clearly and incisively what he would do if he were the manager of a chain house. These maxims are simple and direct, and are of course based upon his practical and successful experience all the way along the line from the managership of a single theatre to the commanding position in the administration of a great circuit.

As such, these maxims hold interest for every chain theatre manager in the country. They come from a man who has arrived at the top of his profession in a difficult but fascinating field.

Harold B. Franklin, President Fox-West Coast Theatres

Were I A House Manager I Would:

Find out what the other fellow is doing and try to improve the operation of my house as compared to those run by other managers on the circuit.

Strive to make my theatre considered the best of the chain.

Give my theatre the personal touch.

Sit through the first show of every change of program (something very few managers do).

View the show from the patron's angle, even before it is presented to the public.

European Producers And Electric Companies Join In $100,000,000 Sound Trust

Will Distribute Product All Over World In Competition With Pictures, Devices Of U. S. Companies

BRITISH, French and German sound film companies, both producers of sound pictures and concerns engaged in the manufacture of devices for recording and reproducing sound in connection with pictures, have formed a $100,000,000 combine to combat the invasion of similar American product, and to distribute their own product throughout the world, according to a story published in The New York Times of March 14.

The new European trust includes all the sound film companies in Britain, Germany and France in unification with such electrical organizations as Siemens-Halske and the General Electric Company of Berlin, representing the Klangfilm; German Tobis and Foreign Tobis, representing Tri-Ergon, Kuchenmeister and Maester, British Phototone and French Phototone, Ltd. The total number of patents involved in the tieup is said to be 432.

The combine is said to have been effected largely as a result of the fact that Western Electric Company equipment was gaining a strong foothold throughout Europe, with demonstrations of the local device being made in many theatres. RCA Photophone also has an American representative on the ground giving demonstrations and completing a survey with the possible idea of establishing a manufacturing plant or plants in Europe.

Operations World-Wide

According to "The Times" the entire manufacturing and research resources of the General Electric and Siemens will immediately be put into action for the manufacturing of the boxes and producing sets required. Three sizes will be made, first, for the largest theatres to sell for not more than $5,500, second for $3,750 and third for $2,000. All types of films with sound recorded edge and films synchronized with sixteen discs will be playable with these theatre equipments.

Installation and maintenance service will be carried on throughout the world by Siemens and General Electric. Large quantities of theatre equipments are ready for shipment to England. The British and French Phototone, Limited, will carry in their respective territories a full outfit, apparatus and films for the new organization.

Penn. Censors Given $1200 Increase

ALL of the members of the Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors have been reappointed for a period of two years by Governor Fisher and their appointments confirmed by the Senate. The Governor has also signed a bill providing for a $1,200 increase in the salary of each member of the Board, to be effective July 1, 1929. The Board now consists of Harry L. Knapp, chairman; Henry Starr Richardson, secretary, and Mrs. A. B. Patton.

E. Penn., S. Jersey Delaware Owners Gather In Philly

Convention Is Called For Discussion Of Sound Picture Costs

Members of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware gathered in convention on Friday of this week. The session is being held at the Elks Clubs in Philadelphia, and a large attendance was anticipated.

The convention takes on considerable importance as it was called for a discussion of the increased cost of production caused by the growing popularity of sound pictures, and other problems in connection with the talkies.

The discussion will doubtless be a lively one as several nationally-known figures in the industry will be present. Among these are R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., and Abram F. Myers, president of the Allied States Exhibitors' Association.

Tiffany-Stahl Will Open Branch Offices In France

Tiffany-Stahl has completed arrangements to open distributing offices in France with J. Frank Brockliss as director-general. The main office will be in Paris with branches in Marseilles, Lyons, Bordeaux, Lille and Strausbourg. The company recently inaugurated distribution offices in Great Britain with C. F. Bernhard as managing director.

Dr. Gromon Joins Pathe

Dr. Francis Gromon, musical director of the Paramount-Publix theatres for the 1926-1927 season, has become associated with the Pathe Studios in New York as assistant to Josiah Zuro, Pathe director general of music.

Warners Cutting Down Overseating In Philadelphia

Inaugurating Many Changes In Houses Formerly Run By Stanley

In order to overcome the overseating in the downtown district, Warner Brothers are inaugurating many changes among the houses formerly operated by the Stanley Company of America in Philadelphia. The Mastbaum, Stanley and Karlton will be operated as first run houses, with change of program each week, with the Stanton, Boyd and Aldine as long run theatres.

The Globe Theatre at Juniper and Market streets, a motion picture and vaudeville house, has been offered for sale and it is stated that a 32-story store and office building will be erected in its place. The Regent, at 16th and Market streets, is closed and is being remodeled and its seating capacity reduced to 370. Upon reopening it will be known as the Film Art Cinema, operated by the Film Guild Cinema. The Stanton Theatre will be remodeled at a cost of approximately $50,000.

It is reported that the Arcadia, on which the lease expires October 1, 1929, will be the next Stanley house to close. The Princess and Savoy, it is also reported, are scheduled to be closed.

Soriero Resigns As Director Of Rochester Theatre

Thomas D. Soriero, one of the best-known theatre executives in the industry, resigned this week as managing director of the Rochester Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. His future plans will be announced later.

H. M. Addison has been appointed resident manager of the house, with William H. Raynor general manager of the Greater Rochester Properties, Inc., operating the Lafayette and the Rochester.

Pathe News Cameraman Dies Covering Florida Speed Test

Charles R. Traub, veteran Pathe News cameraman, was killed at Daytona Beach, Fla., Wednesday, while covering the attempt of Lee Bible to break the world's speed record, in which Bible was also killed. When the machine overturned it hurtled into the cameraman, killing him instantly. For the best part of eighteen years Traub has been a news reel and newspaper staff reporter.

Handles Fox Publicity

Milton Harris has been named associate director of publicity for Fox Theatres Corporation. He will act as traveling publicity director, stopping a month or two in each city through the west and California to install the Fox system in each theatre.

Sales Season Later This Year Than In Past

Sound And Other Problems Will Delay Meetings To Late June

The sound situation is probably the principal factor that will delay the selling season for 1929-30 this year until the middle of June. It is said that an understanding exists between major distributing companies to delay sales conventions until the middle of June.

The sound problems may be considerably straightened out within the next three months and much of the current product will be cleaned up. It is also said that exhibitors are not inclined to buy as early as they did in most past years. Many houses have been promised sound installations, but they are wary of buying until they know just when they will be equipped.

A number of the leading companies declare their sales season will start later than usual this year. Paramount is planning to hold its convention in June. Warners are non-committal, while Universal executives say the sessions will be held later than in past years. Other companies have not set definite dates but they are generally agreed that it will be a late selling season.

William Fox Name Supplanting West Coast On Theatres

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Mar. 14.—Substitution of the name of William Fox in place of West Coast is being made by various houses operated by West Coast Theatres in and near Los Angeles.

The change is particularly noted in newspaper advertisements, with William Fox replacing West Coast in display advertising slugs. With Fox owning the entire control of West Coast Circuit, it is thought that his name will eventually go up on all theatres solely owned by the organization in place of West Coast; with the latter designation remaining on those theatres that are only partially owned by the company.

"Hell's Angels" Production Cost Near $3,000,000 Mark

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 14.—"Hell's Angels," now well into its second year of production by Caddo, is also close to the $3,000,000 mark of production costs. Originally Howard Hughes intended to spend about one million on its making. He passed that amount in the early stages. The two million dollar mark was left behind several weeks ago. At the current time it is past $2,500,000, and when cutting, titling and exploitation expenses are added, it is estimated that over three millions will be tied up in the "Hell's Angels" cans.

Opinions Differ on Present Practicability Of Television; Jersey Broadcasts Due Apr. 1

W. E. Installations In U. S. Now 1,456

LATEST figures given out by the Western Electric Compny announce that 1456 installations of that company's sound reproducing equipment had been completed in the United States up to March 9. That was an increase of 72 over the figures given out for installations up to February 23, or a little less than 36 a week for the period.

M-G-M To Make Different Sound, Silent Versions

Will Not Use Scenes From Talker As Bulk For Silent Version

Hollywood, March 14.—In producing a silent version of "The Voice of the City," M-G-M will make an entirely new picture for the unwired houses, and will not use scenes from the talker version as the bulk of footage for the silent production. Willard Mack directed the talker, and George Melford is now preparing the silent picture.

From information gathered at M-G-M studios, that company will make entirely different and separate productions for their silent and sound versions of the same pictures. From present plans, M-G-M will not adopt the system which is being used by many studios, whereby silent versions of pictures are re-cut from the talkers, with a minimum number of added scenes shot for the silent picture to put it into some semblance of acceptable form for the exhibitors.

"Noah's Ark" Booked In Five Cities As Road-Show

Warner Bros.' "Noah's Ark," which opened at the New York Winter Garden this week will be road-showed in five cities in the near future. The cities and dates are as follows: March 23, Globe theatre, Atlantic City; April 1, Aldine theatre, Philadelphia; April 15, Majestic theatre, Boston; April 7, Wood's theatre, Chicago; April 21, New Detroit theatre, Detroit.

Ralph Morrow has been named Southern District Manager for Tiffany-Stahl in charge of exchanges in the entire southern territory. Just previous to this affiliation Morrow was with United Artists in Dallas, Oklahoma City and New Orleans.

Hungarian Inventor And U. S. Concern Claim Process Ready; Other Experts See It For Future

THERE seems to be a pronounced difference of opinion regarding the near future of television. From Europe comes word that a Hungarian engineer has perfected the process to a point where it is now practical. Television movies are to be broadcast into the homes in the New York area by the Jenkins Television Corporation of Jersey City by April 1st, according to James W. Garside, president of that company.

Edward B. Craft, vice-president of the Bell Telephone Company of New York, enroute to Honolulu at Los Angeles, is quoted from there as saying: "To transmit motion pictures by radio is a costly procedure and for that reason I do not believe that home sets will be possible for many years, although in this business one never knows what the next day will bring forth."

E. E. Bucher, vice-president of RCA Photophone, says any announcement of the perfection of television for projection into the home at this time is entirely premature; that the process is not yet ready and will not be for some time to come.

Writing from Berlin, Heinrich Fraenkel, Berlin correspondent of Motion Picture News, says:

Ready For Radio Use

"After many years of experimental work the Hungarian inventor, Denes von Mihaly, living in Berlin, has perfected the practical possibility of broadcasting pictures by reducing the necessary number of pictorial elements from 10,000 per second to anything from 900 to 1400 per second, according to the outfit used. Thus the invention has become practicable for the ordinary radio subscriber and it can be attached to any radio outfit at a price varying from $25 to $100.

"At present the inventor is perfecting means for projecting the picture on an ordinary screen."

A broadcasting station to transmit the images is being erected atop the Jenkins manufacturing plant in Jersey City. The Federal Radio Commission has assigned it the call letters 2-XCR. It will operate on a wave length of 140 meters with power up to five kilowatts. A similar station has also been authorized in Washington, D. C., to operate at the same power.

Final Cold Snap Of Year Forces Down B'way Grosses With All Houses Suffering

Roxy Under $90,000 For Second Successive Week; Strand Business Goes Up

WHAT seems to have been the final cold snap of the winter of '28-'29 hit the Broadway picture houses a wallop in the box office last week. Business was off in five of the grind houses, while three of them went better than the average. In the two-a-day runs there was a fifty-fifty split.

The Roxy with "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" had the lowest receipts it has had since the first of the year with $84,228.25 as the take and slipped under the $90,000 mark for the second successive week. This week the Second Anniversary for the house will find the figures back above the average. The Paramount with "The Dummy" went under the average with $66,600, but did a strong comeback this week with "The Canary Murder Case."

In two instances in the grind houses with attractions having had long Broadway runs at $2 prices were over the average in business. "Alias Jimmy Valentine" at the Capitol did $76,608.90 for a percentage rating of 112½, while at the Strand Fannie Brice in "My Man" clicked with $41,572, which gave that house 117 1/10%.

"Geraldine" at the Colony got $8,699 and a revival of "Czar Ivan The Terrible" at the little Cameo did almost $4,500.

Douglas Fairbanks in "The Iron Mask" in its second week of a run at the Rivoli played to $42,500 after having broken the house record the first week. This business is at the rate of 150 per cent for that house, and "The Wolf of Wall Street" finished its run after six weeks at the Rialto with $18,588.

In both actual figures and percentage rating "The Broadway Melody" at the Astor tops the street with $24,137.75 in cash and a rating of 163 9/10. The nearest approach is "The Letter" which came into the Criterion last Thursday night and in two days drew $5,252. Another new arrival on the street last week was "Sonny Boy" at Warners where $9,634 was the box office answer.

"The Wolf Song" at the Embassy held up nicely in its second week with $8,780 and "Hearts in Dixie" pulled $10,276.25. At the Central "Weary River" in its fourth week got $17,311.50, while at the Criterion "Redskin" on the final four days of its run pulled $3,318.

"The Singing Fool" which had been at the Winter Garden for 26 weeks got $21,239 there before moving to the Harris theatre to make way for "Noah's Ark."

Helen Morgan In South For "Show Boat"

Julian Quits As Feature Director; Wants Short Films

Anxious To Learn More Of Dialogue; Barrymore Succeeds Him

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 14.—Rupert Julian has voluntarily withdrawn as director of M-G-M's "The Green Ghost," with the unusual request that he be assigned to talking shorts until such time as he learns enough of dialogue to be able to handle feature lengths. He has been replaced as director by Lionel Barrymore.

The request of Julian is the first instance where a director with only screen experience has had the courage to acknowledge possible shortcomings, and ask for a smaller spot to that which he has been accustomed until such time as he feels himself well qualified for the bigger job. It is quite in contrast with those directors who make bad talkies and refuse to admit their unfamiliarity with the job.

The naming of Barrymore as the director to succeed Julian confirms the exclusive story published in MOTION PICTURE NEWS that the former was retiring from acting to permanently direct pictures. He already has "Madame X" to his credit.

Langdon Rumored Dickering For Radio Pictures Unit

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 14.—Harry Langdon is reported in negotiations with Radio Pictures to become one of their star units. Langdon has cancelled his vaudeville tour and is returning to Hollywood. Some months ago, Langdon and Hal Roach were supposed to have concluded a deal whereby the former First National comedian was to make a series of screen musical comedies for Roach. This plan fell through when the Roach studio closed down.

W. E. To Launch Big Ad Campaign On Sound System

National Magazines To Run Spreads on Recording and Reproduction

The Western Electric Company is instituting an extensive advertising campaign in national magazines to familiarize the motion picture public with the facts concerning the recording and reproduction of sound and dialogue motion pictures by the Western Electric sound system.

It is figured that a circulation of more than 8,000,000 wil be reached by the magazines selected. The campaign will be inaugurated with the issue of the Saturday Evening Post of April 6, when a double page spread will be used. Other publications in which the ads will be placed are Liberty, Colliers, Photoplay, Motion Picture Magazine, Motion Picture Classic, Time, Life, College Humor, the New Yorker and the American Boy.

Drawings for the advertisement were prepared by Delavantey, sketch artist of the Sunday Times Magazine Section, who did his sketching from actual life at the Paramount Studio in Astoria. Enlargements of this ad, 22 by 28, have been prepared for theatres to use for lobby displays. They are being mailed to every theatre where the Western Electric sound system has been installed or ordered.

Portland, Ore., Owners Join To Fight Union Edict

With the Hippodrome theatre in Portland, Oregon, acceding to the demands of the operators' union, other Portland exhibitors have banded together to fight the demands of the union with reference to sound equipment. The union is said to have demanded two men at a $75 a week wage scale and this is declared an impossibility for the suburban houses.

A recent meeting held by the two factions resulted in little headway being made and another conference is being projected. The Hippodrome in yielding to the union demands will continue to show five acts of vaudeville and feature pictures, but at increased prices with 40 cents top.

Tiffany-Stahl Closes Deal To Use Sennett Sound Stages

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 14.—Grant Cook, representing Tiffany-Stahl, has closed a deal with Mack Sennett whereby Tiffany-Stahl will use the Sennett sound stages in Studio City for dialoguing their feature product. The deal is on a month to month basis until RCA apparatus is installed at the Tiffany Studios, which will probably not be for four months. It will put an end to shipping compares from Hollywood to New York for the insertion of dialogue and sound.

Mayer, Thalberg And Rubin Stay Despite Rumors

Will Continue As Production Heads At M-G-M Returning To Coast Next Week

The rumors to the effect that Louis B. Mayer, Irving Thalberg and J. Robert Rubin were to leave the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production organization as a result of the sale to Fox were dispelled in New York this week when all three arrived from the coast. The Loew-M-G-M company holds contracts with the trio that have about three and a half years to run and it is understood that the organization would not release them from these contracts under any conditions, even if they wanted to be freed. It is understood that there was a conferenee with Nicholas M. Schenek with a view to a release but that Schenck absolutely refused to listen to it.

$8,000,000 Reported

Schenck is said to have reeeived about $8,000,000 for his holding in the Loew stock and that in addition to the holdings of the widow of the late Mareus Loew and her sons, the Fox organization also secured a huge block of stock in Loew that was held by Lee Shubert.

At a series of conferences held in the Loew State Building this week Winfield Sheehan, viee president of Fox in charge of production, was present with both Meyer and Thalberg. Plans for production for the coming year on the part of M-G-M were definitely outlined on the coast at a series of meetings that were held between Mayer, Thalberg and Rubin, the latter having made the trip from New York for this purpose. Undoubtedly these plans will meet with the approval of the Fox organization.

Supremacy Question

Just what division of authority there will be in the matter of production, if any, is a question. It will be interesting, however, to watch the battle for supremacy between those units that are under the supervision of Irving Thalberg and those which will be directed by Sol M. Wurtzel who is the superintendent of production at the Fox Studios. Likewise the exact status between Louis B. Mayer and Winfield Sheehan as to the future will also be an interesting development.

Executive Whereabouts

According to the present plans Thalberg plans to leave for the coast almost any day while Louis B. Mayer will remain for another week or ten days. He was the guest of President Herbert Hoover at the White House on Tuesday night of this week and it is said that he could have the U. S. Ambassadorship to Turkey if he cared to aeeept that portfolio and was able to obtain a release from his contract to do so. Rubin is to remain in New York as heretofore in charge of production activities here.

U. S. Rests In Arbitration Case On Documents Submitted; Credit Case Waits Argument

Declares Censorship Damages Democracy

CENSORSHIP of motion pictures was severely criticised as "damaging to the American form of democracy" by Representative James M. Beck of Pennsylvania, president of the Washington, D. C., chapter of the Sons of the Revolution, in an address before that organization March 1.

No medium of expression has the right to subvert morals or advocate treason, Mr. Beck contended, but he held that existing law was ample to protect the public in these fields.

French Exhibs Ask Governm't To Reduce U.S. Quota

Petition Signed By 2,500 Urges Leniency For Own Protection

The French exhibitors, aroused over the stiffening of the quota on Americean pictures, proposed by the French produeers, are to petition their government urging that American pictures be given every leeway possible. The produeers have had things their own way up to the present and it looked as though their hopes for a more rigid quota would be realized.

A petition was started by the exhibitors recently and it already has some 2,500 signatures for presentation to the Chamber of Deputies. The petition declares that if American pictures are not permitted to enter the country both the theatres and the government will suffer heavy financial loss, the theatres at the box-offiee and the govern through taxes.

It is expeeted that those exhibitors who have not already signed will do so within the next ten days. The Commission is due to act on the proposed regulations April 1, but in the meantime the petition of the exhibitors will be presented and the Americean producers will be given a hearing next week before Franeois Poneet, Under Secretary of State in charge of Fine Arts, in whose hands the film situation has been placed. After consideration by him the proposed regulations and his findings on them will be passed to the Commission for final action.

Joseph Santley Signs To Direct Paramount Pictures

Joseph Santley, stage actor and produeer, has signed a year's contract as a director of Paramount pietures. Santley has been co-direeting with Robert Florey on the talking film, "The Cocoanuts," starring the Four Marx Brothers.

Gabriel Hess Tells Details Of Uniform Contract; Says Exhibitors Demanded Arbitration Clause

AFTER closing the credit committee case of the Government on Wednesday to a point where opposing counsel have only points of law to argue on the testimony stipulated, the arbitration case of the Government against Paramount, nine other distributors, the Hays organization and film boards of trade opened yesterday before Judge Thatcher in Federal Court, New York City. The Government charges conspiracy exists between the defendants in connection with the arbitration system and asks a permanent order restraining the alleged conspiracy.

C. Stanley Thompson, chief counsel for the Government in the proceeding, sprang a surprise in the afternoon session, when after an agreement on stipulation of evidenee he rested the Government's ease on documents to be submitted from exhibits of some eight boards of trade and exhibitors. He retains the right to call witnesses only in rebuttal.

The morning session yesterday was devoted to reading of the Government complaint and the opening arguments of Thompson and Edwin P. Grosvenor, the latter ehief of counsel for the defense.

Supplementing the original complaint, Thompson argued various angles, among them the bieycling of film, whieh he contended was illegal under the copyright law and therefore the distributor should apply to the Federal Courts for relief rather than to arbitration boards. Judge Thateher said he saw no reason why bieyeling should not be arbitrated and declared the eourts were not collection ageneies. Thompson told at length of the exhibitor complaints of oppression.

Must Show Injury

Grosvenor's main contention in his opening argument was that there was no monopoly as eharged and that there were no price agreements. He deelared the Government must show injury or the Sherman act eannot apply. He stressed the Trade Practice Conferenee of two years ago and told how the conditions imposed at that conference had been carried out. He declared that out of 25,000 arbitration cases but 134 had gone to the courts, 125 to confirm awards and 9 to be litigated.

Theatres Of Upper New York State Show Pleasing Average On Last Week's B. O. Reports

Leland, Albany, Does 75% Over Normal With "Alias Jimmy"; "Wild Orchids" High In Syracuse

DIVERSIFIED entertainment struck a pleasing average in the upper New York State cities of Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Schenectady, Albany, and Troy. The report from Ottawa, Canada, is also included in this section from MOTION PICTURE NEWS box office check-up.

Dialogue and sound pictures are keeping up their strong attendance marks yet it is interesting to note that "Dancing Daughters," a picture with but a synchronized score and incidental sound effects, stepped right along with "Four Sons" and others in Ottawa, while in Utica, Martin Johnson's travel picture, "Simba," outdrew 30 per cent such pictures as "Wild Orchids," "Flying Fleet" and "Circus Kid."

In Buffalo "Canary Murder Case" at the Century got 20 per cent over normal in spite of cold and stormy weather. "The Dummy" was the only other feature that played to normal business.

Rochester's lineup for the week ran to fairly even honors with "Jazz Age" and "Stark Mad" and "True Heaven" under the wire neck and neck, all three only 5 per cent under normal. "Dream of Love" was low with 80 per cent of normal trade.

In Syracuse, "Wild Orchids," with 5 vaude acts supporting, made whoopee with a 50 per cent increase over regular trade. It might be added that 660 in. of advt'g was used; in contrast, Keith's used 1317 in. and made it 10 per cent over normal with a double bill of "Tropic Madness" and "Someone To Love." "Old Arizona" was a regular.

Next to "Simba," in Utica, which went to 30 per cent over average attendance, "Circus Kid" was just able to ease over the normal mark by 3 per cent. "Flying Fleet" and "Wild Orchids" ran normal.

"White Shadows" had some pretty strong competition in Schenectady but beat them all out to the tune of 20 per cent over normal. "Wolf of Wall Street" was next with trade reaching the regular mark.

Albany was considerably ahead of Troy in the matter of percentage rating, "Alias Jimmy Valentine" at the Leland whooping it up to a 75 per cent over normal business. A Gus Edwards revue, Vita. acts and sound news rounded out the bill. The closest that Troy came was with "Mother Knows Best" which did 90 per cent of regular. Other 90 percenters in this zone were "Carnation Kid" and "Awakening." For the week in this zone "Sunrise" was low with a 25 per cent under normal mark.

In Ottawa, "Four Sons" captured honors for the week, doing 35 per cent better than normal. "Dancing Daughters" was only 10 per cent away and "Ramona" made it regular business. "Forbidden Love" was low here with a 25 per cent under rating.

Cleveland Exhibitors Plug Short Films

CLEVELAND, O., theatre owners and managers are giving advertising space to sound comedies, for the first time, giving the comedy a notable place on the program. Manager Watson of the Hippodrome is devoting from one half to one third of his space to the Educational sound comedies which he is featuring in connection with his sound features. In consequence, these comedies are getting special notices by the newspaper motion picture critics.

Qualitone May Start Factory Around New York

The Qualitone Corporation, which is producing a comparatively inexpensive sound projection device in Hollywood, may establish a factory branch in New York in the near future. Samuel Freedman, president of the company, who recently disposed of his interest in the Fine Arts Studios on the coast, leaves for the east in the near future to arrange for eastern distribution of the device and to make a survey with the idea of establishing the branch factory.

Maryland Exhibitors To Elect Officers March 21

A general election of officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, Inc., affiliated with the Allied States Association, will take place March 21. The nominating committee has unanimously recommended the following: Herman Blum, president; Louis Garman, vice-president; Frank A. Horning, treasurer, and William E. Stumpf, secretary. Directors, Frank H. Durkee, William Kalb, J. Louis Rome, Charles Nolte, Thomas D. Goldberg, George Gaertner, Phillip Miller, Annapolis, Md., and P. Seiwell, Towson, Md.

Case Against First National And Others Rests

Brought To Temporary Close Following Suggestion By Judge Thatcher

organization and for the Film Boards of Trade, was the first defense witness called. He told at length of the operation of the film boards and of the drawing up of the uniform contracts in their different altered conditions. He declared that the arbitration clause was first suggested by exhibitor interests. In reciting the details of the 1926 uniform contract he gave the names of exhibitor leaders in all parts of the country who had signed the agreements to the terms contained therein as being satisfactory to them.

The credit case against First National, nine distributors, film boards of trade and the Hays office was brought to a temporary close Wednesday afternoon following a testimony stipulation between counsel at the suggestion of Judge Thatcher, who presided, and who urged that process as a means of speeding up the trial. The stipulation is to determine which additional evidence is salient and which may be considered as cumulative.

The credit case brought little in the way of sensational testimony. After several hours which developed little or nothing of consequence Judge Thatcher interrupted with his stipulation suggestion. Don Douglas, secretary of the Dallas board, was the first witness called by the defense and he was on the stand most of Wednesday. The government introduced ninety papers from Dallas to prove that agreements supplementary to the rules of credit committees existed in the Dallas territory.

E. L. Cole, Atlanta secretary, was next witness. He testified to a number of transfers yearly in the Atlanta territory, pointing out the loss sustained in contracts which were not assumed.

Rosemary Foley, Omaha secretary, said that in the Omaha territory there were 328 theatre transfers in 1928, of which 16 were placed on the "fraudulent transfer" list, with 140 cases of assumption of contracts and 13 where assumption was refused.

It was during Miss Foley's testimony that the proceedings were interrupted with the agreement on testimony stipulation.

British Executive Coming To Discuss Fall Program

John Maxwell, chairman of British International Pictures, sailed for America on March 13 to confer with executives of World Wide Pictures on a talking picture program for fall release. Mr. Maxwell's company is the largest British producer, operating the great new studios at Elstree, near London, and it is planning a program of all-dialogue photoplays to be released in the United States and Canada by World Wide Pictures.

Church Group In Baltimore Fights Sunday Pictures

Appears En Masse Before Legislature In Protest; Iowa Houses Quit

Sunday motion picture shows continue to occupy considerable of the attention of different legislatures, one of the leading discussions this week being before the session at Annapolis, Md. Here a bill and amendment are before the house that would give the City Council and the Mayor of Baltimore the right to decide whether Baltimore shall have motion pictures after 2 P. M. on Sundays.

A group opposed to the passage of the bill appeared en masse before the Baltimore City Delegation in the lower house of the Legislature and outlined their stand on the matter. In this group were Dr. W. W. Davis, executive secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, three clergymen, a representative of the Federation of Men's Bible Classes and two women.

This delegation contended that Sunday movies would corrupt the children of the city; that the home life of the city would be disastrously effected and that dire consequences would be suffered by Christianity on account of it.

The Baltimore Sun, which had opposed a similar bill in 1924 came out editorially in favor of the present one.

The Ames Theatre Company, operating in the Fourth Ward in Ames, Iowa, has given up the fight for Sunday shows, following a fine of $50 imposed by a local judge.

Sunday Closing Halts Building In Canada Cities

The construction of new theatres in Montreal and other cities of Quebec and the installation of costly sound devices have been held up because of the possibility of the enforcement of the Sunday Closing Law. New houses delayed include two by Confederation Amusements, Limited; two by United Amusements, Limited, in Montreal, and one in Quebec City by Famous Players.

Son of Sam E. Morris Will Take West Virginia Bride

Edwin Morris, son of Sam E. Morris, vice-president of Warner Bros., is shortly to take for his bride Miss Carlyn Nathan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Nathan of Parkersburg, West Virginia. Young Morris is one of the youngest executives of M. Witmark & Sons, music publishers.

Paramount Seeks Title

Paramount is seeking a new title for "The Prince Consort," Adolphe Menjou's first all talker for that company.

Publix-RKO Deal Rumored And Again Denied By Both; Former Has Neighborhood Sites

Circuits Are Already Associated In Spots; New York And Chicago Battle Scenes

A RUMOR to the effect that the deal between the Publix Circuit and RKO had been consummated this week for the operation of the RKO houses by Publix and that a further deal was in the offing whereby Radio Pictures would become part of Paramount was denied by both sides of the fence late in the week.

Publix undoubtedly is readying itself for a neighborhood battle in New York and vicinity, where it has had sites for big theatres for more than two years. These houses were secured by Publix while the Paramount Theatre was still being built and are located in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn, another in the Flatbush section, one in the east Bronx and another in the west Bronx. The original plan called for the building of houses that would seat in the neighborhood of 4,000. They will undoubtedly go ahead with their plans now for the building of houses on those sites, now that the sale of Loew-M-G-M to Fox wipes out the understanding that existed that Publix would not invade the Loew territory in the Metropolitan district. Newark, N. J., is another spot in which Publix is looking over available sites.

The announcement that Fox is going to invade Chicago with a 5,000-seat house will probably bring reprisals in New York neighborhoods where Publix will build to oppose Loew-Fox houses.

In denying that a deal had been closed with RKO it was pointed out that the Publix Corp. was already interested in several spots with the Keith organization, notably in the south and in Buffalo, as well as where they are operating with Mike Shea, with Keith holding an interest. In a number of houses in Florida, Georgia, Tennessee and Oklahoma acts booked through the RKO offices play the Publix houses.

Pickford, Fairbanks To Co-Star In Talkie

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, March 14.—The much rumored production co-starring Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks is now slated to be their next picture. While details have not been given, Fairbanks admitted the plan this week. Sam Taylor, who has directed most of the Pickford recent productions, will direct it. Sets will be designed by William Cameron Menzies. It is also established that the joint Pickford-Fairbanks vehicle will contain dalogue.

3 L. A. Houses Show Percentages Of 200 Or Over

"Hearts In Dixie" Leads With 250; "Broadway Melody" Best Gross

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 14.—Nearly all Los Angeles houses enjoyed splendid business last week with three of them running to a percentage of 200 or over. In the line of percentages United Artists Theatre lead with the first's week's showing of "Hearts In Dixie," which registered 250, a jump of 150 over the returns from the picture of the previous week. The gross reported was $27,500.

"Broadway Melody" continues its remarkable run at Grauman's Chinese and was the money leader in its sixth week with $33,500, a percentage of 225. "The Carnation Kid was not far behind at the Paramount. In seven days this one registered $32,000 at the box-office for a percentage of 115. It was accompanied by shorts, Paramount News and a Publix unit presentation.

"Desert Nights" in seven days at Loew's State played to a gross of $31,000 for a percentage of 125. It was aided by a Fanchon and Marco presentation, shorts and Movietone News.

"Abie's Irish Rose" rang up the good total of $23,000 in its first week at the Criterion for a percentage of 200, but it was strongly supported by a splendid presentation. One of the disappointments of the week was "Queen of the Night Clubs" at the Warner, which in the first seven days of a two weeks' run played only to $21,000, or a percentage of 70.

"The Divine Lady" in the last four days of its sixth week at the Carthay Circle registered $7,000, or 75 per cent.

Paramount Signs Sprunck For Photographic Effects

Paul G. Sprunck has been added to the staff at the Paramount Long Island studio in charge of photographic effects. The new technical expert has been producing unusual effects ever since he graduated from the art department of the University of Southern California fifteen years ago.

Sprunck goes to the Paramount studio after a six months' tour of the studios in Germany, England and France, where he says he picked up new developments and technique.

Russia Making Big Strides In Film Production

By HEINRICH FRAENKEL
(Berlin Correspondent, Motion Picture News)

Berlin, March 1.– The remarkable bid of the Soviets for screen mastery of the European countries constitutes the most important development in recent film history in this part of the world. The quality of some recent Russian productions is simply astounding and the influence of modern Russian production methods on film production generally, especially in Germany, can hardly be exaggerated. The Russian film industry is increasing so vastly that even from the point of view of size it is coming into the front rank by leaps and bounds.

There are about a half dozen different production units, all of them backed and controlled by the Soviets. An idea of the size of these units may be gathered from the fact that Sowkino alone owns several studios in Moscow and this one unit is to produce 86 full length features this year, as against 53 last year. Altogether the Russian production of full length features this year should well exceed 200, apart from an enormous number of short educationals, which are widely used in schools.

As many as 85,000 people are now constantly engaged in the Russian film industry and this number will doubtless be increased to over 100,000 before the year ends.

U. A. Sends Company South To Produce "Evangeline"

United Artists has sent a company, headed by Edwin Carewe, to Lafayette, La., to make a motion picture based on the story of "Evangeline," the screen version of which was written by Finis Fox. The decision to film the story in the actual Evangeline country was prompted by an editorial in the Times-Picayune, New Orleans newspaper, which insisted that the picture could not be properly made elsewhere. Dolores Costello is to play the part of Evangeline.

Quebec Theatre Owners To Hold Annual Meeting May 1

The annual meeting of the Theatre Owners Association of the Province of Quebec will be held at Montreal on May 1, this being the end of the first 12 months of the organization. A lively convention is expected because of heavy expenditures for the battle with the Quebec Government over the juvenile law.

New Jersey Executives Tendered Annual Dinner

Employees of the New Jersey Theatrical Enterprises tendered their second annual testimonial dinner to the chief executives of the organization at the Plaza Hotel in Jersey City, February 25. Some 300 attended. The executives are Maurice Kutisker, president; Robert Schoen, vice-president; Mathew Katinsky, treasurer, and M. H. Kleban, secretary.

Pathe Planning Sound Studio On Coast

IN anticipation of a heavy production schedule soon to start for the coming season, Pathe is planning to spend $300,000 on studio improvements at Culver City. There is to be a large sound studio housing three separate sound-proof stages or chambers, making it possible for three companies to work on the stage simultaneously. With this structure completed the Pathe studio will have a total of eight large, modern stages.

New Corporations Take Big Jump In N. Y. During Week

Companies incorporated with the department of state during the past week to engage in the motion picture business in its various branches include the following: World Talking Pictures Corporation, $50,000, Marcus Hermelin, Raymond Feiden, Belle Jaffe, New York City; J. Alexander Leggett Company, Inc., capitalization not stated, Alice Alexander, B. Cheiker, New York City; Edward Siegfried, Brooklyn; C. A. Leonard, Inc., capitalization not stated, C. A. Leonard, Chester Erskin, William J. Rapp, New York City; Prudential Distributors, Inc., $20,000, Jane E. Cross, Alvin H. Minkoff, Brooklyn; Helen M. Hart, Jersey City, N. J.

Rockaway Theatres Corporation, $20,000, Etta Feinberg, New York; Robert J. Bloomgarden, Minnie R. Rose, Brooklyn; 752 Melrose Avenue Amusement Corporation $10,000, Harry Swartz, Alan R. Rosenberg, Morris Slachfer, New York City; Engl Products Corporation, capitalization not stated, William Fox, Saul E. Rogers, Felix A. Jenkins, New York City; Radiotone Pictures Corporation, capitalization not stated, Michael Hoffman, Francis C. Reed, Roy C. MacPherson, New York City; Major Laboratories, Inc., capitalization not stated, Bernard Kommel, Tessie Schander, Nathan M. Hess, New York City.

Directors Get Credit Only If Contract Terms Are Kept

First National has signed William A. Seiter to a two-year directorial contract. He is now completing Corinne Griffith's Vitaphone picture, "Prisoners." In this contract as in those of other directors recently signed, is the following stipulation: "Provided that you fully and completely keep, and observe all the terms, covenants and conditions to be kept, performed and observed by you hereunder, we agree to give you credit on the screen in connection with said photoplay."

Warners Doubling Singing For Players In Features

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 11. Warner Brothers are successfully doubling singing for players in their musical films. The latest song doubling was done last week when Newton Withers, brother of Grant Withers, sang several numbers for the latter for his lead in "The Time, the Place and the Girl."

"Grandeur Film" Fox Designation For Double Width

"Grandeur" film, a new development of Fox-Case, which is double the width of standard negative and projects on a screen almost double the average size, will be introduced with the release of the Fox Movietone Follies. M-G-M and Paramount have used double width projection in the past, but this required a special lens on projection machines. The extra width is being used on special revue sequences in the "Follies," particularly with those featuring ensemble numbers.

Fox has determined to make the "Follies" a love story instead of the series of specialties, revues, back-outs and sketches originally planned. As a result, a romantic tale has been written by Harlan Thompson connecting up the scenes shot for the "Follies" and these added scenes will be made during the next three weeks, which will wind up all production on the feature.

Right now it looks as though it is to be a race to Broadway on the part of Fox and Paramount. The former with "Fox Follies" and the latter with their production of "Cocoanuts," a musical with the Marx Brothers in their original roles.

Over 5,000 Picture Houses Are Reported In Germany

By HEINRICH FRAENKEL
(Berlin Correspondent, Moving Picture News)

Berlin, March 4.—The very reliable figures of the 1929 L. B. B. "Reichskandadressbuch" are just to hand, revealing the fact that the number of German picture houses has passed the 5000 mark. The exact figure, at the beginning of this year was 5013, as against 4460 one year and 4263 two years before.

In spite of this considerable recent building activity, business has never been as bad as now, at this time of the year.

In many theatres, during the last weeks, business has been poorer than even in the worst summer months, so much so that, in many cases, the authorities had to relieve taxation, in order to avoid the immediate breakdown of many a business.

New Montana Division For Fox-West Coast Theatres

Harold B. Franklin, president of Fox-West Coast Theatres, has created a sixth division of the circuit to be known as the Montana Division. Will Steege has been named division manager with headquarters in Great Falls. He has been serving as manager of Fox-West Coast Theatres in Great Falls. New theatres are planned for Billings, Great Falls and Butte.

Hammons In Hollywood

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., has left for Los Angeles. He will confer with E. H. Allen, manager of the Educational Studios, and Jack White, director-in-chief, regarding production plans and schedules for the 1929-30 season. Mr. Hammons expects to be back in New York City within two weeks.

Motion Picture News Weekly Box Office Check-Up

And Showmen's Ad. Tips

"Abie's Irish Rose" (Par. T.)

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Mixed weather, Midtown Theatre, (1600), 7 days, 50c-75c, Vita. shorts.

Percentage Rating—71%.

CANTON, O.—Moderate and rainy weather, Strand Theatre, (750), 7 days, 25c-40c, Pathe Sound News, Eddie Cantor in "That Party in Person."

Percentage Rating—170%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Played on name alone, billing as Ann Nichols' spectacular stage success now brought to the talking screen. The cast was mentioned incidentally and word of mouth advertising played an important part in a successful week. Teamed well with Eddie Cantor's "That Party in Person." Audience appeal: all ages and both sexes, with many "repeats."—Joe Calla, Manager Strand Theatre, Canton, O.

"Adoration" (F.N.)

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Fair weather, Lyric Theatre, (1,238), 7 days, 15c-25c-45c, "Across the Atlantic in the Graf Zeppelin," Fox M. News, Vita. shorts.

Percentage Rating—175%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Exploitation centered upon Billie Dove and the romantic appeal of the film. "Across the Atlantic in the Graf Zeppelin," which was run with the feature, was ballyhood equally. Appeals to all ages and classes.—E. C. McKibbon, Manager Lyric Theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine" (M-G-M T.)

ALBANY, N. Y.—Variable weather, Leland Theatre, (1,400), 6 days, 35c, Gus Edwards Revue (Metro), 1 Vita Act, Fox M. News.

Percentage Rating—175%.

BOSTON, MASS.—Fair weather, Loew's State Theatre, (3,700), 7 days, 40c-75c, Fox News, Movietone acts, stage show.

Percentage Rating—100%.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Cold weather, Piccadilly Theatre (2259), 7 days, 25c35c-60c, "Ko-Ko Beats Time," George Dewey Washington (Metro T.), "Lonely Lapland," Selected News, organ.

Percentage Rating—90%.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—Weather: rain, snow, cold. Capitol Theatre, (4,620), 7 days, 35c-50c-75c, "Navajo" Revue. Held over for second week.

Percentage Rating—112½%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—This picture needed little advertising out of the ordinary on my part on account of the success of the stage play. I did call attention to the fact that the same picture was being offered to Albany audiences at 35c as compared to three times that price in New York City. I also featured Lionel Barrymore.—Alec Sayles, Manager Leland Theatre, Albany, N. Y.

Play up as William Haines' first sound picture and also that it follows the stage play of the name. Lionel Barrymore adds another star to mention. General appeal for all ages.—Joseph Brennan, Manager Loew's State, Boston, Mass.

Hook-up with locksmith establishments and safe and strong-box store windows went well with this film. Plenty of attention was raised also by a department store window display of guns and other weapons used in actual crimes and borrowed from the police department. Such legends as "Even Jimmy Valentine couldn't pick these locks," hung over the lock and safe displays and stirred up the public. Sidelines were hook-ups with 10c stores on the theme song and with bookstores on the novel. Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—Herbert Chatkin, Manager, Piccadilly Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

"Air Legion" (RKO)

For Your Greater Convenience

WITH this issue, Motion Picture News presents The Weekly Box Office Check-Up in a new form—for the greater convenience of exhibitor readers.

"Showmen's Ad. Tips" are now published along with box-office percentage reports, so that the exhibitor may have all material relating to the box-office history of a picture at a glance.

This change has been made at the request of a number of our readers, who point out that this form of publication will enable them to clip data of specific pictures they have booked, file it, and have it ready for immediate use when the time comes. Such use was not possible in the form in which the Check-Up Reports have been hitherto printed.

The Box-Office Check-Up has proved to be an instantaneous success, as hundreds of communications from exhibitor readers testify.

Many Percentages Below Normal

Advertised this as the main dish on a Komedy Karnival bill. Also emphasized Dane and Arthur as the fun makers. Appeal is strong for all houses and all ages. Full of good fun.—Geo. Diamond, Manager State Theatre, Cleveland, O.

Percentage Rating—90%.

TAMPA, FLA.—Fair weather, Victory Theatre (1,600), 7 days, 25c-50c-60c, Vita. Acts, Fox M. News.

Percentage Rating—50%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—In connection with a week's run of "The Carnation Kid" at the Mark Ritz, I found it very easy to secure a good tie-up with the florists in the city and gave away about 2,700 carnations during the week, these being furnished free by the florists. I also used a large basket of carnations in the lobby and called attention to the fact that these were furnished by one of the city's leading florists. In my newspaper advertising I strongly featured the fact that it was a talking picture.—Charles Smacowitz, Manager, Mark Ritz Theatre, Albany, N. Y.

Exploit the star and the fact that it's his first talkie. Play up the fact it is a crook play with strong comedy vein. Audience appeal: all classes and ages.—George B. Peck, Manager, Victory Theatre, Tampa, Fla.

Exploit the talking sequences and use the name of Douglas MacLean as Chicago's "bad boy." Audience appeal: all classes and ages.—J. B. McFaul, Manager, Buffalo Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.

Feature combination of mystery and comedy. Audience appeal: all ages and classes, particularly for young folks.—H. S. Amos, Manager.

A Correction

In the Box Office Check-up section of Motion Picture News, March 9 issue, it was erroneously stated under head of "The Dummy," Metropolitan theatre, Boston, that the feature was accompanied by "The Wife's Relations" (Educational comedy). This should have read: "The Bride's Relations" (Educational); under head of "The Godless Girl," Hippodrome, Cleveland, "The Old Barn" is credited to Pathe instead of Educational, and under head of "In Old Arizona," "The Lion's Roar" is also credited to Pathe instead of Educational.

"Iron Mask" (United Art. T.)

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—Weather: Rain, snow, cold. Rivoli Theatre, (2,200), 7 days, 35c-50c-75c-85c-$1. Selected news. Paramount talking short. Vocal soloist. (2nd week).

Percentage Rating—150½%.

"The Jazz Age" (RKO)

ROCHESTER, N. Y. — Cold weather, Keith's Palace Theatre, (2,800), 4 days, 25c-35c-60c, Pathe News, 6 acts.

Percentage Rating—95%.

NEWPORT NEWS, VA. — Fair weather, Rialto Theatre (853), 3 days, 25c-35c, Para. News.

Percentage Rating—90%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—We let the youth angle entirely alone in this film and did well just the same. We played up the city and political adventure angles and also exploited the name of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., for the young people. We kept away from the jazz idea. Audience appeal: all classes and ages, particularly the younger element.—E. L. Lake, Manager Keith's Palace Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

Play up the fact that this is a picture of modern life among the younger generation, truthfully presented. Appeals mainly to adults.—E. T. Crall, Manager Rialto Theatre, Newport News, Va.

The usual sex stuff with the college angle. Not for children.—L. J. Shields, Manager Ritz Theatre, Macon, Ga.

"Jazz Singer" (Warn. T.)

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.—Fair and warm weather, Empire Theatre, (1,550), 7 days, 50c, Vita. shorts, Fox M. News.

Percentage Rating—75%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Exploit the story, and the acting and the fact that it is all-talkie. The litigation affair here proved a big drawback. Remarkable how unknown Jolson can be in a town this size.

Exploitation Hints On All Films

Audience appeal: general.—Al Fourmet, Manager, Empire Theatre, San Antonio, Tex.

"Lady Of Pavements" (United Artists T.)

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Mixed weather, Loew's State Theatre, (3,300), 7 days, 25c-65c, Phil Spitalny and Band, Odette Myrtle in Movietone reel, orchestra, organ.

Percentage Rating—99%

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Fair weather, State Theatre, (2,300), 7 days, 25c-35c-60c, Fox M. News, Selected News, stage show.

Percentage Rating—53¾%.

RICHMOND, VA.—Fair weather, Colonial Theatre, (1,800), 6 days, Hodge Podge, comedy, cartoon, Vitaphone short.

Percentage Rating—100%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—The exploitation featured the strong love theme, the stars of the film and the talking and sound effects. Audience appeal: adults.—H. B. Lyon, Manager, State Theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.

Singing of Lupe Velez, great settings; fine acting of Wm. Boyd, Jetta Goudal and Miss Velez. Audience appeal: all classes from high school age up.—Joel Levy, Manager, Colonial Theatre, Richmond, Va.

"Last Warning" (Univ. T.)

BOSTON, MASS.—Fair weather, Keith-Albee Boston Theatre, (1,800), 7 days, 25c-75c, Pathe News, 5 acts vaude.

Percentage Rating—90%.

TOLEDO, O.—Weather: rain, snow and gales, State Theatre, (2,000), 7 days, 15c-30c, 25c-50c, Gertrude Lawrence in sound reel, Oswald sound cartoon (U), Fox News.

Percentage Rating 95½%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Suggests stressing the mystery angle and the surprise ending. Also first all-talking mystery of screen. Appeal, for all ages and classes. —J. Fitzgerald, Manager, Keith-Albee Theatre, Boston, Mass.

Used a teaser campaign, including billboards shrieking "Gamblers, this is the last warning!", and "Speeders, this is the last warning!", to good effect in connection with the newspaper advertising. Referring to the fact that the film is based on the stage play will be of help if the stage play has been shown in your city.—Harold F. Wendt, Publicity Manager, State Theatre, Toledo, O.

"Let's Make Whoopee" (Fox)

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Cold weather, Rochester Theatre, (4,000), 7 days, 25c-35c-60c, "Sharp Tools," Fox News, 6 acts vaude.

Percentage Rating—85%.

"The Letter" (Par. T.)

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—Weather: rain, cold. Criterion Theatre, (861), 2 days, 2 shows a day, 3 Sat. and Sun., $1-$2. Opened Thursday night, invited audience. With five shows on Friday and Saturday, did a turnaway business. Para. Talking shorts.

Percentage Rating—136 9/10%.

"Little Wildcat" (Warn. T.)

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Cloudy and rainy weather, Tudor Theatre, (1,000), 7 days, 25c-40c, Fox News, Vita. acts.

Percentage Rating—95%.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Weather: rain and wind, Rivoli Theatre, (1,981), 6 days, 25c-50c, "Ask Dad" (Educ. T.), Sportlight (Pathe), Janet Adair, Born and Lawrence, Fox M. and Pathe News.

Percentage Rating—65%.

Exploit the talking picture angle—that the story by Gene Wright tells of sisters crazy about the same man and that it sparkles with laughs and surprises. Play up the five important players: Audrey Ferris, Doris Dawson, James Murray, Robert Edeson and George Fawcett. Ask the question: "Which Do Men Love?" The little wildcat type or the sweet Cinderella?" Use the Vitaphone signature. Audience appeal: has plenty for all classes. Will appeal especially to those who like aviation stories, not about the war.—Frank Price, Jr., Manager, Rivoli Theatre, Baltimore, Md.

"Lonesome" (Univ. T.)

WICHITA, KANS.—Fair weather, Uptown Theatre, (1,993), 3 days, 25c-40c, comedy, talkie cartoon, Kinograms.

Percentage Rating—46%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Coney Island, Glenn Tryon and a corking good picture appealing to all classes of persons are this picture's best bets. "Alone in a crowd" is a good slogan. Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—Arthur Phillips, Manager, Uptown Theatre, Wichita, Kans.

"Lone Wolf's Daughter" (Columbia T.)

BOSTON, MASS.—Fair weather, Modern-Beacon Theatre, (1,800), 7 days, 25c-75c, Pathe News, "Broadway Fever."

Percentage Rating—115%.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Fair weather, Pantages Theatre, (1,575), 7 days, 25c-50c-75c, Pathe Sound News, 5 acts vaude.

Percentage Rating—80%.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—Weather: rain, snow, cold. Roxy Theatre, (6,205), 7 days, 50c-75c-$1-$1.50. Selected and Fox Movietone News. Roxy stage show of three units.

Percentage Rating—82 1/5%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—The exploitation featured Bert Lytell and the mystery features of the film. Adult appeal.—E. C. Bostick, Manager, Pantages Theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.

"Love And Learn" (Par.)

SPRINGFIELD, O.—Mild weather, Regent Theatre, (1,500), 10c-15c-25c-30c-50c, "King Harold," M-G-M News, 5 acts vaude.

Percentage Rating—60%.

"Love In The Desert" (RKO)

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.—Clear and rainy weather, Auditorium Theatre (1,600), 3 days, 50c-75c, "Newlyweds" comedy (U), Fox M. act, Pathe News, 4 acts RKO vaude.

Percentage Rating—50%.

"Loves Of Casanova" (M-G-M)

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.—Fair and warm weather, Princess Theatre, (1,300), 3 days, 25c-35c, comedy, Int'l News.

Percentage Rating—90%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Exploit the beauty and massiveness of the production. Also the costume and color angle. Drew well for a foreign film. Audience appeal general, to the imaginative.—J. C. MeSween, Manager, Princess Theatre, San Antonio, Tex.

"Lucky Boy" (T-S T.)

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Mixed weather, Missouri Theatre, (3,558), 7 days, 25c-75c, Eddie Peabody in "Country Club Blues," Selected News, orchestra, organ.

Percentage Rating—88%.

DALLAS, TEX.—Fair weather, Capitol Theatre, (1,064), 7 days, 15c-25c-35c, "Collegians," Oswald cartoon and Int'l News (U).

Percentage Rating 90%.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Stormy weather, Loew's State, (3,800), 7 days, 15c-50c, M-G-M and Fox M. News.

Percentage Rating—90%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—George Jessel is the feature publicity angle of this picture, and was advertised as the star of the New York stage production, "The Jazz Singer." The fact that he sings five songs was also stressed and an electrola playing the songs which Jessel sang in the picture was kept in the lobby of the theatre during the showing of this film. It appeals to all classes.—Ray J. Stinnett, Manager, Capitol Theatre, Dallas, Tex.

Exploit the vocal capabilities of Georgie Jessel and the fact that he was the original "Jazz Singer" of stage fame. For al classes of adults.—E. J. McCarthy, Manager, Loew's State, Providence, R. I.

"Marriage Contract" (T-S T.)

WICHITA, KANS.—Exeellent weather, Miller Theatre, (1,981), 3 days, 25c-50c, Int'l News, orchestra.

Percentage Rating—97%.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Mild and cold weather, Empire Theatre, (1,700), 25c-30c, 40c-50c, comedy, 2 M. acts, Int'l News, Fox M. News.

Percentage Rating—60%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Exploit the "home as sacred" in contrast to the lightness with which marriage is held by the modern generation. Companionate marriage is being soundly denounced and that fact is also another good angle. Patsy Ruth Miller is good for a little play, but the idea of the picture is the best bet. Audience appeal: college kids and home-loving adults.—S. Chambers, Manager, Miller Theatre, Wichita, Kans.

Play up the companionate marriage angle. A good picture for girls over 16 years. Audience appeal: flapper type. Absolutely not for children.—Albert P. Kaufman, Manager, Empire Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y.

"Marquis Preferred" (Par.)

DALLAS, TEX.—Fair weather, Old Mill Theatre, (1,400), 7 days, 20c-25c-35c, Roach comedy (Metro), Vita. act, Selected News.

Percentage Rating—90%.

WICHITA, KANS.—Orpheum Theatre, (1,700), 3 days, 25c-40c, M-G-M News, Loie Bridge.

Percentage Rating—105%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Exploited Adolphe Menjou. Billed as a smart romance of empty purses and full hearts—of a prince in search of a wife. All classes are to be sought as audience.—A. R. Lever, Manager, Old Mill Theatre, Dallas, Tex.

Exploit Menjou as the proverbial nobleman who refuses his riches contained by marriage in order to go to work for the girl he loves. Audience appeal: adults and Menjou fans.—H. E. Jameyson, Publicity Director, Orpheum Theatre, Wichita, Kans.

"Mother Knows Best" (Fox. T.)

TROY, N. Y.—Variable weather, Troy Theatre, (2,000), 3 days, 30c-50c, Fox M. News, "Early to Bed," 1 Vita. act.

Percentage Rating—90%.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Mixed weather, Fox Theatre, (5,200), 7 days, 25c-65c, Fox M. News, Master of Ceremonies, "Dance of the Hours" ballet, overture, "Behind the Front With Sally," stage show.

Percentage Rating—103%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—In advertising this picture, I featured the author, Edna Ferber, even ahead of the star, Madge Bellamy. I figure that when a theatre manager gets a picture made from one of the books classed as a "best seller" that he has a sure fire bet in featuring the author, perhaps even ahead of the star of the picture.—Walter Roberts, Manager, Troy Theatre, Troy, N. Y.

"My Man" (Warners T.)

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Fair and warm weather, Loew's Palace Theatre, (2,200), 6 days, 10c-25c-50c, Jan Garber and His Orchestra (Metro M.), Fox M. News.

Percentage Rating—125%.

WICHITA, KANS.—Fair weather, Palace Theatre, (1,487), 35c-50c, "Sex Life of Man" song for all its worth in exploit-

Percentage Rating—103%.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—Weather, rain, snow, cold. Strand Theatre, (2,900), 7 days, 35c-50c-65c-75c, Selected and Fox M. News. Vita. shorts. Held over for second week.

Percentage Rating—117 1/10%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Play up the "My Man" song for all it's worth in exploiting the singing-talking film.—Ernest Emerling, City Manager Loew's Palace Theatre, Memphis, Tenn.

Exploit Fanny Brice and her inimitable manner of song and monologue presentation. Also the dramatic story of a woman who found, lost and then found her man again. Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—H. E. Jameyson, Publicity Director, Palace Theatre, Wichita, Kans.

"Napoleon's Barber" And "Diplomats" (Fox T.)

BALTIMORE, MD.—Rainy and stormy weather, New Theatre, "Whirls and Girls" (Educ. T.), Robert Benchley in "Lesson No. 1" (Fox T.), Fox M. News, Fox Silent News.

Percentage Rating—20%.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—Variable and mild weather, New Theatre, "Whirls and 25c-35c-60c, Pathe News, RKO vaude. acts and style show.

Percentage Rating 100%.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Cold and clear weather, Wisconsin Theatre, (2,902), 7 days, 25c-75c, Fox News, The Singer Midgets.

Percentage Rating—130%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Used Movietone shorts, "Napoleon's Barber" and "The Diplomats," because of strong vaude attractions. Good for all ages as regular shorts with feature. Play up the excellence of the dialogue in the first, and the stars, Clark and McCullough, in the second.—Vernon Feaver, Manager, Ritz Theatre, Birmingham, Ala.

Stress as an important fact that "Napoleon's Barber" is 100% talking. Exploit with a strong statement such as the fate of France was in a barber's hands. Then bring out the fact that Napoleon parried words as he did swords but leave the end in suspense. Tell them that George Bernard Shaw called it the best short play in the English language. Audience appeal: to all who like their historical facts presented in an attractive manner and to those who like good drama. Play up Clark and McCullough heavily in advertising "The Diplomats," and bill them as the screen's funniest talking comedians, exploiting the film as 100% talking filled with laughs about two stowaways who save a king his throne in a small Balkan kingdom in a hilarious manner. Audience appeal: this will appeal to every man, woman and child. It is decidedly one of the funniest things yet done in talkies.—William E. Stumpf, Manager, New Theatre, Baltimore, Md.

Hints That Will Sell Your Features

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Exploit Lois Wilson and the idea that the girl DIDN'T want alimony, plus the mother chasing the boys is the best box-office angle, although the latter is not a wholesome angle. Audience appeal: really little appeal to any class except those who like Lois Wilson.—S. Chambers, Manager, Orpheum Theatre, Wichita, Kans.

Exploit the romance of a girl who planned to marry for money and married, instead, for love. Drama of love in the social world. Audience appeal: high school age and up.—Al Anders, Manager, Bijou Theatre, Springfield, Mass.

Worth exploiting as a true love picture. Lois Wilson's name. Audience appeal: not for children.—L. J. Shields, Manager, Ritz Theatre, Macon, Ga.

"Office Scandal" (Pathe T.)

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—The drawing power of Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel should be exploited in the ad spreads. The strong love element also may be stressed. Audience appeal: to adults of all ages and classes.—Sol Braunig, Manager, Majestic Theatre, Providence, R. I.

Whenever I get a picture where there are two such stars a Nagel and Costello, I play the two strong in all newspapers and exploitation, and the scheme has always worked out successfully. If one is a good drawing card, then two should be just double as good.—Walter Roberts, Manager, Troy Theatre, Troy, N. Y.

Exploit Paris underworld. The intense drama and the question of what sin committed by a woman is so great that it constiutes a redeeming sin. Play up a great love. Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—Harry Culbert, Manager, Liberty Theatre, Spokane, Wash.

Featured Conrad Nagel and Dolores Costello as the favorite talking stars of filmdom. The underworld angle was also featured. Audience appeal: all classes and ages.—Carl A. Wolever, Manager, Melba Theatre, Dallas, Tex.

State the previous successes of Costello and Nagel team, and exploit them. Supporting cast should also be played up. Advertising comes down heavy on the Paris-Apache background, and the love story should be played up. For the adult audience.—State Theatre, Schenectady, N. Y.

DESMOINES, IA.—Weather: cold and slush, Des Moines Theatre (1,700), 7 days, 25c-50c, Fox M. News, Vita. acts, orchestra.

Percentage Rating—135%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Exploited the battle with the frozen north; mentioned Chilkoot Pass, the White Horse Rapids and the other big scenes in list form. The star, Dolores Del Rio, was the big factor in the advertising. Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—Ray Brown, Manager, Strand Theatre, Akron, O.

Pioneer adventure, big scenes exploited as well as the cast. The picture has general appeal, is something the youngsters may see and all the family. —Lionel Wasson, Manager, Des Moines Theatre, Des Moines, Ia.

The romance and the thrills of Klondike days have not lost their old appeal and they should be exploited. Emphasize also the star cast and the fact that this is a picturization of a Robert W. Service novel. Audience appeal: Both young and old enjoy this picture.—Ray Swan, Manager, Strand Theatre, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

"Tropic Madness" (RKO)

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Mild and cold weather, B. F. Keith's Theatre, (2,600), 4 days, 30c-50c, Fables, Topics and News (Pathe), 6 acts RKO vaude.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Cold weather, Keith's Palace Theatre, (2,800), 4 days, 25c-60c, Pathe News, 6 acts vaude.

Percentage Rating—95%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—The stars, O'Brien and Moran, were the best exploitation angles and was successful here. Audience appeal: high school age up.—George Steele, Manager, Trianon Theatre, Birmingham, Ala.

We exploited George O'Brien and Lois Moran in this film, since both have local followings. The adventure angle and the powerful anticlimaxes should be stressed. Strong emphasis on the woman spy or adventuress draws well. Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—E. L. Lake, Manager, Keith's Palace Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

"Upland Rider" (F.N.)

WICHITA, KANS.—Fair weather, Kansas Theatre, (800), 3 days, 20c, comedy and Para. News.

Percentge Rating—84 1/10%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Exploit the star and the fact that this is his first talkie. The many songs and the tuneful theme melody. Audience appeal: all audiences and classes.—A. N. Roy, Manager, Tampa Theatre, Tampa, Fla.

Play up Barthelmess in his first talking and singing role along with another beauty, Betty Compson. Use the theme song aplenty. Go strong on billing. Audience appeal: for all classes and ages.—William H. Raynor, Manager, Lafayette Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.

Exploiting Barthelmess and the prison scenes put it over big despite terrible weather. — Monte Salmon, Manager, Rialto Theatre, Macon, Ga.

The women go crazy over this one, our men patrons weren't so excited. Strong love interest spells overflow for the matinees.—Harry Gould, Manager, Palace Theatre, Fort Worth, Tex.

Play up Richard Barthelmess and that he talks and sings in your advertising. —John F. Kumler, Manager, Pantheon Theatre, Toledo, O.

Stress Barthelmess' singing. "Hear his golden voice" is a good catch line. Barthelmess' name is also a good selling point. Theme song is a real hit, and can be played up. Audience appeal: old and young, all classes.—Manager, Metropolitan Theatre, Houston, Tex.

"Wedding March" (Par.)

TAMPA, FLA.—Fair weather, Strand Theatre, (800), 3 days, 15c-35c-40c, Int'l News.

Percentage Rating—100%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Exploit the director and the star. Play up the spectacular feature, the cost and the exceptional musical score. Audience appeal: adult.—Edwin Adler, Manager, Strand Theatre, Tampa, Fla.

"White Shadows" (M-G-M)

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—Bad weather, Strand Theatre, (1,000), 7 days, 25c-35c-50c, Fox M. News, Vita. vaude.

Percentage Rating—120%.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—Appeal is based on the expedition of the Director, Van Dyke, and his crew, with a handful of actors, to the actual South Sea locations where the scenes were shot with a genuine background and a native cast. No appreciable star appeal. Meant to attract the so-called "thinking class," also from a travelogue standpoint. Good for the family audiences, however.—Strand Theatre, Schenectady, N. Y.

"White Sister" (M-G-M)

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—Variable and mild weather, Empire Theatre, (1,000), 6 days, 25c-40c-50c, "The Ol' Gray Hoss," M-G-M News.

Broadway Show Reviews

By Fred Schader

Dynamic Lupe Makes Big Hit On Broadway

Star In Person Together With "Lady Of The Pavements" At The Rivoli To Big Biz

Lupe Velez hit Broadway last week. She hit it with a bang that resounded up and down the lane on her first day in the box office to the tune of $9,300. Of course, combined with Lupe's personal appearance, there is the D. W. Griffith production "Lady of the Pavements," in which she is featured.

All the show that the Rialto has is a selected news weekly with an M-G-M shot, one from Kinograms, three from the Fashion Reviews, showing Loretta Young, Dorothy Appleby and Ethlyn Clair in color and then a Fox silent shot. There is 10 minutes in all devoted here.

Whoopee Lupe!

Then comes Lupe! She is accompanied by Frank Yaconelli, the accordion player, who is also in the picture. Lupe opens with "Who Buy My Violets," which was originally popularized by Raquel Meller, and Lupe puts it over with the same sort of a kick, working the audience from a runway and distributing violets to those in the front rows and finally throwing the flower basket into the audience. The women in front simply go wild about her and almost fight for the flowers. Then she sings "The Song of Songs," which is the theme song of the "Lady of the Pavements," and which proves to the audience that she sings the numbers on the screen. Finally she hits into a jazz number "Happy Days" for a whoopee finish to her offering. Yaconelli accompanies her in all of her numbers, playing very well, indeed, and likewise acts as the foil for her comedy. Some of this is a little rough and Lupe should tone it down, at least for Broadway.

Good Publicity

Her publicity on coming into town was great and to follow it up Ben Pollock, the orchestra leader at the Park Central Grill threw a party for the star and the press on Sunday afternoon which proved to be a real success. Lupe had to leave early though because she is doing five frolics a day to help boost the Rialto receipts. In a year this girl will be a $5,000 a week bet for personal appearances and she will draw more than twice that at the b. o.

Rothafel Stages Wonderful Program For Second Anniversary At The Roxy

S. L. ROTHAFEL certainly did himself proud for the Second Anniversary Program at the Roxy Theatre. He staged a bill that will be remembered through the year. With a strong talking feature in "Speakeasy" which was given a whale of an advertising campaign before coming in, the stage show was built up in successive steps so that it resembled as big a revue as one can get anywhere on Broadway for $6.60 admission.

Opening the program the Roxy Organ played a series of popular airs. This was followed by a most elaborate offering in "Processional To The Light" in which the entire personnel of the house was utilized, the ensemble, ballet corps, the Roxyettes, and the orchestra. In a gorgeous setting a figure stands, on a high platform up-stage, while the processional starts from atop of the minarets at each side of the stage down the winding stairs to the stage. The ensemble clad entirely in white, the ballet in luminous costumes and the Roxyettes in reds. Then at the finish with the entire stage enveloped in light a switch in the costumes has every person there in white. There were only 12 minutes consumed in presenting the Processional but so elaborate was it that one felt that they had spent an hour looking at a tremendous spectacle.

Immediately following came another stage unit with Patricia Bowman and Leonide Massine entitled "Pas De Dux," a ballet duet that could not have been surpassed even at the Metropolitan Opera. The five minutes that were allotted to the dancers were interspersed with frequent outbursts of applause.

"The Sewing Kit" was another effective stage unit and here again were the ballet corps and the Roxyettes utilized. The ballet members emerge from a huge representation of a sewing basket, in which at the opening picture they represent the spools of thread, the thimbles, shears and tape measures. Each individual group contributes a dance specialty, and again so much passes before the eyes that one is surprised when only 11 minutes have elapsed.

The next 14 minutes are devoted to the Magazine and Fox Movietone News, with Hoover and Coolidge getting the strongest play. Included in Movietone were views of the Roxy stage and house crews. The training of the ballet and the Roxyettes, the inspection of the ushers, the hospital, restaurant and other features of the house were shown, and finally Roxy spoke from the screen, thanking the public for making the house the greatest institution of the motion picture world.

Then came the spectacle wallop of the bill entitled "Hello Everybody," Roxy's weekly greeting over the air to the radio fans. The set was an exact replica of the huge lobby of the theatre.

"Canary Murder" A Strong Talkie Surrounded By A Spotty Program

"THE CANARY MURDER CASE" an especially strong talking feature proved the life saver of a rather spotty program at the Paramount. Had it not been for the picture the bill would have been classed as exceedingly weak. The business, however, on the week looked strong enough to have the program holdover for there was a tremendous public interest in the feature production due to the tremendous popularity that the book had.

Rubinoff and the Paramount orchestra offered a selection of Italian melodies as an overture. It was accorded a round of applause at its conclusion. Then there was a straight Paramount News weekly, the combined two running fifteen minutes.

Mrs. Jesse Crawford presided at the organ in the absence of her husband who is on a vacation in Florida and she worked out a rather amusing series of songs which the audience is informed via slides that she is sending to Jesse each night. One of them "Lover Come Back To Me" hit the audience. She followed this with "Me And The Man In The Moon." Then a touch of jazz as only she can play the organ. The surprising aspect of Mrs. Crawford's specialty was the fact that she received a greater applause return for her work than has been accorded her husband signally, or the two combined within the last month.

Bobby Agnew, screen star, is the featured member of the C. A. Niggemeyer Publix Unit entitled "Happy-Go-Lucky." Unfortunately Bobby can neither sing or dance to any great extent, at least not sufficiently well enough to get over in a house as big as this one, and the Aubrey Sisters a couple of harmony singers do not measure up to the standard, if these girls ever forget to bring on the two little dolls that they use at the finish of their first number they will do a nose dive that will go right through the floor. Al Norman a novelty dancer walked away with the hit honors.

EXHIBITOR AD TIPS—The star's name is the strongest exploitation angle but this was minimized due to the personal appearance of Anita Stewart. Lewis Stone and Nils Asther also have drawing power. Attracted all but the children.—Ray Jones, Manager Riviera Theatre, Omaha, Neb.

The fact that it is a Greta Garbo film, supported by Nils Asther and Lewis Stone, was the most effective publicity used. Featured as a thrilling love story of the tropics, displaying all of Miss Garbo's allurement. Audience appeal: all classes.—Ernest J. Morrison, Manager Greater Palace Theatre, Dallas, Tex.

Exploit the romantic idea, the tropical passion, the new combination of Garbo and Asther. Both are there. Good picture. Audience appeal: high school age up. Asther is the matinee idol.—Wm. C. O'Hare, Manager Texas Theatre, San Antonio, Tex.

Play heavily on Greta Garbo as the screen's passionate tiger lady—enchanting empress of emotion—savage sex siren—in a picture with Nils Asther and Lewis Stone. Stress as great Garbo romance in which the heroine is starved for love, is caught in the spell of the East where love is untamed. Audience appeal: to all who like a strong three-cornered love drama. To all Garbo fans, particularly to the younger element.—Howard Price Kingsmore, General Manager, Loew's Stanley Theatre, Baltimore, M. D.

Star east exploited in this picture with Greta Garbo to appeal to both sexes and to the variety of ages, while Lewis Stone has a very strong following. Nils Asther is a big draw with the women and the whole cast wins most favorable comment. Audience appeal: general. "Blossoms," stage show, was the prettiest thing Publix has put out this year.—Jess Day, Manager, Capitol Theatre, Des Moines, Ia.

Exploit Greta Garbo's name as the one to be used, and play up the story as an exotic drama. Javanese dances and settings should not be forgotten. Audience appeal: for high school students and older classes. George Mason, Manager, Hippodrome Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.

Greta Garbo's personality should be exploited along with those of Nils Asther and Lewis Stone, all of whom are good box office pulls.—Ernest Emerling, City Manager, Loew's State Theatre, Memphis, Tenn.

This is a satisfactory picture from all standpoints. No exhibitor need fear to stress the splendid acting of the three principels as Greta Garbo, Lewis Stone and Nils Asther have done no better work. Also do not fail to overlook the possibilities in playing up the author, John Colton, who did "Shanghai Gesture" and "Rain." This gives the public an idea of what sort of picture they're going to see. Audience appeal: general; fine for the younger set.—Col. H. E. Long, Manager, Loew's and United Artists State Theatre, Louisville, Ky.

Feature Greta Garbo, also the performance of Lewis Stone as the negleetful husband. Audience appeal: flapper type.—Harry Weiss, Manager, Loew's State Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y.

Greta Garbo, Lewis Stone and the lavish manner in which this picture is produced are the talking points. "A woman whose soul was bared by the heat of the Javanese jungles" is a good catch line. Audience appeal: limited to the Garbo fans and the romantic type of patron. H. E. Jameyson, Publicity Director, Miller Theatre, Wichita, Kans.

Exploit star and great supporting east; also new version of eternal triangle; lavishness of Javanese settings and production. Audience appeal: adults.—Harold S. Evans, Manager, Loew's Theatre, Richmond, Va.

Featured Greta Garbo because of her large following here. Also gave Lewis Stone and Nils Asther attention. Audience appeal: general to all classes.—Charley Raymond, Manager, Loew's State Theatre, St. Louis, Mo.

News and Comment on All Phases of "Sound" Pictures

Cinephone Makes New York Debut In Upper B'way

Reproduces Synchronized Films Of Both RCA And W. E. Recording

The Powers Cinephone sound reproducing system on film and disc made its New York debut at the Olympia Theatre, Broadway and 107th street, on Monday of this week. The feature picture was "The Jazz Singer" with the Vitaphone sound accompaniment projected for the first time on the Cinephone disc attachment.

"The Jazz Singer" was followed by First National's "Naughty Baby," recorded by the Western Electric process, and a Pathe News Reel with sound-on-film recorded by RCA Photophone.

The tone quality and modulation of the sound reproduction was unusually good and both the picture and sound accompaniment were well received by capacity audiences. Cinephone claims some fifty installations throughout the United States, but this is the first time the device has been heard in a New York theatre.

Berg Head Of New World Wide Music Department

S. M. Berg has been named musical supervisor of a newly-created musical department for the synchronization of scores by World Wide Pictures. He will establish a complete bureau to musically interpret future World Wide releases.

Berg resigned from the Sam Fox sound and synchronization department to go with World Wide. He claims to have scored the first motion picture and is also the inventor of the cue sheet. Previous to going with Sam Fox he was abroad for more than six years associated with Keith Prowse, the largest musical publishers in England.

Los Angeles Times Asks Public Opinion On Talkies

Hollywood, March 14.—The Los Angeles Times is now conducting a public forum for opinions on talking pictures. Coupons are being published each Sunday asking whether the general public likes its film with or without dialogue. Results will be published in the annual Preview number of the Times, due about Easter.

Talkie Problems Are Solved, Says Lasky

THE movies have conquered the microphone, is the message brought back from Hollywood by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production of the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, who is back at his New York desk after spending several weeks in the California film capital.

"In an incredibly short time the motion picture producers have solved the mechanical difficulties of making talking films," Mr. Lasky declared. "The pictures I saw before leaving Hollywood have eliminated the amateur staginess which marred the pioneer dialogue films and now combine that swift flow of movement which has always been characteristic of the cinema, with the best qualities of stage technique."

German Sound Film Firm Shows Product In Paris

By L. C. MOEN

(Paris Correspondent, Motion Picture News)

Paris, March 7.—Tobis, the German syndicate which resulted from the fusion of four sound-film companies, has formally invaded the French market. The first trade showing of its product was held on February 26 at the Apollo Theatre, Paris, before an invited audience.

A studio has been acquired at Epinay, a suburb of Paris, and production is scheduled to start within a few weeks. A separate French corporation has been formed for this purpose. Similar moves are on foot in England and Italy, with other European countries to follow, despite the fact that only one German theatre has been actually installed to date.

The process is practically identical with Movietone but has been simplified considerably from a mechanical standpoint, and it claimed that the cost of installation will be remarkably low.

The general impression created by the showing seemed to be that the process was excellent enough, but that with the exception of the final number its use was only mediocre. Having seen "The Jazz Singer," Paris is already commencing to be a bit critical of sound-films.

Hobart Henley Signs To Direct Paramount Feature

Paramount has signed Hobart Henley to direct a picture at the company's studios in Astoria, L. I., but the name of the film has not yet been announced. Henley is a director of wide experience.

Sound Devices Installed In 15 Cities of Canada

23 Houses Now Equipped And Others Will Be Ready Soon

Substantial developments are noted in Canada in the matter of sound installations in theatres from Sherbrooke on the East to Vancouver, B. C., on the Pacific Coast. There are now 15 cities of the Dominion in which there are 23 wired houses all told, and two cities, Ottawa and Winnipeg, Manitoba, each have three wired theatres, with Montreal, Toronto, Windsor and Vancouver two each.

Theatres to introduce sound screens during the week of March 4 included the Capitol at Kingston, Ontario, where Manager E. O. Smithies selected "The Jazz Singer" for his sound start; the Avalon at Ottawa where the attraction was "Four Sons," and the Capitol Theatre at St. Catharines, Ontario, which had been closed for a couple of weeks to allow for remodelling of the house and equipment installation.

Sherbrook, Quebec, is the smallest town in Canada by United Amusements, Limited, Montreal. The population of Sherbrooke is 24,000.

With a few exceptions, all installations in Canada are Western Electric equipment which is controlled in the Dominion by the Northern Electric Company, Limited, Montreal.

Big Newspaper Campaign Planned For "Divine Lady"

First National is planning a big newspaper campaign for "The Divine Lady," a Vitaphone special starring Corinne Griffith. It is said that $100,000 will be spent in leading newspapers of the country that will tie in with local first runs of the picture.

Included in the campaign are 84 cities with 141 newspapers. It is claimed that these papers have a total circulation of 15,553,306 and will reach a population of 37,401,000.

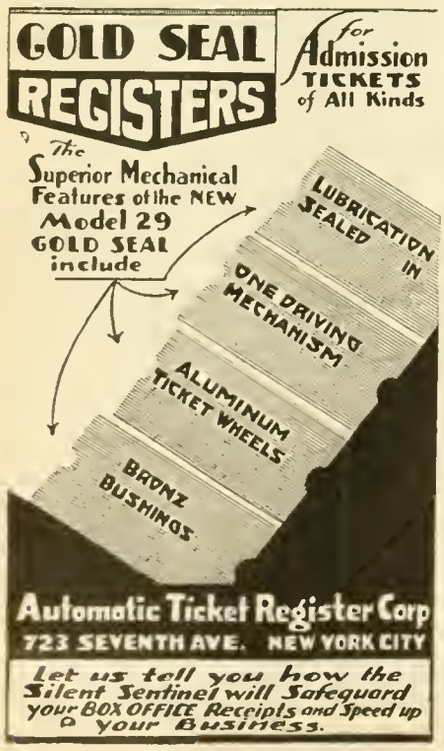
"Young Man River"

Paramount will produce a Mississippi River steamboat all-sound picture from an original story by George Manker Watters. Temporary title is listed as "Young Man River."

Stabilization Of Recording Needed Declares Powers

P. A. Powers, president of Powers Cinephone Equipment Corporation, sees as the pressing need in the industry for economy and progress the stablization in recording which will automatically standardize reproduction and sped up theatre installations. He declares that the synchronized sound should be recorded on the film itself and not on a separate record.

In discussing the problem, Mr. Powers said in part:



"The sound-on-film system is the only basic advance made since sound pictures were seriously attempted in 1906 and 1907. The first experiments made with sound records presented many difficulties which have not been overcome by improvements in the records themselves nor by the devlopment of sound amplifiers to increase volume. Sound recorded on discs still requires double handling of subjects in the exchanges, double installations and double handling in theatres, double shipments, additional storage space and are subject to breakage and warping."

Columbia's "Trial Marriage" Synchronization Completed

Columbia has completed the synchronization of music and sound effects with "Trial Marriage" at the Victor studios in Camden, N. J. David H. Brookman, conductor and composer, composed and compiled the score, which was played by the Victor Symphony Orchestra of 32 pieces.

Roseland Talkie

Roseland Pictures Corporation has in production the second of a series of one-reel disc talkers. It features the colored original story by J. D. Trop. Raymond Friedgen is directing.

Pelton Designs New Type Stage For Bristolphone

Fred E. Pelton, one of the industry's leading sound engineers, has designed a new type of sound-proof recording stage, embracing a new combination of engineering, acoustics and ventilation. The design is for the new West Coast studios planned by the Consolidated Bristolphone Corp.

This development, which provides for the installation of the Bristolphone recording apparatus and system, was worked out by Mr. Pelton in collaboration with the Johns-Manville Co. and the Carrier Engineering Co.

The new studio will be laid out and the stages designed in such a way that the operating cost of recording is cut in half, and much greater freedom of activity permitted on the recording stages, it is claimed.

Jones Shortly To Have Ready New Synchronizer

E. W. Jones will shortly place a disc synchronizer on the market which will permit the control of pickup, enabling advance or retarding of reproduction. It was developed in the Jones research laboratories. The control enables the operator to jump any missing parts of the film.

The Jones firm, which has been synchonizing pictures for producers for some time past is now making 33 1-3 rpm (Vitaphone speed) records, as well as standard speed records. A number of standard speed discs are being recut for the 33 1-3 run speed, which rapidly is becoming the standard for disc synchronizers.

J. C. Nugent Signs To Appear In New Vitaphone Playlet

J. C. Nugent, author and character actor on the legitimate stage, is soon to make a Vitaphone playlet under the direction of Bryan Foy at Warner Bros. eastern studios in Brooklyn. Mr. Nugent collaborated on the comedies "Kempy" and "The Poor Nut," and has written and appeared in many other Broadway stage hits.

F. N.-Vita. Plans Bordoni Film for International Mart

A talking and singing picture, to be international in its appeal, will be produced by First National-Vitaphone. According to present plans it will be ready for world-wide release next fall. Irene Bordoni, musical comedy celebrity and comedienne of both the stages of Europe and this country, will star. Her signature was affixed to a First National-Vitaphone contract a short time ago.

The forthcoming production is regarded by First National as the initial attempt to meet the demands for dialogue in the languages of the countries where the film is to be shown. Miss Bordoni will sing in French, German, Italian and Spanish as well as English. Simultaneous premieres in European capitals as well as in New York and Los Angeles are called for in the preliminary plans.

The star, at present appearing at the Music Box Theatre in New York, will continue in her vehicle until May when she will leave for Burbank.

Pacent Installs Equipment Around Cleveland Territory

Pacent Reproducer reports a number of installations for the Cleveland territory. The first of these was operated at the Regent theatre in Cleveland with "The Terror" and played to capacity business. Other similar installations to be completed this month include: Lasalle, Olympia, West Park, Lyric and Euclid theatres, Cleveland; Liberty, Wellsville; Bexley, Dover; Opera House, New Philadelphia; Royal, Findley; McKinley, Canton; Temple, Bryan and Park, Barberton.

Whiting And Burt Will Be Heard In Vitaphone Songs

George Whiting and Sadie Burt of the Ziegfeld Follies will be heard in a number of compositions of Whiting in a Vitaphone act just completed by the team. In addition to appearing in the Follies they are a well known vaudeville team.

Whiting is the composer of such songs as "Blue Heaven," "High Up on a Hilltop," "My Wife's Gone To The Country," "West of the Great Divide," "Raquel" and others.

Two For Lois Wilson

Columbia Pictures has renewed its option on the services of Lois Wilson and will star her in two additional productions on this season's program.

Seven Days For Shooting Talkies

Long Rehearsals Cut Schedules And Reduce Expenses

A SEVEN DAYS' shooting schedule on all talking pictures will be easily available for producers with the spread of the two to three weeks' complete rehearsal policy before starting actual shooting. Studio heads are learning that a letter-perfect cast in a talking picture results in vast improvements, not only artistically, but economically, by lowering the cost of such finished product by twenty-five per cent.

At present, production schedules for all-talkies range from fourteen to twenty-one days shooting schedules. They are exclusive of silent versions. Practically all studios employ the system of assigning "sides" to each member of a cast for the scene about to be shot. These "sides" are rehearsed for several hours and then several "takes" made. Five minutes of perfect recorded scenes for the finished product is considered an exceptionally good day's work. During the time the cast is rehearsing, sound-stages, equipment, electricians, cameramen and other mechanics and technical men, stand about idly, while time for which they are paid mounts up.

Under the complete rehearsal system, all these employees, stage space and equipment could be made available for other productions. Even one rehearsal, and rarely more than two takes, would scarcely be necessary for a scene. It is estimated by various directors and technicians interviewed, that a minimum of ten minutes perfectly recorded and photographed "time" could be completed in a day. On this minimum basis alone, the present shooting schedules would be cut more than half.

The first talking picture completed under a system of complete rehearsals before shooting, was "Alibi," shown privately in Hollywood last week. The enthusiasm and acclaim accorded this picture by all producers and executives present is largely responsible for the sudden spread of a policy of complete rehearsals. Roland West, who was sought out by a Motion Picture News representative following all the hullaballo over the production, stated that he had rehearsed his cast until they were letter-perfect and that his picture cost less than it would have under the usual method. This equation is unknown to Hollywood. What did enthuse the film colony was the artistic success of "Alibi."

It is also a known fact that D. W. Griffith, even with the making of his silent productions, never allowed a crank to be turned on a camera until he had thoroughly rehearsed his players. Griffith found the policy successful with silent movies and it is more adaptable to the new era of production.

As a result of "Alibi," all United Artists' productions intended for complete dialogue will be rehearsed in the entire script before filming is begun. It allows for more scope in business, spontaneity, removes nervousness—and there are the economic factors to be considered.

Will Make Picture On L. A. Street Corner

HOLLYWOOD, March 14.—Russell Birdwell, former dramatic editor for the New York Telegram and originally of United Press, Los Angeles office, slipped into Hollywood last week to make a two reel original. "Street Corners" is the title, Birdwell also being the author. His cast includes H. B. Walthall, Josef Swickard, Derelys Perdue, Rex Lease, Patsy O'Leary, Royer Cannon, Billy Colvin, Franklin Parker, Owen Gory, and Clyde McClary.

The entire film is to be photographed on street corners of Los Angeles and Hollywood.

New One For Wellman

"Broken Wing" will be the title of William Wellman's next directorial effort for Paramount. It is an original by Paul Dickey.

Dorothy Arzner To Direct

Dorothy Arzner will direct the new version of Booth Tarkington's "Magnolia," starring Buddy Rogers. It will be all-talkie, the original silent version having been made some years ago for Paramount by James Cruze.

Gloria Swanson Signs Stein

Completing her plans for the dialogue version of "Queen Kelly," Gloria Swanson has signed Paul L. Stein to direct, and camera work will be begun in the immediate future.

Mary Nolan Signed

Mary Nolan, the beautiful blonde seen recently in Lon Chaney's "West of Zanzibar," has been signed by Paramount to play one of the prominent roles in the forthcoming talking picture version of W. Somerset Maugham's stage play, "The Constant Wife."

Columbia Cast Completed

Virginia Brown Faire and John Wallace complete the cast of thirteen talking stars signed by Columbia for "The Donovan Affair," its first all talkie special. Jack Holt, Dorothy Revier, William Collier, Jr., Agnes Ayres, John Roche, Fred Kelsey, Hank Mann, Wheeler Oakman, Alphonse Ethier, Edward Hearn and Ethel Wales are the other prominent players who are to appear in this mystery drama adapted from Owen Davis's Broadway stage success of the same name.

Green Writing Story

Howard Green is writing original story and dialogue version for "The Broadway Hoofer," which Edward Small will produce. The picture will be an all talker and musical, with production slated to start about April 1st.

Barbara Stanwick

Barbara Stanwyck, the good-hearted Bonnie of Arthur Hopkins' "Burlesque," will leave New York for Hollywood within the next fortnight. There she will become principal player in United Artists' "The Locked Door," a 100% talking picturization of Channing Pollock's "The Sign on the Door." George Fitzmaurice is directing, C. Gardner Sullivan is handling the scenario, and there will be dialogue supplied by George Scarborough.

Edith Roberts With "U"

Edith Roberts, who grew up on the Universal lot, will return to it again after an absence of many years. She has been selected for the leading role in Ken Maynard's first picture under his new contract with the Universal Pictures Corporation, titled "The Wagon Master," an adaptation of the novel by Marian Jackson which will be directed by Harry J. Brown.

Newberry In Jealousy

Jack Newberry, who played in the talking film version of "Gentlemen of the Press" at Paramount's Long Island Studio, has been engaged for a part in "Jealousy," starring Jeanne Eagels, now in production at the studio. The picture is being directed by Jean de Limur and is produced by Monta Bell.

New RKO Scenarists

George O'Hara and Jane Murfin have been added to the RKO scenario staff.

Production Notes From The West Coast

Radio Signs Jane Murfin

The signing up of playwrights for Radio's coming sound and dialogue productions continues. William Le Baron announces that Jane Murfin now joins the company of writers which includes George Abbott, Samson Raphaelson, Ben Hecht, and Charles MacArthur. Miss Murfin has authored "Lilac Time," "Smilin' Through" and "Daybreak." Some of her recent film successes were "Prince of Headwaiters," "Meet The Prince," "Mademoiselle Modiste" and "The Savage."

Marion Nixon Signs

Marion Nixon is the latest player to be signed by J. L. Warner. During the next twelve months she will appear in four productions for Warner Bros. The studio executives of the company are most enthusiastic over the registering qualities of Miss Nixon's voice for Vitaphone roles.

Beaudine For "Classified"

William Beaudine will direct "Classified," an all talkie Vitaphone picture for First National with Dorothy Mackaill featured. The picture will be a re-make of the story made by First National several years ago with Corinne Griffith starred.

Miller, Mulhall Teamed

Patsy Ruth Miller will be teamed with Jack Mulhall by First National for one picture, "Twin Beds." Edyth Chapman, Ben Hendricks, and Eddie Gribbon are also cast. Al Santell is to direct.

Werker Contract Renewed

Following the completion of his first picture for Fox, the studio has renewed its contract with Al Werker, director. His first was "Nobody's Children," made on scheduled time under the supervision of Jeff Lazarus. Lazarus was formerly publicity director for the West Coast chain.

Lane Names Leading Lady

Charlene Burt, who has been appearing in Ideal Comedies in support of Jerry Drew, has been selected by Lupino Lane for his leading lady in his first talking comedy now in production at the Educational Studios.

"Christina" Titled

Capt. H. H. Caldwell and Katherine Hilliker have completed titles for "Christina." This is Janet Gaynor's last Fox vehicle, directed by William K. Howard. Charles Morton and Rudolph Schildkraut are in the supporting cast.

Railroad Cooperates

In producing "Thunder," a railroad melodrama, M-G-M is obtaining full cooperation of the Northwestern Pacific Railway; with lines, yards, equipment and trains placed at the disposal of the producing company. William Nigh is directing, with Lon Chaney starred. Story is an original by Byron Morgan.

New Zane Grey Western

Paramount's next Zane Grey western to go into production will be "Stairs of Sand." Percy Heath is writing the adaptation and Agnes Leahy the scenario.

Dotty Jottings

By Jerry Hoffman

AL JOLSON tells it . . so who am I to keep it secret? . . . it's about Jack Parner's penchant for wise-cracking and the group of men who are with Jack constantly and who laugh uproariously at the pearls of wit which fall from his lips. . . . Jack loosed one of his perennial classics last week to be greeted with the usual loud and long guffaw's of appreciation from all his "laughmen" . . with the exception of one who formerly laughed the loudest . . . this chap was unusually silent and J. L. is supposed to have glanced at him and remarked . . . "What a tough audience you've become!" and the chap replied laconcially . . . "I'm quitting Saturday." . . .

TAY GARNETT, Pathe director, is teaching Patsy Ruth Miller how to fly . . . portending a romance-rumor in the dailies shortly. . . . Viola Brothers Shore may start writing theme songs as well as scenarios. . . . Paul Sloane's missus makes excellent spaghetti . . . which means that Paul may make an Italian epic to follow "Hearts of Dixie." . . .

UNIVERSAL has one of the most effective miniature sets made for "Broadway" . . . it is the grand old street itself . . . showing all of Times Square . . . street cars, traffic, people, lights . . . and it photographs beautifully . . . and I don't believe when Paul Fejos asked . . . "Do you mean to compare yourself with Napoleon?" . . . that Junior Laemmle shrugged his shoulders and said . . . "We-ll—" . . .

WILSON MIZNER operates a new branch of a local restaurant and in arguing with an annoying drunk last week . . . the drunk said . . . "You're a great guy. I like you." . . . Mizner replied . . . "You're not so bad yourself . . . I kinda like you. In fact, I'd like to have a pup out of you. . . .

THE Pathe youngsters in stock are having a grand time with their talkie training under Frank Reicher's direction by putting on various plays for their own amusement . . . they are now in the throes of "Lilliom" . . . Jeannette Loff, Diane Ellis, Eddie Quillan, Carol Lombard and the others are turning turns in playing roles. . . .

THE Pullman company is reported to have gone still further in exacting service and courtesy from its employees . . . with the daily discharge of imported stage writers, song-writers and the rest to Hollywood . . . the porters are now reported to be brushing off the stage importations with the remarks "Well, suh . . . see you in ten weeks!" . . . so what? . . .

Jessel In New Talkie

Plans are being rapidly completed for the filming of the next all-talking and singing production starring George Jessel in his second picture for Tiffany-Stahl. Charles C. Wilson, well known stage director, has been engaged by the company to direct all the talking sequences in the production, the name of which has not as yet been announced. Rudolph Flothow will supervise the synchronization and sound.

Young Fairbanks Signs

The announcement comes from First National Pictures, Inc., that Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has been signed for the leading masculine role for the Vitaphone version of the stage play, "Diversion." John Griffith Wray has been assigned the duty of directing the production. It is scheduled to face the cameras during this month and the remainder of the cast will be announced shortly.

Dorothy Mackaill Vehicle

Dorothy Mackaill will star alone in her forthcoming First National-Vitaphone picture, as yet untitled. Charles Delaney, who is now playing opposite Alice White in "Broadway Babies," has been signed as Miss Mackaill's leading man in this dialogue picture and James Finlayson will also have a prominent role.

Dorothy Revier

Dorothy Revier, who appears with Douglas Fairbanks in "The Iron Mask," has been signed by Paramount to play the role of Sylvia Mareo, the feminine menace in the all-talking film "Burlesque," adapted from the George Manker Watters-Arthur Hopkins stage hit of last season. Another player engaged for this cast is James Farley, Hollywood character actor.

Bushell In "Jealousy"

Anthony Bushell, young English actor, has been cast for the leading role opposite Jeanne Eagels in the Paramount talking picture "Jealousy," in production at the Long Island studio.

Griffith With Columbia

E. H. Griffith, formerly with Pathe, has been placed under contract by Columbia. He will direct "The Broadway Hoofer," an original by Howard J. Green. Edward Small is producing.

Smith Gets Fox Contract

Following the purchase of two short stories by Wallace Smith as talkie vehicles for Louise Dresser and June Collyer, Fox has placed the writer under contract for an original. No title or directorial plans definite. The two short stories were "The Grouch Bag" and "Little Ledna."

The Old Minstrel Show

A regular old-time minstrel show, as played by a traveling company in the small towns on the road some years ago, will be a prominent and colorful part of the Eddie Dowling starring production, "The Rainbow Man," now being recorded by Sono-Art in Hollywood.

Gleason Writes Dialogue

James Gleason, well known playwright and stage star, has been engaged by Pathe to write the dialogue for William Boyd's new all-talking feature, "High Voltage."

Actor Annapolis Graduate

Bryan Dunleavy, who has the heavy role in Morton Downey's first picture for Pathe, "Mother's Boy," is a graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, but preferred the stage as a career.

"Close Harmony", "Alibi" Win Praise

Sweet Music For The Box Office

(Dialogue and Musical Sound Version)

"CLOSE HARMONY" is going to play a merry tune on any theatre's cash register. While it cannot be considered a road show super-feature, it certainly does stack up as 100 per cent entertainment, and will click in the key city runs and the smaller houses. It's packfull of all around entertainment, and is refreshing as a talker-musical on account of its brevity—in preview form running just about an hour.

The production is evidence from the sound studios that topnotch program pictures can be turned out in talkie and musical form.

Charles Rogers and Nancy Carroll, two of Paramount's contract feature players, have the leads and do an acceptable job in handling their assignments. Their voices, both in talk and song, get across nicely. The pair is backed up by a supporting cast, however, that could practically carry any picture.

Harry Green, Hebrew character comedian and well known in vaudeville and legitimate circles, makes his screen debut in the picture, and walks right out the front door with 90 per cent of the honors safely wrapped up under his arm. Green shows he is sure-fire for pictures and some producer (if not Paramount) will grab him off on a contract for feature billing in no time.

Jack Oakie and "Skeets" Gallagher register as a typical headline song and dance team. They put over their routine in fine fashion, but it is Green, as the theatre managing director, who captures most of the laughs. Green's gag of removing his spectacles every time he gets excited is worked at least a dozen times, but it is done so well that it gets a big laugh with every repetition.

"Close Harmony" is one of those delightfully intimate backstage stories of people who work in the theatre. Nancy Carroll is the song and dance star of the big movie house presentation bill. Rogers is a warehouse clerk who organizes a "different" jazz band and is discovered by Nancy. The latter gets him the job as stage band leader at the theatre, and that furnishes the basis for all the plot. Although the story is rather slim in spots, deft handling in the tempo and direction gets over the few rough spots without difficulty.

Oakie and Gallagher are the big time song and dance team. Both fall for Nancy, almost shattering the Damon and Pythias relationship existing between them. Nancy arranges a date with both of them, ducking Rogers who does not understand her attempt to split the team so that the band leader will get his big chance. The stunt works, and the two boys fight and split. Rogers discovers the truth and makes Nancy confess that she did it purposely. Then the song and dancers make up. So do Nancy and Buddy. Everything is fine for the final fadeout when Green, the theatre manager slips a contract under the door for Buddy and his band.

Audrey Ferris, Warner Bros. ingenue, is fast making new fan followers with each release. Some of her newest vehicles are "No Questions Asked," "Alimony Annie" and "The Little Wildcat"

Both Nancy and Buddy get away with song numbers. Nancy has a nice offering, "I Want To Go Places and Do Things," with a full chorus background aiding. Rogers' voice gets over with "I'm All Atwitter" in front of his jazz band.

The sound synchronization and registration throughout was very good, and shows that mechanical difficulties which have been confronting the talker producers are gradually being overcome.

Drawing Power: No question of its ability to draw the crowds in goodly numbers. Plug it strong as a real film musical comedy, with dialogue and music throughout. Both Nancy Carroll and Buddy Rogers have good singing voices but don't forget to also play up Harry Green, Jack Oakie and "Skeets" Gallagher, all former favorites in musical comedy and vaudeville. After your first showing the picture will win friends, and should build strongly.

Alibi

S. R. O.! Extended Runs! And How!

(Reviewed by Jerry Hoffman)

UNTIL a definite standard is established for greatness in talking pictures, reviewers, as well as audiences, cannot avoid dealing in superlatives. Lukewarm interest in the new era was heated by "In Old Arizona." Further belief in the permanency of the new art was strengthened by "Broadway Melody" and "Hearts in Dixie." Each in turn was hailed as "great!"

Last week in Hollywood, Grauman's Chinese Theatre housed 2,000 invited persons one morning to see a private showing of "Alibi," Roland West's production for United Artists, which was adapted from the play "Nightstick." Private, as far as 2,000 persons are concerned. And if one were to accept the ravings of those 2,000 persons when "Alibi" faded into "The End," he would believe that the ultimate in talking picture production has been achieved. Regardless of how far the new science may progress, the opinions passed stated without equivocation that the greatest of all had been made. This reviewer is inclined to be equally enthusiastic. But cold facts cannot be avoided. Miracles occur over night. What is magnificent today fades into insignificance tomorrow.

All of which is dogmatic for a trade paper report. But it is preliminary to saying that I doubt whether miracles of such magnitude can occur within the next six months or year as to compel "Alibi" to be any the less of a great box office picture. It is doubtful whether any picture made in that time will attain the tenseness, the dramatic values in suspense and audience reaction that Roland West's first talkie effort does. No matter from what angle one may attack it, story, cast, direction; in the present day it seems impregnable.

Strong words—but a strong picture. It is a crime story. Those who saw the play "Nightstick" and liked it, wouldn't believe it was impossible to improve on a story to the extent Roland West and C. Gardner Sullivan have with their adaptation of the play by John Wray, J. C. Nugent and Elaine Sterne Carrington.

It is the tale of a criminal, and a type who creates all the audience sympathies for himself against the police. He's a rat, he's yellow, he's a murderer, but not until the latter portion of the production does the audience come to its senses and realize that he is the type so common in various communities daily and must be exterminated. No—don't get this wrong. "Alibi" doesn't intend to preach a moral. It tells a story.

Maudlin soft-hearted goofs who work for prison paroles, and some censorship people with little vision may object to "Alibi" on the grounds that it exploits crime. If they take such attitudes, they are doing the country and its citizenry irreparable harm. For "Alibi" proves, not in a soft-soap manner, that it is the fact that Mr. Average Man would rather believe a criminal against a cop, which hinders the suppression of crime. By having a police sergeant's own daughter fall in love with the chief crook, Roland West gives a clear idea of how readily the general public will believe a gunman's wail of "Framed" as against the indictment of police. Incidentally there's a grand exploitation angle for United Artists to use.

Picking out one outstanding high-light or character in "Alibi" is well nigh impossible. Every scene is a high-light, every actor with one exception, gives excellence to performance. The exception is the leading lady, Eleanor Griffith. U. A. imported her from New York despite the fact that Patsy Ruth Miller was scoring a sensation in Los Angeles with her performance in the legitimate version. The other importations are praiseworthy. As a rule, a picture of great proportions brings one outstanding personality to the screen for future stardom. "Alibi" exploits several as tremendous possibilities. Firstly, there is Chester Morris. A juvenile on the style of Barthelmess, but without the drooping mouth-corners of Richard. He's more than an actor—he's an artist. Then there is Pat O'Malley, originally of the screen who has been playing theatres for a year. "Alibi" is a come-back for him equal to Bessie Love's in "Broadway Melody." There is a chap named Regis Toomey, whose smile inspired the theme song, "There Never Was a Smile Like Yours." A personality that is sure-fire and also star-material. Include among come-backs, one for Mae Busch, in a role not quite as big as the other principals. But she makes that role live. Irma Harrison delivers nicely. In fact, every one, the rest of the principals including Harry Stubbs, Purnell Pratt, De Witt Jennings, Al Hill and James Bradbury, Jr.

"Alibi" also contains theatre and revue sequences. Not jammed in for no reason, but good basic premises with a bearing on the story. It gives opportunity for the cute songs of Irma Harrison and the beautiful vocal work of Virginia Flohri and Edward Jardon.

Any house not packing 'em in with this will need an alibi of rare imagination.

Produced by Roland West for Feature Productions, Inc., distributed through United Artists. Adapted and dialogued by West and C. Gardner Sullivan from the play "Nightstick" by John Wray, J. C. Nugent and Elaine Sterne Carrington. Music arranged by Reisenfeld, dances by Fanchon. Footage, eight reels.

The Devil's Apple Tree

A South Sea Western

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

DOROTHY SEBASTIAN as a South Sea native is the most arresting feature of "The Devil's Apple Tree"—otherwise there is little reason for either the picture or the title.

The plot, which is credited to Lillian Ducey, has seen service since the earliest westerns; only this time it has been transferred to the South Sea Islands, and spiced with some scenes of the natives at work and play. The native backgrounds are more like scenes of a cabaret show—except for the costumes.

The heroine doesn't look like a moron but apparently she was, because she stepped right into the unpleasant situation instead of appealing to the two white men in Penango, who were obviously gentlemen. The poor girl had come to the island to marry a man she had corresponded with through a matrimonial journal. When he proved to be slightly the worse for gin and climate, she promptly assumed the name of a girl she supposed dead and vamped the son of the Colonel the other girl was coming to visit.

You can guess the rest—the other girl turned up and Dorothy hit for the jungles. But it ended with the usual clinch. Larry Kent is the nice young hero, and Edward Martindel his father. Ruth Clifford plays the other girl. Elmer Clifton directed, and apparently struggled with an impossible story, finally doing the best he could with the script in hand.

Drawing Power: Nothing to speak of, with the exception of Dorothy Sebastian as feature name.

Nancy Welford Signed

First National signed Nancy Welford to play the lead in "No, No, Nanette," slated as an all musical Vitaphone feature. Miss Welford appeared in the coast company of the musical show several years ago.

Broadway Fever

Not Too Contagious

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

"BROADWAY Fever," Sally O'Neill's latest Tiffany-Stahl production, runs pretty "hot" in spots, and in others it is decidedly subnormal. It's a picture that has average entertainment values, and can be classed as program calibre. Several others turned out by larger companies recently have been considerably below this one in audience values.

The story is an original by Viola Brothers Shore and is one of those old tales of a small country girl trying to get a "break" on the New York stage. She gets it, of course—but "how" is the basis of the picture plot.

It seems that Sally has been trying for weeks to interview the leading New York producer. She finally gives up and answers an ad for a maid's job. Imagine her surprise when she finds it is in the home of the bachelor producer.

He is busy rehearsing his latest "find" for the starring role of his new play. Sally immediately falls head over heels in love and bounces up and down stairs and hither and yon in a great state of anguish whenever the blonde lady is in the house.

By giving wrong directions to the leading woman, Sally rids herself of the opposition. Taking Sally's word for it the blonde buys a railroad ticket for Oakland, Calif., and is heard from no more. Sally, in the meantime, packs her grips and appears for rehearsals at Oakland, N. J., impersonating the blonde.

The producer doesn't discover the deception until the dress rehearsal of the play—it doesn't say whether this was a week or month, later and one wonders why the blonde woman does not appear or at least let the producer know where she is. When the producer discovers Sally playing the lead his ire knows no bounds, and he orders her off his stage forever and ever.

Sally hides in his auto and after it starts crawls from beneath a robe to the seat beside him. The rest is the usual thing, although it takes some time to reach the climax.

Roland Drew plays the part of the producer and spends most of his time looking dreamy-eyed and romantic. There are a couple of scorching bedroom sequences. The manner in which Sally gets rid of the blonde star forms one of the chief comedy highlights of the picture.

It takes three reels for the story to get started, and the first part is slow in tempo. Through the middle the picture is exceedingly pleasant, finishing with enough saccharine to send everybody home happy.

There are a number of places where some clever titles would put over the specific sequences in great style. As a whole, the titles are rather flat and meaningless.

Drawing Power: Star Sally O'Neill in a tale of Broadway backstage. The picture will get by as average entertainment with audiences in the general run of houses.

Lady Of The Pavements

Reason For the Franco-Prussian War of '71

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

IF the D. W. Griffith production entitled "Lady of the Pavements" doesn't disclose the real reason for the conflict between the French and the Germans in 1871, it at least shows what might have been one of the contributing causes. This is providing that Dr. Karl Volmoeller's tale "La Piava" was founded on some historical fact. At any rate the picture serves to introduce Lupe Velez, that volatile and voluptuous bit of Mexican femininity, in a role that is going to make a great many admirers for her among the fans. The picture as a whole will be entertaining to the greater portion of audiences, and in instances, as in New York, where Lupe makes a personal appearance, it will assume record-breaking proportions. Without Lupe present it will just attract about average business.

Lupe is introduced as a Spanish singer in a low Parisian cabaret where she is the life of the party. Her introduction to the main plot, follows the refusal of the son of the Prussian ambassador to Paris to marry the Countess Diana des Granges, telling her that he would rather wed a woman of the pavements than she, after he has found her in the arms of Napoleon III. The Countess then summons Baron Finot, chamberlain to the Emperor, and commands that he seek out a woman of the pavements, young and attractive, and school her in social carriage sufficiently that she may attract and win the young German. Then comes Lupe. She is taken from the dive in which she sings, clad in the height of fashion, placed with a social mentor, and finally introduced as a young lady of breeding who has just come from a convent in Spain. Her charm, at her debut, wins the lover who scorned the Countess, and when the two are finally wed the Countess discloses the fact that the German has really had his desire and wed a lady of the pavements. With that the little singer returns to her cabaret, but her heart is no longer in her work. Even so she remains there until such time that her husband comes and takes her away.

Sounds like a simple enough story, but the manner in which D. W. Griffith has handled it with his master hand makes it hold one. There is one shot in a cabaret at the end of the picture where double exposure has been utilized to a dgree that is going to surpise a lot of technicians.

Drawing Power: Adult audiences, and the stressing of Lupe Velez as the real find from Mexico. This girl should outshine Dolores Del Rio in about a year. D. W. Griffith's latest should mean something to the audience.

Produced by D. W. Griffith. Distributed by United Artists. Length, Sound, 8,000 feet; Silent, 7,495 feet. Running Time, an hour and twenty-nine minutes. Released, Jan. 23, 1929. Story by Dr. Karl Vonmoeller. Adapted by Sam Taylor. Director, D. W. Griffith.

Sonny Boy

Warners Cash In On "Singing Fool" Kid

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THE Warner Bros., quick to seize opportunity, are starring little Davey Lee, who is the kid player with Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool," in a production entitled "Sonny Boy," which was the title of the hit song that Jolson had in his picture. It is sure fire at the box office coming right in the wake of the former hit, even though it is a story without any great pretense built along farcial lines, with the kid serving as the motivating force for the action of the adults in the cast. It can't be said that the picture is worthy of a $2 extended run, but it is a real novelty

Supporting the youthful star the producers have a cast that has some worthwhile names, including Betty Bronson, Edward Everett Horton, Gertrude Olmsted, John T. Murray, Edmund Breese, Tommy Dugan, Jed Pronty and Lucy Beaumont. That sounds formidable, doesn't it? The surprise will come with the performance of Edward Everett Horton, who utilizes all of his stage tricks in getting to the audience at all times.

The story in brief is concerning a battle and parting of the mother and father of little Sonny Boy. Gertrude Olmsted has the role of the mother, while John T. Murray is the dad. He wants a divorce and the possession of the child. The mother, to retain the youngster and avoid a court order which has been issued directing her to turn the child over to the father, sends for her sister, to whom she entrusts the little lad. When sister misses her train to the little town in the country where she lives, and overhears the lawyer who is representing her brother-in-law declare to a friend at the railroad station that he is going out of town for two weeks and has left his apartment empty, she can think of no better place to hide overnight than right in that apartment. It would have all been well had not the mother and father of the lawyer turned up, and mistook the sister for their son's wife and Sonny Boy for their grandchild.

The youngster will win the hearts of any audience and he talks well enough to be understood. Then for the honor score comes Mr. Horton, who virtually walked away with the picture. John Murray made the most of a husband that suffered from hay fever and sneezed continually, while Tommy Dugan as wise cracking private detective got many a laugh.

Drawing Power: Particularly strong in the spots where "The Singing Fool" has played. Good with all ages from the babies to the grand folks. Davey Lee should be played up as the Al. Jolson find of "The Singing Fool," and reference to the song itself won't hurt.

Produced and distributed by the Warner Brothers. Length: Sound, 6,016 feet. Running Time, an hour and six minutes. Story by Leon Zuardo. Adapted by C. Graham Baker. Director, Archie L. Mayo.

The Letter

One Of The Best Dramatic Talkers To Date

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

"THE LETTER," produced by Famous-Lasky-Paramount at their Long Island studios with Jeanne Eagles of the stage starred proves to be the best of the dramatic talking picture offerings to date. It is a women's picture and while it is rather sordid in theme it is going to be sure fire for women at the box office. "The Letter" is adapted from the stage play of W. Somerset Maugham, with Garrett Fort responsible for the adaptation and the continuity. Jean De Limur directed the screen production and has a most creditable piece of work to his credit.

The scene of the action is laid in the East Indies, where the Crosbies, played by Jeanne Eagles and Reginald Owen, man and wife, are in charge of a rubber plantation. The opening shot, which travels from the road through the trees right to the door of the plantation house and the indoors is one of the best combinations of camera and sound to date. Natives are shown outside the house playing instruments.

The story is that of a wife marooned from society who seeks diversion outside of her husband, finds a lover, and when he wishes to desert her and break off the affair because he has taken a Chinese woman as a mistress, the woman sends for him, tries to have him return to her and when he refuses shoots him dead. Then follows the inevitable trial, with the woman's story to the effect that their family friend had called at their home slightly intoxicated while her husband was absent, took several drinks while there and then after trying to make love to her attacked her. The jury believed her story and all would have been smooth sailing had it not been for the letter that she had sent to her lover demanding his appearance. That letter was in the hands of his Chinese mistress and she offered it to the attorney of the defense for $10,000 providing that the white woman would call for it herself. The attorney provides the wherewithal to obtain the letter and the woman carried out the demands of the Chinese mistress. Then when the murderess is acquitted the husband has to foot the bill. He demands the letter that he is told has cost $10,000 and on reading it informs the wife that instead of the vacation that they had planned after her acquittal they will have to remain right where they are because he has paid out all his savings for the letter. Then she turns on him, and in one of the strongest scenes played in a talking picture up to this time, blames him for everything, stressing the fact that she has murdered the only person that she ever loved and the final fadeout arives with this.

Strong meat, but meat that audiences will love, especially, as said before, the women.

Jeanne Eagles proves herself as sterling an actress in this talking motion picture as she ever was on the stage and the manner in which she portrays the role assigned her, despite its unsympathetic nature, will win her a host of admirers in the picture theatres. Her supporting cast is uniformly good, even to those who play minor roles, among whom is Harry Lee as a court clerk. O. P. Heggie as the attorney for the defense makes his role outstanding, while Reginald Owen and Herbert Marshall are all that anyone could ask for, this is especially true of Marshall in the role of the lover even though he is out of the picture early. Lady Tsen Mei, of vaudeville fame, in the role of the Chinese woman, comes as one of the real surprises of the picture. Her work in this production alone will rate her a place among the Oriental screen players that will be equal to that of Sessue Hayakawa when he first appeared in "The Cheat."

Drawing Power: Adults and mostly women. The stage following of Jeanne Eagles should count for a great deal at the box office.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length: Sound, 5866 feet. Running time, an hour and two minutes. From the play by W. Somerset Maugham. Adapted by Garret Fort; directed by Jean De Limur. Produced under supervision of Monta Bell.

"The Carnival Man"

(Paramount Short Talking Picture)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is a dramatic sketch with songs. Walter Huston plays the titular role, assisted by a woman, who is not programmed but who does effective work. Of course, the novelty of "The Carnival Man" has been somewhat destroyed by the two features, "The Barker" and "The Spieler." But this as a short is interesting and entertaining. Huston is the "spieler" with a carnival outfit. The girl is a dancer. They have been playmates since she joined the show a few days before the story starts. Then the girl gets a wire to come home as there is a job as steno. awaiting her. She asks his advice and he tells her to go home because she carnival racket isn't any good to anyone in it. That gives him a chance for a song at the close of the picture regarding the hardships that he endures to bring happiness and entertainment to others. There is another song earlier in the subject. Runs sixteen minutes.

"The Midnight Frolic"

(Paramount Short With Eddie Cantor)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is virtually a monologue and song by Eddie Cantor, backed by a jazz orchestra. The atmosphere and the color of the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic is used. The combination should be effective for billing and advertising purposes outside of New York. Eddie cracks a few jokes, introduced a number of screen and bright light celebrities including Paramount star players, and does his numbers. Cantor is funny and working in blackface he snaps over his gags in great shape. Especially the one about Ziegfeld insisting that he become a partner in the "Frolic," at least what Zieggy said was "Eddie, you have got to take a greater interest in the 'Frolic.'" It runs 10 minutes.

"Phil Baker"

(Accordion and Songs—Vitaphone)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

PHIL BAKER is more impressive on the sound screen than on the stage. In this particular Vitaphone offering he is going to prove one of the best bets. Four numbers are his contribution in this record and the final number which is a real novelty will get any audience. It is the popular number "I'll Get By" and Baker does it as though he had a "plant" seated in the audience. He tells those in front that the man in the fourth row will now sing the song, and then a voice other than that of Baker is heard and the illusion is perfect. He opens with an accordion selection, follows it with "Big Butter and Egg Man from the West" and then plays and sings "How About Me?" but it is the "I'll Get By" number that plants him solid with the audience. Baker's personality gets to the audience and it wouldn't be surprising to see him taken out of the class of singing-musicians and made a juvenile lead in one of the musical talkies. Eight minutes.

"The Music Makers"

(Willie and Eugene Howard—Vitaphone)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THERE is a name value to these boys outside of any theatre, but while this offering is good for a few laughs your audiences are not going out raving about it, either for or against. Willie Howard does the fresh boy that steps into a phonograph store for a job taking the "Boy Wanted" sign with him, then after breaking all the available records, conceals himself in a huge prop victrola to sing numbers for the customers, who happen to be a couple of good looking girls. He finally emerges and does a couple of imitations, including one of Jolson. Eugene, as usual, is the feeder. The three numbers in the imitations are "Gallagher and Sheehan," "It's Ray Ray Raining" and "Baby Curls." The talk between the two brothers gets laughs. It runs twelve minutes in all.

"Max Schmeling"

(Vitagraph Has German Fighter Talk)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

MAX SCHMELING, the German heavyweight pugilist who has created considerable furor about New York with his knocking out some of the candidates for the Tunney crown, thanks the American public for having been so gracious to him. He accomplishes this in both English, with an accent, and in German. He also runs through some gym training stunts and boxes a couple of exhibition rounds with one of his sparring partners. This should be sure fire in the spots where men predominate in the audience, although there is nothing that will offend women. Runs nine minutes.

"Songs Of Love"

(Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit —Vitagraph)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

JULIA SANDERSON, who was Douglas Fairbanks' first leading woman on the stage in "Fantana," looking as young and pretty as ever, with Frank Crumit accompanying her on his guitar and singing, proves a very pleasing Vitaphone subject. There are three numbers in the song cycle. They are "No Wonder You're a Wonderful Girl," "I Can Live Without You" and "That Precious Little Thing Called Love." The second is a comedy number that gets over nicely while the closing number is tunefully handled by the pair. Five minutes.

"Meet The Missus"

(A Paramount Short Talking Picture)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

"MEET the Missus" has James Gleason and Lucille Webster Gleason as its two principal players. There are a number of others in the cast, but these two carry the brunt of the work. It is a story of the life of a couple of small time vaudeville players. They are husband and wife and the hubby is picking a new girl on every bill, filling them full of the old line bull and thinking himself a Romeo of no mean proportions. The picture opens with the family rowing in the wings of one of the houses they are playing. Later goes to the front stoop of the actor's boarding house that they frequent, with the hubby making an excuse to the wife that he is going to the club to see a writer about a new act for the family. Instead he hits into the speakeasy beneath the boarding house and there meets a girl who is with pals of his. He runs through the usual routine and finally decides that they should make a wonderful team, the idea then and there is to go up stairs and break the news to the "Missus" that he is leaving her. He takes the new "partner" along, the result being that the two women know each other and "hubby" is forced to sleep on the sofa while the two women utilize the bed, and start talking over old times before they go to sleep. This is jammed with laughs, especially for a wise audience. It runs twenty minutes.

"Kitty Kitty"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

THIS is the old familiar story of "The Cat Came Back." It has a human cast of but three, Billy Dale, Estelle Bradey and Al Thompson, with a half dozen cats figuring prominently in the action. It is a poor attempt at comedy, with scarcely a laugh in the reel. There is entirely too much repitition in the return of the cat.

Billy brings his wife this pet to keep her company and she loaths cats. The pet immediately parks on her new expensive hat and ruins it. She orders the cat thrown out and Billy attempts times innumerable to do it. He is finally caught by a policeman trying to dispose of it in a street can and the cop orders him to take home all cats in the neighborhood. They disport all over the premises, much to the discomforture of Billy and his frantic wife. Jules White was responsible for the direction.

"Eleanor Painter"

(Lyric Soprano In Songs—Vitagraph)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

ELEANOR PAINTER, musical comedy prima donna, is heard in three numbers. Two of these are classical and one popular to lend a little diversity to her program. She looks very striking on the screen with the exception that one did not get the full value of her eyes, she squinting and making them appear as narrow slits. Her voice, however, is excellent. Her opening number is "Love Is Best of All," which is followed by "Habanera" from "Carmen." Then for a final number she offers "How About Me?" rendering it in a most dramatic manner and drawing a full applause appreciation for it. Five minutes.

"Bernie Cummins Orchestra"

(Vitagraph Short Music and Songs)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

ONE of the usual combinations of music and songs by a dance orchestra. Bernie Cummins and his orchestra hold forth at the Biltmore Hotel and are a combination that is equally at home whether playing hot tunes for stepping or ballads. In the program offered here they have three numbers, "Come On, Baby," "If I Had You" and "Here Comes My Ball and Chain." The latter is the most effective and worked up with some comedy. Runs eight minutes.

"Foolish Husbands"

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

SOMETIMES this Mack Sennett offering is funny inasmuch as it is a burlesque on the jealous wife and guilty husband theme. However it never grows vociferous and is perhaps too mild to be called a really good laugh-puller. Suitable material for the comedy stretch of the majority of neighborhood house programmes.

Billy Bevan stars, Vernon Dent, Carmelita Geraghty and Dot Farley support. Phil Whitman directed.

Carmelita agrees to help her friend, Dot, to cure Billy of his flirtatious ways. At Billy's house, from which the wife is supposed to be away visiting her sick mother, the susceptible male is found by wifie making love to Miss Geraghty, who falls stricken when a gun, in the irate hands of wifie, goes off. Billy believes he has shot and killed the beautiful Carmelita, so he and Vernon play hide and seek with the body, further difficulty arising when a policeman arrives and searches for the wandering corpse. Finally the truth is revealed and Bevan, to all intents and purposes, is cured of his agreeable weakness.

"The Black Duck"

(Pathe-Fables—One Reel)

RAFFLES the cat and Woofus Wolf plot against Milton Mouse, who sedulously guards his troop of ducks. They beguile Milton with an attractive picture book while his ducks are lured away. But when disaster stares Milton in the face, his black duck, whom he had tied to a tree to voice his displeasure against his annoying manners, saves the day. He conveniently acts as Milton's airplane and carries him to where the ducks are kept captive by the mean Woofus Wolf. Milton immediately fights Mr. Woofus and beats him soundly. Meanwhile the black duck again proves his incalculable worth by leading his fellows back to the pond.

More thrilling than Goldilocks and the three bears or the "huff and I'll puff 'till I blow your house down" story. The proper metier for these Fables is at a children's matinee, but a houseful of grown-ups derive enjoyment from them, too.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Riding For Love"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

GEORGE CHANDLER stars in this. It is the usual type of entertainment that these western shorts present: fights galore, horsemanship and wild and wooly adventure. It plays up a serenading cowboy, who, finding that he cannot win a fair summer guest in a gentle manner, adopts a rough and ready technique and sweeps her off her feet with his caveman tactics.

But a villain is lurking in the background and he spoils the romance between the pair, forcing the hero to tell her he's the father of a family. But everything turns out all right in the end and Mr. Villain gets his trimming and the hero and the heroine fall into an embrace.

Walter Fabian directed.

"Alpine Antics"

(Universal—One Reel)

OSWALD, the lively Winkler bunny and who is a daily celluloid visitor in and out of the Universal exchanges, is a mountain climber and yodeler in this new cartoon. Along with him is Fanny, his sweetheart, a St. Bernard dog, a mountain antelope and various other figures. It shows Oswald to the rescue when his sweetie becomes entangled on a lofty tree limb.

Fairly entertaining cartoon work.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

Dorothy Gulliver, "U" Star and Her Pet Colt

"The Prodigal Pup"

(Universal—One Reel)

THESE Laemmle Novelties are proving themselves to be the best series of shorts that has graced the Universal programs in a long while. About four of them have been reviewed so far and in all of their comments on the qualities of this particular series the writers have agreed that they are skilful little pictorial presentations. In this one, an idea is delicately sketched, is pictured with intriguing skill and is bound to make a most pleasing impression.

A wee pup, left to mind his brothers and sisters, journeys from home when his parent leaves the doghouse. The world presses in on him with all its forceful vigor and the disillusioned youngster first laps too much cider almost drowned by a playful little girl, and, supperless, is pelted by a rainstorm through which he hungrily runs. A smarter and wiser dog, with tail between his legs, he finally reaches home.

Not so easy to picture and carry through to a triumphant conclusion are these reels dealing with dogs. Hal Roach was most eminently successful with "Dog Heaven" and now Samuel Jacobsen, who conceived this story, and Jacques Rollens, who directed, have achieved another modest triumph along the same lines.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Delicious And Refreshing"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

ADRIENNE DORE, an Atlantic City beauty contest winner, is the featured player in this fairly snappy little comedy and she is a pretty clever performer. She is vivacious, good to look at and undoubtedly has a flare of comedy.

Adrienne and Tania Akron are hoofers in the picture, working on a truck and advertising a fashion show. The truck is banned on the streets so they apply at the fashion shop for a job as models. Unaccustomed to the details they get into all sorts of difficulties with the customers and literally wreck the establishment. The antics are so humorous that they are signed by a theatrical producer, there with his girl friend, to repeat the act in the theatre.

In the cast besides the Misses Dore and Akron are Eva Thatcher, Al Thompson, Robert Graves and Stanhope Wheatcroft. Francis J. Martin directed.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Howling Hollywood"

(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is a combination burlesque on picture production and a mystery drama with an abundance of comedy interspersed, some good and some not so good. The cast is made up of George Davis, Vernon Dent, Fred Spencer, Ella McKenzie, Arthur Housman and Al Thompson, with James Jones directing.

It starts in a motion picture studio where they make bad comedies with the backer of the company demanding that they get some action and some comedy into them. This they determine to do, so they inject a haunted house and take the troupe to it, after which there is plenty of action and all sorts of knockabout comedy.

When midnight arrives in the haunted house clutching hands are revealed, trap doors are sprung, weird figures appear and all together it is quite spooky. Done with sound or effects the picture will improve when shown in a theatre and will doubtless prove a fair attraction where they appreciate this type of comedy.

Vernon Dent and Ella McKenzie provide a good part of the comedy and they do well enough, though most of the laughs will come from the situations. In fact, all of the cast are acceptable. It is a somewhat out of the ordinary story for a two-reeler and moves fast enough after it gets fairly under way to hold the attention.

"Good Night, Nurse"

(Educational-Lupino Lane—2 Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

LUPINO Lane is one of the cleverest comedians of the screen or stage and it is unfortunate that they cannot give him better story material in these short comedies into which to work his inimitable antics. He is certainly versatile and has an unending store of gags and and accomplishments, which are not improved any by the material into which he has to work them.

In this one Lane is a nerve patient, ordered to a sanitorium by a specialist for a complete rest. There are patients there of all descriptions, one in particular having gout and a very much bound-up foot, which Lane repeatedly and repeatedly steps on. In fact, he becomes entangled in one way or another with most of the patients. Then there is a steaming hot radiator, which each in turn, backs into.

Throughout the entire action Lane goes through his complete repertoire of gags and stunts and they are very cleverly executed. He does a dance with a skeleton that is a wow; he goes through contortions and falls that are bound to bring laughs, but there is entirely too much repetition in this picture.

"Tige's Girl Friend"

(Stern-Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

THERE'S not so much of Buster Brown and Mary Jane in this new Stern opus—Tige, a clever dog, and another little canine performer carry the brunt of it. As a result of the dogs' work it is considerably above the usual cut-and-dried funfilms in which Arthur Trimble is so often ineffective. Good screen material for the children but quite tame for adults. Sam Newfield, one of the busiest of the Stern's directors, is credited with this one.

Tige listens to a tale of woe from his little friend who has been hurt by a harsh bulldog. The latter receives a drubbing and Tige returns to reassure his friend that justice has been meted out in a proper manner. So much for the first and best portion of the film. The second sequence occupies most of the second reel and is not as effective as that which precedes, as it deals mainly with a visit of Tige, Buster and Mary to Buster's sick grandpa. The dog upsets the serenity of the hospital when a bee alights on his nose and the events end in a free-for-all among the patients and a wild ride through the streets on grandpa's bed.

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB

By Charles E. Lewis

"The Brotherhood of Showmen"

PRIOR to the organization of the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB, there were probably no two managers who ever communicated with each other, unless they had met previously or were old friends. With the coming of this great society of intercommunication the practise of keeping in touch with one another has become so universal that distance has ceased to be a factor in the friendship of the different members scattered throughout the entire world. Showmen in Kalamazoo think nothing at all of writing a letter to Borneo, British East Indies, or from New York to San Francisco, etc., etc. In fact, the spirit of this idea has caught on so favorably that from various members we learn that their most interesting and profitable pastime is to watch the CLUB columns in the NEWS each week and then sit down and write to the members about the different "stunts" and ideas that were printed in the latest edition.

So, from complete isolation in their various towns, cities and hamlets, the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB became the clearing house where men began to know each other, where their ideas were given publication, where their pictures appeared and so on until now hundreds of theatre managers and exhibitors are intimate friends without having ever seen each other personally. Thus we proudly exclaim, "We are the Brotherhood of Showmen" and every one of us are proud to be members of this great national association of theatre managers.

Whether you are already a member or whether you contemplate joining, see if you can't catch a bit of that famous CLUB "spirit" and try this idea of intercommunication between yourself and your brother managers, see if you don't get a "kick" out of starting an intimate correspondence with some theatre man a thousand miles away, in other words, crawl out of that "den of darkness" and obscurity and let the whole wide world know that you not only are in the business, but that you are an important part of it.—C. E. L.

Dick Kirschbaum Is A Real Showman All The Way Thru'

To read this little story about Dick without seeing his picture might lead you to suspect that he is about 125 years old. Therefore our continuous sermon about getting all the members' photos. We want you to "See and Hear" rather than just hear. Dick hails from the Lincoln Theatre, in Arlington, N. J.

But to get back to the story of Kirschbaum, we must quote a bit of his first letter to the CLUB when he sent us his application—"Am enclosing my application . . . because I feel that I owe it to you and the club. The reason I say this is because I have gotten plenty of enjoyment out of the ideas, and feel that I should reciprocate. . . ."

Dick is entering his second year as a theatre manager after fifteen years as a press agent and exploitation man in the theatrical racket, and if that does not constitute a "hard school of experience" then we must have got out of bed this morning from the wrong side. He knows his onions when it comes to selling the picture and he tackled "Uncle Tom's Cabin" by erecting a log cabin front for his theatre and offering passes to the youngsters submitting the best compositions about this famous story. On the "Barker" he offered passes for the best ballyhoo speech by the youngsters. And he reports that they all fell for it great.

Kirschbaum is also a great believer in the old CLUB argument for members to become affiliated with their local Chambers of Commerce and he is the Director of Publicity for his Chamber, and is also a member of the governing board. Such cooperation is bound to result in plenty of good will for the theatre without going into the great publicity angle that it carries with it.

We know that the other members will be just as anxious as we are to hear from Dick regularly. He is going to make a perfect "active" member. Right?

More Club Gossip About Our Widely Scattered Members

Many of the boys are now sending me their weekly programmes regularly and I want to take this means of thanking them all together. It's a great idea and often provides me with items to comment about in these columns. I hope to be able to report a 100 per cent showing of programmes every week from all the members, so if you have not already done so, PLEASE put me on your regular mailing list.

A. H. R. Miller, by way of introducing his mailing card, sent one to me, and I want to tell you it is a fine piece of mailing matter for any theatre or town. Miller runs the Opera House up in Waynesburg, Pa.

F. M. Boucher, busy resident manager of the Capitol-Colonial & Win Theatres, in Winchester, Virginia, is one of the dependables (that's a new name for activity) who always keeps the CLUB posted on everything of interest about Winchester and the theatres he is running. It's a corking habit and we are all for Boucher in this respect. We're watching the mails F. M. ————?

F. C. Goldquist was one of the first to recognize the great possibilities of the CLUB and he has been a regular ever since he joined. He likes to boil his letters down to hard facts and so his summary of preference between silent and sound pictures reads—"The well done silent picture has my vote every time." And he ought to know, he's been watching the talkies from their first appearance.

Smalley's Sidney Theatre is another house which uses the post card idea for a mailing list and the one which they sent me shows extreme good taste in both composition and set-up. Those of you who rarely or never go into this phase of mailing-lists would do well to try it for a relief from the routine stuff that your customers have been getting.

A. H. Schwartz's Century Circuit utilizes a great idea in a combination program which includes every theatre in their Flatbush group. The booklet is both interesting and well put up and we can readily see that it must be awaited with interest by everyone on the mailing list. We wish we could impress this idea on towns where all theatres are controlled by a single company. It is beneficial to every house and adds dignity to their programs.

Sydney Oshrin (the CLUB's own inventive genius) shows good sense by using a change of program cover often enough to relieve the feeling of monotony from those who must look at it all the time to see what the Allerton Theatre is playing. Variety is the spice of life, so they tell us, and Sydney sure believes in it.

Ray Le Strange, manager of Keith's Central Theatre, in Cedarhurst, L. I., has made up a "Ten Commandments of Theatre Management," and only lack of space prevents our printing it at this time. But if you do not care to wait for publication, then we suggest you drop a line to Ray direct and he will, no doubt, be glad to accommodate with a copy of them. It's good stuff, boys, so get after it.

C. J. Rose Works Up Interest On A "Barker" Front

When Schine's Oneonta Theatre had to sell "The Barker," in that city, C. J. Rose, the live-wire manager of the house decided that a circus front would just hit the town right, and he did not make a mistake either. Witness the photograph herewith and how it takes a drab looking theatre front and livens it up considerably. We only mentioned last week that "atmospheric fronts" were staging a come-back, and already we have received numerous photos showing that the statement was correct. If you have worked any unusual front dressing ideas we wish you would take a snap-shot of it and send it to me. I like to show them because they pep up the front.

Levey Starts Off "Sound" In Beacon With Big Campaign

William A. Levey, an old-timer in the CLUB, was confronted with the serious problem of starting the Beacon Theatre, in Port Washington, L. I., with some sort of an advertising campaign that would give it the proper start. From the newspaper clipping which he recently sent us we are convinced that he accomplished all he set out to do—and more. Front page stories and inside readers all helped to create the intense interest which resulted from his efforts and we can well understand why the reports have reached us that the Beacon is "knocking" 'em dead out on Long Island. So much actually depends on the right start that we should lay particular stress on our advance campaigns so that we can liven up the great tales which we tell them about "sound and the talkies."

Levey sent invitations to over fifty promnient people in his section and they were all there on the opening night of sound. We rather like Bill's expression—"There is nothing wrong with the show business, just give them good shows." That's the spirit that wins every time. Don't get discouraged and lay down because the B. O. has fallen off a little. Those things will happen in the best of theatres. Go out and give them the shows—then watch the business.

Euering Tells Us How He Trained His Theatre Staff

When we mentioned the exceptionally fine staff that Lee J. Euering trained for his Majestic Theatre in Springfield, Ohio, we immediately dropped Lee a letter and asked for some "dope" on how he handled it. His letter is both modest and interesting, and we will quote from it here:

"I consider all my employees equal, but at the same time I do not let them get the upper hand on me or I never would be able to handle them. A few months ago I had the pleasure of going to Detroit, it was my first visit to a big city, in five years. It just happened that they were training ushers for the New Fox, I watched the Drill-Master, and after that I went to the Michigan and United Artists, where I took a back seat, I watched every move and along with what I saw at the Fox, I put them both together, so when I got home I decided to try them out on the home folks. It sure was tough at first, because I had all the boys dressed in evening uniforms with starched collars and shirt front. The natives made fun of the boys, because they made all the bows and so forth, but that didn't daunt me. Now when they come in they expect this service, such as thanking them for their tickets, assisting them with their coats and opening the doors.

"My cashiers have been trained the same way, and it might interest you to know that they have been with me four years. I have always made it a point for my cashiers to find out just what my patrons want, and they have certainly co-operated with me in this way. Each and every patron who purchases a ticket from our B. O. receives a pleasant smile and thank you. Well, Charles, I hope my letter hasn't bored you, for I am a rather "punk" writer, but I haven't had the good luck to attend college, as probably some of your other managers have. Good bye and good luck till next week."

So there you have Lee's own little story and when you stop to consider that he is but twenty-three years of age you must surely marvel at his keen sense of showmanship. We want to hear often from Lee, and so do the other members.

Stevenson's Ads Show Exceptionally Good Lay-Outs

We present here two newspaper ads which were used by D. F. Stevenson, Publicity Director of the Lincoln Theatre, in Trenton, N. J., and a glance will bring out the fact that they have been well laid out for newspaper purposes. First you will note that the theatre name and the feature picture gets the top and best billing in these ads. This is good sense because, after all, it is the theatre and the feature we are selling above everything else. The talking and sound angles are well played up and are not deceiving in any way.

When there is any talking, Stevenson makes sure they know it, but if it is just a sound picture, he gives that phrase sufficient prominence. The policy of "truth in advertising" has apparently been set forth as part of the theatre's policy; and the other attractions are played up according to their importance. We recommend such advertising to all members on the lookout for good copy and many would do well to profit by this example.

I. Hamilton Webb, of the Union Theatres, Ltd., in Australia, was a visitor at CLUB headquarters this week, and we had a most interesting chat with him about his far-off country. Many things were discussed by Mr. Webb which we know you would like to read so we will print a short story about conditions in Australia and how the showmen of that country differ from the showmen here in the United States.

We recommend it to those managers who still believe that all the "good ideas" are created here.

Please Take Note

IT has come to our attention that many managers believe there is a membership or initiation fee charged by the Round Table Club.

This is incorrect. There are no charges of any kind involved with membership in the CLUB. Your only obligation is to keep us posted on your theatre operation and exploitation activities for publication on these pages. C. E. L.

Mid-West Division Manager Resigns

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—John F. Royal, since 1916 manager of the Keith Theatre, in Cleveland, and for the past two years general manager of the midwest division, has announced his resignation from the RCA-Keith-Orpheum circuit, effective April 1st. Royal states as his reason for resigning that he is tired of traveling, and wants more time with his family. He also states that he plans to remain in the show business but does not say what those plans are.

The Dreisler Theatre, Plymouth, is now re-opened under the management of M. C. Barch, of Cleveland.

George Shenker, who tried a two-day a week policy at the Cozy Theatre, Lorain, without success, announces that he is closing the house permanently.

Paul Geyer has notified the Cleveland Film Board of Trade that he closed the Jewel Theatre, Freemont, March 10th. He failed to stated whether this is a permanent or temporary arrangement.

O. S. Taylor has re-opened his Electric Theatre, Irondale. Several weeks ago he closed it because business was poor.

Willis Kent was in town last week making arrangements for the Ohio distribution of "Linda." An announcement will follow shortly.

The Uptown Theatre, new 2,000-seat house, at St. Clair Ave. and East 106th St., and the Variety, built about two years ago, will belong to Warner Brothers, if negotiations now said to be pending, work out satisfactorily. The Uptown and Variety belong to Sam Stecher, Meyer Fine, Abe Kramer and their associates.

The local Universal exchange is getting a new spring dress, including green paint on the walls, newly finished furniture and all new interior decorations.

W. A. Finney, temporarily in charge of the Loew Theatres here following the recent resignation of William Haynes as assistant general manager, states that the Park Theatre is doing a tremendous business since sound has been installed. Business in the house has doubled, Finney says, and it is building constantly.

Phil Selznick, who left the movie business several years ago to open several night clubs, has announced that he will be a candidate for councilman in Shaker Heights, exclusive residence suburb of Cleveland.

Gus McCune, general representative for "Simba," the Martin Johnson jungle picture, is spending several weeks in Cincinnati.

Nate Bigelson, formerly with the Lande exchange here, is now with the newly opened Hi-Mark exchange, which is under the management of B. and C. Oswald.

Loew's Granada Theatre will open with Vitaphone and Movietone March 17th. Loew houses in Cleveland now playing sound programs are the Stillman, Allen, State, Cameo, Circle and Park. Their silent houses are the Mall, Liberty, Doan and Heights. It is highly improbable that sound will be installed in any of these silent houses, it was stated by district manager W. A. Finney.

First Vaude Theatre Wired In Toronto

OTTAWA, CAN.—The first vaudeville theatre in Canada to be wired is Loew's Theatre, Toronto, of which Jules Bernstein has long been manager. He will specialize in popular prices for sound programs, which will also include the regular vaudeville and pipe organ.

Charles Straw, formerly manager of the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been appointed manager of the Palace Theatre, Calgary, Alberta, the latter having been the first super-cinema of the Canadian West, built by the Allens.

Howard Kenvels has returned to the Pantages Theatre, Toronto, this time as manager of what is the largest theatre in the Dominion. In recent years he has been conducting theatres in Montreal and Hamilton.

Arthur McGrory, formerly of the Jackson Theatre at East Weymouth, is handling Victor records in the Film District and has opened offices at 16 Piedmont street.

Baltimore Little Reopened To Public

BALTIMORE, MD.—After having been repainted and redecorated, the Little Theatre, Washington, D. C., has reopened to the public under the auspices of Moviegraphs, Inc., with William Goldman as house manager; Goldman was formerly with the 55th Street Playhouse, New York. Ann Spitzer is acting as publicity representative and Joseph Fleisher is supervisor.

Harry Reddisch, proprietor of the Patterson Theatre, Baltimore, is having the house altered and an addition built to it, costing about $25,000. But this is not interfering with the regular schedule of performances each day.

The new theatre to be built at Laurel, Md., to cost about $75,000 with 1,000 seats, is being promoted by Sidney Lust, Washington, D. C., theatre owner and exchange manager.

A new motion picture theatre to seat 1,000 persons and to cost about $100,000 is to be built at Waynesboro, Va., by the Waynesboro Theatres Corporation. C. H. Hinnant, architect, designed the building.

Due to an ear affliction, Miss Margaret Streeks, secretary to James B. Fitzgerald, of the Film Board of Trade, Washington, D. C., has been confined to a hospital for some weeks. During her absence, Miss Frances Anderson is acting as Mr. Fitzgerald's secretary.

Herman Cohen, formerly with the Cincinnatio M-G-M office, is now covering the Eastern shore of Maryland for that company.

WCBM, Baltimore radio station, has removed its studio from the Chateau Roof uptown to the roof of Keith's Theatre here, managed by J. Lawrence Schanberger.

Jack Stanley, who was succeeded as master of ceremonies at Loew's Century here, is now M. C. at the Mastbaum, Philadelphia.

Sound Equipment On Gain In Iowa

DES MOINES, IA.—E. J. Tilton, manager of the First National exchange, reported that last week they entertained a large group of exhibitors who are installing and buying sound pictures. Among these was Jack Bauma of the Pocohontas Theatre at Pocohontas, who is installing the Biophone; M. A. Brown, of the Forest Theatre at Forest City, who is putting in the Talkafone. Also Otto Parkan, of the theatre at Marengc, who will install the Movietone, was in to buy pictures, while Bert Glenn, of the theatre at Knoxville, was in conference with the exchange manager as to equipment he could buy for the sound pictures and to talk over the schedule of big pictures coming.

O. C. Strine, of the Circle Theatre at Nevada, has been managing the theatre for the court after the house was placed in the hands of receivers last week.

The office of RKO entertained a few visitors last week, including J. E. Michaels of the Strand at Jefferson, W. C. Graham of the Grand at Knoxville, John Waller of the Lyric at Osceola, and O. C. Strine of the Circle at Nevada.

Lewis, Iowa, is to have a motion picture show after several months in which the house has been showing only occasionally. Lewis, which is near Atlantic, Ia., recently voted in the Sunday shows in spite of the fact that several members of the city council were not entirely favorable to the lifting of the ban. The vote of the people gave the Sunday shows a big decision with a 2 to 1 vote. Lewis has never had the Sunday pictures before.

John Anderson of the Princess Theatre at Boone was accompanied by his wife when he called at the office of the Des Moines Theatre Supply Company to discuss new theatre equipment. Mr. Anderson is installing the Biophone, which is handled by Jake Cohen.

John Waller of the Lyric at Osceola last week purchased a rebuilt Powers machine.

Stephens and Puffer of the Granada Theatre at Webster City, Ia., are planning the installation of equipment for handling sound pictures and have purchased the Pacent machinery.

E. Lampman, manager of the Orpheum Theatre, reported an auspicious opening for sound pictures at the Des Moines house and held over the picture feature for the week's run.

Avoca, Iowa, is to have a new motion picture house, reports Ed Harris, who is the owner of the new enterprise. Mr. Harris will build a $20,000 house. Construction was started on March 1. Mr. Harris has secured Ole Lahman to act as manager of the house.

Miss Daisy Tibbets, one of the prettiest brides that Film Row has ever had, was married on March 8 to Richard Campbell, young Des Moines business man. Miss Tibbetts left her desk at the Paramount office on Friday evening and the wedding came as a surprise to her friends of Film Row. She returned to the office on Monday after a short wedding trip and will continue her work as secretary to the Paramount exchange manager for a short time.

Katherine Pillis, cashier of the Educational exchange, spent a few days at her home at Ittumwa, Ia.

Frank Kennebeck, recently of the sales force of the Paramount exchange here and in Des Moines, left to attend the Publix managers' school in New York. His brother, John Kennebeck, is Paramount's general manager in Australia. Both are former Omaha men.

The newly-remodeled Strand Theatre in Council Bluffs, Ia., is being wired for Bristolphone, the device's first installation in Iowa and Nebraska territory. Philip Monsky, manager of Liberty Films, Inc. Omaha, local Bristolphone representatives made the deal. Opening date with sound is tentatively set for March 31.

New Indiana Theatre Co. Incorporates

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Articles of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state of Indiana by the Hill Amusements Corporation, 420 Indiana avenue, this city. The corporation has an initial capital stock of 100 shares of no par value common and is formed for maintaining and operating motion picture houses. The incorporators are James M. Hill, M. J. Doody and Leonard E. Garrison.

Announcement of the sale of the Ritz Theature building here by the Ramley Realty Corporation to Lon Kennedy, a local clothier, is expected to be made shortly. It is understood that the Remley company is to lease the theatre for a term of years and continue its operation and the clothier will move to one of the two large storerooms in the building.

Officials of the M. C. B. Theatre Company of Frankfort, Ind., have filed papers with the secretary of state here, evidencing the final dissolution of the corporation.

Announcement is made that the Tivoli Theatre in Mishawaka, Ind., has closed for the installation of sound equipment. When the theatre is reopened it will be under the management of LeRoy Alexander, of Mishawaka, who has leased the house for a long period. He is the owner for a long period. He is the Gary, Hammond and Chicago.

Talking pictures soon will be shown at the Palace Theatre here in connection with the regular RKO vaudeville bills. Phototone will be installed.

Marion, Ind.—A new theatre here likely will be ready for opening by May 15, according to Donald Graham, architect of Indianapolis. Mark Margolis, of Indianapolis, is the largest stockholder in the project. The theatre will be modern in every respect. A name has not been chosen.

The Indiana theatre at South Bend has announced a change of policy effective March 13. The new policy will include sound pictures and three big time vaudeville acts. Vitaphone equipment has been installed.

Daylight Saving Bill Still In Doubt

ALBANY, N. Y.—Exhibitors in New York state can hope for no relief this summer through any repeal of the present daylight saving law. Legislators at Albany last week decreed that a bill repealing daylight saving should not be reported out of committee.

The Lincoln, in Troy, opened last Saturday night with sound, and the American Theatre is now being wired, but no opening date has been set. Incidentally, Louis Saperstein, manager of the American, is supervising the redecoration made necessary by the recent basement fire in the American.

Tony Veiller, former manager of the Mark Ritz, in Albany, is back from a two weeks' vacation spent at West Palm Beach, Fla.

Stanley Rowland, who has been connected with Dailey and Severance, at the Granville Theatre, has just been named as manager of the Starr Theatre, in Corinth, which has been purchased by Dailey and Severance.

The Strand, in Carthage, has inaugurated a new policy to the end that pictures will be given a two-day instead of a one-day run.

The first of a series of presentations at the Olympic Theatre, in Watertown, managed by L. J. Carkey, started this week when a ten-piece orchestra was featured. The orchestra pit has been enlarged and raised, and a number of other changes made.

The question of Sunday movies for Massena will be settled at a village election on March 19, according to a resolution adopted last week by the village board of trustees. Abe Cohen, of the Strand Theatre, is largely responsible for the present agitation in favor of Sunday shows.

The Bates Theatre, in Mohawk, which has been run by H. Edick, has just been taken over by F. N. Bates.

According to film exchanges, in Albany, the present Lenten season has slackened up business to a considerable extent.

George Thornton, who runs the Orpheum in Saugerties, is making plans to shortly open a house in Tannersville, which he bought at auction, and which was previously owned by Julius Byck.

Harry Hellman, owner of the Royal and Paramount Theatres, in Albany, will spend a week in Atlantic City, during the fore part of April.

Jack Jennings, a representative of Timely Films, was in Albany the past week.

Miss Agnes Fogarty has been presiding at the organ at the Strand Theatre, in Carthage, during the recent illness of Mrs. Robert Ferguson.

Joe Miller, of Buffalo, representing Columbia Pictures, and Lionel Wilcox, assistant manager of the Strand, in Syracuse, stopped over in Albany last week while on their way to New York City. They spent an hour or so with Charles Smakowitz, manager of the Mark Ritz, and a former resident of Syracuse.

E. H. Arnold, of Watertown, manager of the Liberty, was a recent Albany visitor.

Al Marchetti, former booker at the Pathe exchange, in Albany, was in Adams, Mass., during the past week, checking "King of Kings."

UNIFORMS FOR HOUSE ATTACHES COSTUMES FOR STAGE PRESENTATIONS BROOKS 1437 B'way New York

Harmony Amus. Buys Park, Cincinnati

CINCINNATI.—The Harmony Amusement Company, recently incorporated in Cincinnati, with capital of $75,000, by Frank W. Huss, Sr., F. W. Huss, Jr., and Miss Jennie Coleman, has purchased the Park Theatre from Henry Levy, head of the "L" circuit, who operated the house as the Northside Amusement Company. The Hamilton Amusement Company, likewise controlled by Frank W. Huss, Sr., which organization now operates the Americus Theatre, has acquired the Park Theatre from Levy, who conducted the house under name of Nordland Amusement Company. In releasing these two suburban houses, Levy still retains his interest in other theatres in Cincinnati.

Chester Loewe, Cincinnati manager for Independent Pictures, Inc., spent several days in Cleveland in conference with his Forest City connections.

M. White, Cincinnati, and R. J. McLean, Washington Court House, Ohio, have taken a lease on the Colonial Theatre in the latter city. Policy of pictures will be continued.

L. E. Brewer has sold his Folly Theatre, Maysville, Ohio, to Sam Mankins, who has engaged Billy Dillbeck to manage the house.

Plans for a new $100,000 theatre have been drawn by Dayton, Ohio, architects to be erected at Oxford, Ohio. It is understood that the house, which will have seating capacity of 1,000, has already been leased for a 10-year period at a consideration of $65,000, and that Ed Keen, new manager of the Oxford Theatre, will be engaged to handle the new theatre. Names of lessees have not been made public.

Manager Griff Granger, of the Kaypee Theatre, Mt. Gilead, Ohio, now the only house in Morrow county, states that there is a possibility of curtailing showings and going on a two nights' a week schedule on account of decided decrease in patronage.

Announcement was made last week that Canton's, Ohio's remaining two first-run movie houses, will be ready for sound pictures before the month has expired. The Palace, according to Manager Marc Wolf, will open with sound pictures on the 21st. Vitaphone and Movietone equipment have been installed.

The same equipment is being installed at the Valentine, says Manager Joe Calla, and will be ready for use about April 1. The policy of first-run pictures at the Valentine was changed for this week only, and excellent second-run receipts were reported. First-run pictures are booked for this week.

Resigns Managership To Join Publix

ANN ARBOR, MICH.—Richard Watson, manager of the Wuerth Theatre here, has resigned that position to connect up with Publix in New York City as an advertising man in the display writing division. His place at the Wuerth, a Butterfield house, was filled by Ronald Ennis, former assistant manager of the Michigan. Paul W. Seippel, a newcomer to the Butterfield organization with the opening of the Michigan a year ago, was advanced to the position left vacant by Ennis.

New Latonia Opens At Oil City, Pa.

HARRISBURG, PA. — With special dedicatory exercises, the Latonia Theatre, Oil City, Pa., was formally opened to the public on the night of March 4. The Latonia, which was erected at a cost of $300,000, as a new link in the chain of the Imperial Chain Theatres, Inc., has a seating capacity of 1,500. Fine compliments were paid to C. L. Payne, who conceived the idea of building the theatre. The house is equipped with a $25,000 Wurlitzer organ and Vitaphone talkie devices will be installed and ready for use by April 1.

The Park Theatre, Williamsport, owned by Valentine C. Luppert, has a new manager in the person of William Gane, formerly manager of the Regent, Philadelphia.

PLAZA THEATRE
AT COUNTRY CLUB PLAZA
KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI

November 5, 1928.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Co.,
1015 Grand Ave.,
Kansas City, Missouri.

Gentlemen:

As you know the Plaza Theatre which is Kansas City's newest and most modern playhouse has been opened for thirty days.

I take this opportunity to express my thanks for your earnest co-operation in installing the "WURLITZER UNIT ORGAN." We have installed the Vitaphone and Movietone and not until your beautiful Wurlitzer Organ was installed did we feel that every needed attraction had been fulfilled.

We thank you again for the numerous favors and your hearty co-operation.

Very truly yours,

THE PLAZA THEATRE COMPANY.

JFT/FH

The Wurlitzer Organ, with its exclusive features, is an indispensable attraction in every motion picture theatre. To enhance the beauty of performance, the Wurlitzer Organ is supreme.

Extract from Baltimore Sun:

THE SUN, BALTIMORE,

It seems that of all the firms offering talking-picture entertainment, Paramount is accomplishing the trick best. They indicated as much with Interference and The Doctor's Secret, and it seems that they almost prove their point with The Dummy.

Extract from unsolicited letter:

Liberty

A Weekly for Everybody

Just one week ago we had the pleasure of sending you LIBERTY'S three-star review of the Paramount picture "The Doctor's Secret". This picture also called forth that rarity of rarities -- a full page editorial in the same issue congratulating the producers of the picture.

Now, in the issue of March 23rd, another fine Paramount picture, "The Canary Murder Case", also wins LIBERTY'S three-star rating of excellence. Someone might be uncharitable enough to say that this giving of space to Paramount pictures on successive Saturdays smells of a plot on our part! But there's no case! If you people turn out one big picture hit on the heels of another, LIBERTY will continue to take them as they come!

"Big Theatres have come COMEDIES

Royal Theatre sets precedent for Kansas City with display on "The Bride's Relations".

Since Educational's Talking Comedies Took the Industry by Storm

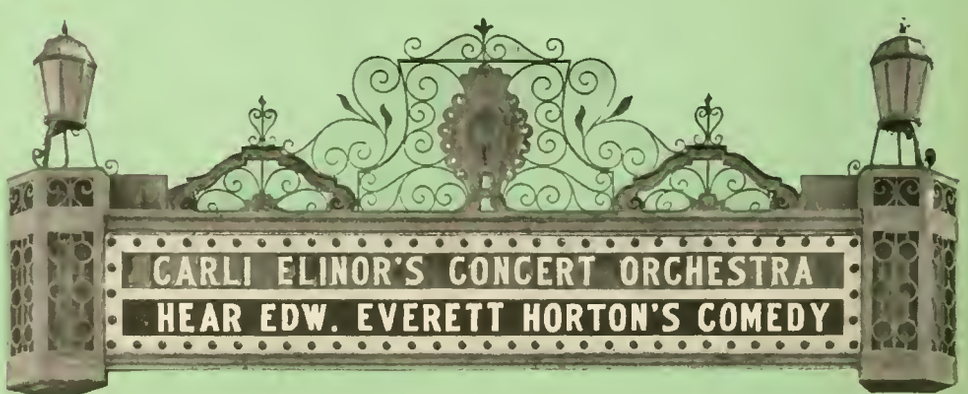
BEGINNING with the very first release Educational's talking comedies have commanded a leading place on the programs—and in the exploitation—of the biggest and finest theatres in the land. And the box-office is showing why.

Read what the Editor of Exhibitors Herald-World says:



"Big theatres in the larger cities were dropping the short features to make room for presentation acts . . . motion picture theatres were drawing further and further away from motion pictures . . .

"With the advent of sound, the short features came promptly back into their own . . . Educational promptly took the cue and today there is a livelier demand than ever for this type of entertainment.

*"Big theatres which dropped the short comedies for acrobats and singers, orchestras and masters of ceremonies, have come back to short features. Comedies are back in style."

Guarantees are only as good as the guarantors who make them! Before investing in sound equipment exhibitors, as intelligent business men should find out something about the organization back of the product; if its past accomplishments, financial stability, integrity and ability to "make good" are such as to warrant their confidence.

SYNCHRONIZATION—Vibrationless. The utmost finesse and precision combined with a sturdiness that will outlast your theatre. Gears and bearings are of the finest material which insures you against the trouble and expense of frequent gear replacement, caused by excessive vibration.

AMPLIFICATION—Full Double Channel System. (2 complete units) is the standard equipment of all Gennett Models. All built into rack and panel combination 69 x 19 x 15 inches—a feature typical only of the highest priced equipments. Built to stand up and perform faithfully, dependably, day after day, year after year.

REPRODUCTION—Without Distortion. GIANT DYNAMICS—cone type or enclosed type for air column horns—specially designed for and so perfectly matched with entire system as to reproduce naturally and with fidelity the entire range of frequencies—from the highest soprano to the lowest bass notes without distortion.

GENNETT SYNCHRONIZER SYSTEMS are so designed that by a simple lever movement you can detach the entire synchronous equipment from your projectors. Thus: 1) You can switch from "talkie" to silent and run your projector on its own power at any speed to conform to time schedules; 2) Keeps current bill down; 3) Saves overtime payrolls.

GENNETT SYNCHRONIZER SYSTEMS are all A-C 110 volt operated and are adaptable to any and all standard makes of projection machines.

One of the outstanding pictures of the year

(Statements contained herein, while not guaranteed by us, are based upon information and advice which we consider accurate and reliable)

There's something funny about this!

Pathe has produced some all talk comedies with George LeMaire, of Broadway fun fame. When we screened them Harry Scott said they were good.

John Flinn took them out to a tryout house nearby and practically wrecked the place with mirth—so he reports.

Phil Reisman heard about it and suggested that we release them to the trade for current consumption. He's commercial.

However, we have decided to limit the distribution of these comedies to only 250 prints of each subject.

WHAT Film DAILY SAYS

"At the Dentists"—Pathe
A Hit

Type of production . . . 2 reel comedy all-talker.

Chalk this down of the ones you can't afford to miss. It's sure fire anywhere as a laugh-getter, and George Le Maire as the dentist piles up the laughs, ably seconded by Louis Simon as the first victim, George Gould as a prize fighter, Helen Knapp as the latter's wife, and Susan Conroy as the nurse. Le Maire has set a high standard in this, his initial production. The skit is cleverly gagged, and expertly directed by Basil Smith. The laughs are beautifully timed, and to us it looks like a model in this respect for all the rest of the sound slingers to shoot at. The first victim, Louis Simon, registers his audible terror, thinking the dentist is murdering a patient in the chair. But the highlight is the climax, with the prizefighter in the chair, and the first victim aiding the dentist in pulling out all his good teeth at the wife's orders. The lines are all spoken, and they are natural laugh-getters. You can't go wrong on this.

Western Electric, working with producers and exhibitors, has made possible a new art of entertainment . . .

Out of a half century's experience, engineers in the Bell Telephone Laboratories developed for Western Electric the first successful system of sound pictures.

This system, which embraces both Vitaphone and Movietone, has been adopted as standard by the country's leading motion picture producers.

These producers, on their part, have had to create a new studio technique to introduce desired sounds into the picture and to keep undesired sounds out.

And exhibitors in more than two thousand theatres have shown characteristic eagerness to serve their public by equipping their houses with the Western Electric sound system. Science, art and business, working shoulder to shoulder have accomplished it

Hear leading stars of motion pictures, opera, concert and stage in lifelike renderings when you see them on the screen.

Hear and see the world's greatest personalities as they talk from the screen.

Hear intelligent orchestral accompaniment to feature pictures—played from the screen.

Hear the actual roar of the airplane, the thunder of galloping hoofs, the scream of the locomotive's whistle.

What was yesterday's dream is today's fact. And tomorrow? Here is an art now in the early stages of its development which is revolutionizing the field of motion picture entertainment.

Even in the theatre projection booth, Sound Pictures have brought a new technique, which Western Electric equipment serves.

Key Carrier Or Manager?

The Chain Theatre Employee Wants To Know

By William A. Johnston

ONE of the most important elements in this industry is the chain theatre manager. There is too little recognition of this fact. Yet the success of the business, to an increasing degree, is dependent upon the chain theatre manager and the treatment accorded him from above.

If any proof is needed of the great interest in this subject we can furnish it: never in our history as a publisher have we seen so large and so instantaneous a reaction as that given to Harold B. Franklin's article, "Were I a House Manager".

Letters are pouring in from exhibitors, both chain and independent. Without exception they are pointed and vigorous.

The issue seems to us clear cut: thousands of house managers in this country want to know whether they are to be considered as having brains or are just to operate as automatons? Whether they are men or robots? Whether there is prospect of real opportunity ahead, without which no man can handle successfully the job he already has or whether they are under an iron roof of home office dictatorship?

This is plainly the import of the letters we are receiving. One of the most vigorous of these communications is from a manager whose name we are not permitted to quote, but who says: " Just sign it 'Another Key Carrier'."

Mind you, this exhibitor is now working for a circuit because he had already shown what he could do in the employ of a larger chain. Referring to our editorial he says: "I can appreciate your article fully, because I am in exactly the predicament you mention — too many higher-ups, all with their own ideas and each contradicting the other. What is the result? I, as the glorified porter, am the goat. . . . To make matters worse, I am working for people I consider shoemakers so far as the show game is concerned— people who have no more idea of how a theatre should be conducted than the proverbial man in the moon. If business is good, it's because we have good shows—if it's rotten, it's because I don't know my business".

Is there any reason for such business folly on the part of chain executives?

Are chain theatre managers to be mere key carriers or are they to be given every opportunity to function as real managers?

A National Sales Manager Speaks His Mind

One of the greatest sales minds in the industry will handle the chain theatre situation without gloves in next week's issue.

One of his startling statements is: "The chain theatres should keep independent opposition alive".

Again: "The best operated chain is only fifty per cent efficient".

Arbitration Defense In U. S. Government Suit Being Completed In New York City

Case Will Continue Until Next Week, When Eight Exhibitor Witnesses Will Be Presented

THE attorneys for the Film Boards of Trade completed their defense of the Arbitration Boards before Federal Judge Thatcher in the U. S. Court on Friday last on the Government's charge of conspiracy and coercion. C. Stanley Thompson, chief of the Government counsel, will get into action on Monday and present a number of exhibitor witnesses to the court. The case will undoubtedly take until the end of next week before all the witnesses are heard.

At the end of the session on Thursday, after the adjournment of Court, Judge Thatcher stated as he left the bench, when Edwin P. Grosvenor, trial counsel for the defense, stated that he believed that he would complete his defense by Friday afternoon, that he would be quite willing to concede that the counsel had already completed it.

Clash Of Counsel

On Tuesday while Jack M. Greenberg, of the Philadelphia Board, was on the stand there was a clash of counsel. Edwin P. Grosvenor of defense counsel was beginning to take him page by page through a bulky Government exhibit, giving samples of arbitration cases. Judge Thatcher wanted to know the point.

"Do you claim that this file shows the system is unfairly operated after the exhibitors are once in it?" he asked C. Stanley Thompson, special assistant to the Attorney-General.

"Assuming that the system has been set up, whether legally or not, will you say that these boards have acted in an impartial and unbiased way, reaching the best conclusion they could as honest business men?"

Thompson said he was ready to concede that there was no evidence in the file of actual bias, but insisted that by the setup—perhaps fifteen distributors in a territory, naturally closer together than fifteen hundred exhibitors, each group having three representatives on the arbitration board—there was an inherent disadvantage to the exhibitor.

"Yes, but that's the fault of the setup," said the Judge.

The two attorneys and their associates pressed before the bench, and finally those for the defense said they were satisfied with Thompson's concession

The Government has introduced eight volumes of arbitration proceedings from cities representative of all sections of the country, each exhibit having about two hundred pages. Under the Government's concession the defense attorneys seemed to think a stipulation could be reached reducing this to about sixteen typical cases for the whole country, and the Judge instructed the two groups of attorneys to frame it.

This was the decision arrived at by the opposing sides when they reappeared on Wednesday afternoon. On Thursday, the secretary of the New York Film Board was called upon the stand as a witness.

Paul Lazarus Returns To United Artists

PAUL N. LAZARUS is to resume his post as sales promotion manager for United Artists next week. This announcement was made last week by Al. Lichtman, sales manager of the organization. Lazarus was one of those who stepped out of the corporation several weeks ago when a sweeping change of personnel was effected. He had been with the organization since 1919.

Lazarus has been in the film industry for 13 years and in that time was associated with but two companies, Vitagraph and United Artists.

No Deal Between Sonora and T.-S.; Phonofilm Hitch?

Schlesingers And Members Of Bristolphone Combination Unable To Get Together

The rumored deal between Sonora-Bristolphone and Tiffany-Stahl was denied in New York as well as on the coast. In Hollywood Grant L. Cook for T.-S. branded the report as ridiculous.

This week it was reported that there was a great deal of difficulty being experienced by those active in the affairs of Sonora-Bristolphone to bring about a deal with the Schlesingers who are in control of the DeForest Phonofilm rights. One of the Bristolphone executives in speaking of the negotiations stated that he did not believe that the factions would come to an understanding.

One of the side issues of the Bristolphone will be a home talker. Charles Rogers is said to have this worked out and in manufacture. The device will be attachable to all home projectors to synchronize with 16 mm. film. A number of short subjects on this width film have already been made. The "home talker" will market for about $40 retail. There are about 250,000 home machines now in the field.

Fifty Talking Pictures From M-G-M In '29-'30

Mayer, Thalberg and Rubin Remain As Executives of Company

Announcement was made by Irving Thalberg this week on his return to Culver City in which he stated that M-G-M would continue to function as an individual organization and would make fifty talking productions for the season 1929-30.

Thalberg who came east of his own volition with Louis B. Mayer and Robert Rubin, returned to the coast when he, together with Mayer and Rubin discovered that they could not be released from their contracts. The trio wanted to quit immediately on their arrival in New York and tendered their resignations with a request that they be permitted to tear up their contracts. This both William Fox and Schenck refused to listen to.

Thalberg's Statement

Thalberg returned to the coast last week after several conferences with Fox and Winfield Sheehan, Mayer and Rubin remaining in New York.

In the statement issued on the coast, Irving Thalberg stated:

"1929-30 will be our greatest picture season.

"After a conference with my associates Louis B. Mayer, J. Robert Rubin and Nicholas M. Schenck, in New York, we have completed our plans for fifty talking pictures with complete silent versions.

"I would like to make a definite statement that the integrity of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization will be preserved. It it recognized as being one of the foremost organizations in the business and will continue as such.

"Mr. Mayer, Mr. Rubin and I have given assurance to the people in our studio that we are to be a progressive separate organization.

"We state unreservedly that the confidence that the theatregoing public of the world has shown in our product during the last five years will be more than justified in the coming season."

It is known that had Mayer, Thalberg and Rubin been successful in having their contracts torn up as they requested that they were ready to start a production organization of their own, almost immediately.

Les Jordan Of RKO Dead From Attack Of Pneumonia

Pneumonia, aggravated by heart attacks, took Les Jordan, sales promotion manager of RKO, last Wednesday evening at his home in Newark, N. J. He was close to fifty at his demise and is survived by his wife and two daughters. Mr. Jordan edited the Master Showman, RKO house organ, and handled publicity for FBO for seven years.

Booth Troubles Delay Opening Of U's "Show Boat"

Report States 2 Operators Were Kidnapped And Machines Damaged

A report from Miami, Fla., states that the first showing of "Show Boat," Universal's talkie special, was unable to be held on account of damage done to the projection apparatus of the Capitol theatre and the alleged mysterious disappearance of operators who were to project the picture. The premiere was delayed until the fotlowing day.

A Universal representative made the announcement of the trouble after several of the guest artists had rendered some preliminary entertainment and a fashionable audience of about 1,500 persons disappointedly filed out of the Capitol after assurance that a refund would be made and that the showing would be held as soon as possible. Several well known film notables in the audience endeavored to obtain a transfer of the show to another Miami house but this plan was found to be impractical.

What became of the operators and what caused the damage to the projection apparatus is a matter of conjecture. The report states that the men failed to be at their posts at the necessary time. Last seen they were at a next door drug store drinking a soda. No explanation is advanced as to how the machines became unfit for a proper projection of the picture.

The Capitol theatre is owned and operated by Sidney Meyers, co-partner with Mitchelt Wolffson, both well known exhibitors of the South.

Stage Hands And Operators Strike In Cambridge, O.

Stage hands and operators walked out of the Colonial and Strand Theatres, Cambridge, Ohio, Thursday night, March 8, after the evening performance was over, although a settlement had been made by an I. A. T. S. E. representative, Edward Tinney. The strike, however, had no effect on business as "The Singing Fool" brought capacity audiences all week to the Colonial.

Charnas, Waxman To Handle Warner Bros. Road Shows

Warner Bros. announce that Harry Charnas and A. P. Waxman will head the newly organized road show department of the company. They will be in charge of road show engagements of "Noah's Ark" and other Vitaphone special productions, but will also continue in their present posts with the Warner organization. The first assignment undertaken by them will be the opening of "The Singing Fool" at Shubert's Majestic in Brooklyn on April 7.

"Show Boat" Knockout, Says William A. Johnston, News' Editor, At Miami Premiere

Predicts Universal Talkie Will Break All Existing Picture Records At Resort And Like-size Cities

By WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON
Editor, Motion Picture News

MIAMI, FLA., March 19.—"Show Boat" is a knockout and will rank among the ten best pictures of this year.

The operators' walkout at the local premiere at the Capitol Theatre had a big publicity rebound, so that the picture started with extraordinary ballyhoo, but even so, it is gaining daily in genuine popularity and after running continuously from eleven thirty in the morning for two days, an extra morning show at nine-thirty is now necessary.

The management announces that the picture will run through the month of May but at least several weeks will be needed, which will break all records here and in other cities of this size.

The picture needs pruning, especially in those sequences where suspense is too prolonged, and this also applies to some LaPlante closeups, but on the whole there is a wealth of audience interest which puts the show over with a bang!

Action is swift and the acting is of the highest order. The backgrounds are spacious and colorful and Laura LaPlante is a revelation. Joseph Schildkraut adds to his best exhibition on the screen about the finest voice register the talkies have so far produced. The sound drama of the story has been skillfully retained.

Practically every performance so far has had box office lines, evidently attracting here a new movie patronage.

"Divine Lady" Premiere At Warners March 22

AN earlier than expected premiere for "The Divine Lady," the First National special production, occurs this Friday, March 22, at the Warner's Theatre in New York City. Arrangements had been under way for some time to secure a theatre for the picture and the decision for its Warner's showing was hastened by the fact that the star will soon embark on a European trip.

Nat Shilkret has composed a theme song, "Lady Divine," for the film and Richard Kountz has done the lyrics. Victor has already made two records of the song.

Gloomy Business Forces 5 Sparks Houses to Close

Running Time Of Circuit's Other Florida Projects Cut To Ease Condition

That E. J. Sparks, head of Peninsular Theatres and Publix-Saenger-Sparks houses in Florida, has ordered the immediate closing of five theatres in that state, it has been learned. The houses affected are the Queen, at Ft. Lauderdale; Omar, at Ft. Myers; Athens, at DeLand; Phillips, at Orlando; and the Princess, at Sanford.

This action was taken, it is understood, as a result of conditions in the sections affected, attendance being so small that it was not considered good business policy to continue to keep the five houses open.

The running time of the Star, at Arcadia, another Sparks house, has been cut to three days a week, and it is thought probable that this same plan will be put into effect in houses at Plant City, Kissimmee and Palmetto. It is also understood that, beginning about April 15, the Sparks circuits will close a number of their larger Class B houses for certain days in the week, and confine operation to four days in seven-day towns, and three days in six-day towns, and there is also a probability that some of the Sparks Vitaphone houses will temporarily suspend operation after May 1, until the Fall season begins.

Associated Theatre Head Enthusiastic Over Talkies

Charles L. Casanave, of Associated Theatres, Chicago, is enthusiastieally in favor of talking pictures, according to a statement credited to him while in Cleveland, Ohio, on a hooking trip for the Ohio houses he represents.

Mary Pickford Proves A Sensation In Dialog Version Of "Coquette"

By EDWIN SCHALLERT
Editor of The Los Angeles Times Preview and Special Correspondent of Motion Picture News
By Hollywood Wire, March 21

SCORE another sensation for the talkies. "Coquette" will be just that. In it Mary Pickford has made the transition to the new medium with flying colors. This feature, which is all dialog with no silent version even scheduled, is an emotional thriller and proves that Mary is a pioneer in voice film just as she was in the mutes of the olden days.

Just Misses Heavy Tragedy

The story is from the stage play produced in New York by Jed Harris in which Helen Hayes was starred. It is the next thing to heavy tragedy. There is just a suggestion of light shining through the clouds at the finish, but the rest is plenty heart-throbbing and weepy.

"Coquette" classes perhaps as the first real star picture, outside of the two Al. Jolsons, to appear in the new spoken word form. It is the first big film produced by a big old-line picture star and favorite.

Everybody in the industry wondered how Mary's voice would sound when she got around to making a talkie. But they scarcely expected that she would make her first venture before the "mike" with a characterization that required the adoption of an accent, especially a southern accent. The adoption of this drawl adds much to the charm of the production, it softens, too, the rigors of the change, and with the bobbed hair and all, Mary seems to be a new personality.

Mary Pickford's oldtime admirers will probably regard with mixed emotion her advent into the spoken film. However, she has done the deed with characteristic skill and efficiency. Minus those deficiencies which the new medium naturally still possesses, she has made a great picture—one that will win her a new public, and excite most widespread curiosity among the fans she has in tremendous numbers for her past successes.

Concentrated Pathos

"Coquette" is concentrated pathos, climaxing in scenes where a girl is torn between her love for a boy and her devotion to her father. There are two scenes that will have audiences nearly hysterical, but despite the fact that most women will be a wreck for the balance of the afternoon or evening on which they see the picture they will not want to miss it. Johnny Mack Brown, John St. Polis and Matt Moore are among the leading principals, and Sam Taylor has done a splendid job of direction. But it is decidedly Mary's picture and she proves that she is an actress.

"Hearts In Dixie" Again Leads Los Angeles Theatres

"Broadway Melody" And "Iron Mask" Also Double Normal Week's Trade

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 21.—Not a bad week this last one—three pictures doubled normal business and one of the trio even went another 50 per cent over for good measure. Two others garnered a 50 per cent increase, two more were normal and the remaining one skidded to what may be termed very poor business.

"Broadway Melody," in its sixth week, demonstrated its strength by getting $33,500 at Grauman's Chinese, double normal trade, and "Hearts in Dixie," at United Artists, made it another week of better than doublely grossing $25,000. The other picture up with the leaders was "The Iron Mask," which registered 200 per cent, or $25,000, for its first week at the Carthay Circle.

In its second week at the Criterion, "Abie's Irish Rose" was 50 per cent up, getting $16,000 and, while only two days' figures are available at this time on "Sonny Boy," at Warners Hollywood, this picture showed a 50 per cent normal gait. It is in for an indefinite run.

"Why Be Good?" went along to even business at Loew's State, taking in $28,000 and "Chinatown Nights" was another 100 per center for 7 days at the Paramount with $30,000.

The backward child for the week was "Queen of the Night Clubs," which only did $16,000 on the last leg of its two weeks' run at Warners Hollywood, or a fifty-five per cent trade. These figures are the lowest this house has had for weeks.

"Redskin" Rolls Up High Percentage In South East

The highest percentage revealed in last week's figures for Dixieland indicate "Redskin" as a winner, it having rolled up a percentage of 199 in Macon and 107 in Chattanooga.

Other films that made out well were "Synthetic Sin," which did business to the tune of 190 per cent at Tampa, "The Canary Murder Case," which returned 125 per cent at Memphis; "The Dummy," totaling 104 per cent at Tampa; "The Leathernecks," chalking up 110 per cent at Tampa, and "Simba," which grossed 104 per cent at Chattanooga. As is apparent, Tampa had the better of the argument, and showed even another winner in "Red Wine," which did 110 per cent. Its one setback was "Desert Nights," which showed only 75 per cent. "Old Arizona" went over in Atlanta.

Average results were had by "Children of the Ritz," "Wolf of Wall Street," "Gang War," "Godless Girl," "Behind Closed Doors," "Flying Cowboy," "Duke Steps Out."

Exhibitors Show Keen Interest At Sound Meet

Over 200 Gather In Philly To Investigate Different Types Of Apparatus

More than 200 exhibitors of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, comprising the largest gathering to respond to a special meeting of that organization, assembled at the Elks Club in Philadelphia, Friday, March 15, to hear from representatives of various companies offering apparatus for sound reproduction in theatres, and discussions of various problems connected with the technical and economic phases of sound presentations.

Questions concerning the increased cost of film rentals brought the statement from the representative of RCA Photophone that sound has greatly increased production costs. Dr. Lee De Forest, one of the principal speakers, told the exhibitors that in his opinion the ultimate in speakers will be a device involving nothing so "clumsy, so inherently imperfect as a diaphragm or any description," and that such a device would be perfected in the next five years, he believed. It was also brought out that RKO will record both on film and discs during the immediate future, and that Tiffany-Stahl, whose pictures are synchronized by the Photophone method, also will offer disc and film recorded synchronization with all future releases.

The heavy attendance emphasized the eagerness which exhibitors throughout the country are displaying in their study of the situation and their determination to investigate all types of equipment available before selecting the equipment they will install. The morning session was devoted to addresses by representatives of various companies making and distributing reproducing apparatus. The assembled exhibitors listened attentively to descriptions of the various machines, patiently giving their attention to several high-pressure sales talks for the manifest purpose of obtaining every bit of useful information that might be gleaned from any source.

That maintenance costs, service fees, and the adaptability of the available apparatus

Pola Negri Leaves "The Queen's Necklace" Cast

(Poris Correspondent, Motion Picture News)

Paris, March 14.—Pola Negri, who was to have started production about this time on the "Queen's Necklace" in Paris, for Aubert release, is said to have broken her contract because of dissatisfaction with working conditions and the continuity. It is rumored that she will be replaced by Ganna Walska and it is hoped to make talking and singing sequences, Aubert having signed with Western Electric for both theatre and studio installations.

Miss Negri, meanwhile, announces she will begin a production in six weeks in England.

Producers Race To Be The First On B'way With $3 Sound Film; "Cocoanuts" Or "Show Boat"?

"Coquette" Premiere Set For Rivoli In April

MARY PICKFORD'S all-talking picturization of "Coquette" will have its world premiere at the Rivoli Theatre in New York some time in April depending upon the completion of the run of "The Iron Mask." It will follow immediately upon the conclusion of that picture. Miss Pickford will be seen for the first time in a grown-up dramatic role.

Fox Rushing "Follies", Sono-art Looking For House For Eddie Dowling Film; Warner's Also Have One

THERE is a race on between the producers to be the first on Broadway with a musical comedy talking and sound film with an admission scale of $3 top. At present there are five pictures of this type all in the final stages of production headed for Broadway. It is a question which one of them will have the honor of the title "The First $3 Motion Picture" and go down into history as such as did "The Birth of a Nation" as the first $2 picture.

Paramount has the production of "Cocoanuts" with the Four Marx Brothers, which was made at the Long Island Studios of the company. It was previewed at the big Paramount one night this week and found to be packed with laughs. There are the musical numbers by Irving Berlin, one of which is sure to be a seller. The picture was rather lengthy, running almost ten reels and the preview was for the purpose of finding where to cut an additional 500 feet out of the film. Mary Eaton and Oscar Shaw carry the burden of the musical end of the production while the Marx Bros. attend to the comedy. Groucho, Harpo and Chico, of the Marx clan, do the major portion of the work with Groucho the hardest worked of the trio. There are at one time 48 girls on the stage, but for most portions either 12 or 24 girls are used for the numbers.

Will Use Wide Screen

For the big scenes the wide screen is going to be used to give the effect of immensity. The road show department of Paramount, with A. Griffith Gray in charge, is known to be planning a $3 top admission scale for this production when it is finally set for a Broadway house within the next few weeks.

Universal has already taken a lease on the Globe Theatre for the New York showing of "Show Boat" and expect to bring that picture into town about April 15, following the closing of the Fred Stone for this to be a $3 picture. The seats for the New York opening are to be priced at $25 each and the plans are to make the premiere the biggest event to date of its kind in filmdom. Henry L. Young, manager of the Globe, was the first to introduce the $3 scale for musical comedy attractions,

Katz Enroute To The Coast Denies Tale Of RKO Deal

No Chance Of Publix-RKO Operating Plan At Present; May Develop Later

Sam Katz, president of Publix Theatres, left for the Coast on Thursday. Before taking the train he denied that there had been any deal consumated whereby Publix would operate the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Circuit. This was in line with the denials that had been issued by Hiram S. Brown, president of R-K-O. It is reported, however, that with the return of David Sarnoff, the RCA executive, from abroad, there is a possibility that the deal may be revived.

Katz refused to state the purpose of his present trip to the Coast. He had just returned from a vacation in Cuba and Florida, and he was not contemplating the trip to the west at this time. Developments in the fight between the Fox West Coast houses and the Publix operated theatres in San Francisco and Los Angeles may be the cause for the trip at this time.

Roach Launching Series Of Talkies With Star Casts

The Hal Roach stars appearing in comedies released by M-G-M will launch production on a dozen all-talkie comedies, the first of which will be released May 4. Four now in work are "Small Talk," with Our Gang; "Their Last Word," with Laurel and Hardy; "The Big Squawk," with Charley Chase, and "Noisy Neighbors," with the Roach stars. Each of the units will contribute three.

Roach left New York this Wednesday after a flying trip to New York. All of the Roach players have had stage experience.

Brandt First New York Exhibitor To Be Paid Off By Fox

Received $25,000 This Week On Account Until Final Closing: Fox Starts Operating Apr. 1

William and Harry Brandt were the first exhibitors in the Metropolitan area that have received payments on the account of the sale of their houses to William Fox. William Brandt received $25,000 on Monday as a partial payment until such time that the final closing of contracts takes place. The Fox Circuit will take over the active operation of the theatres as of April 1.

All of the Brandt houses are located in Brooklyn. A complete list of their holdings enumerate fourteen theatres. They are the Atlantic, Biltmore, Bunny, Carlton, Cumberland, Duffield, Emblem, Empress, National, Ocean, Park Side, Roof Garden, Stratford and Terminal. Of these Fox has taken ten houses.

Work on installing sound wiring systems has been in progress on the houses for several weeks and in five the wiring has been completed. The additional five are now being wired. It is expected that when the houses go over to Fox on April 1 all will have sound installed.

William Brandt entered the exhibiting ranks on the lower West Side in New York some fifteen years ago. He was one of the leading factors in exhibitor organization in New York City and State and has been president of the M. P. T. O. A. of New York as well as president of the T. O. C. C. for several terms. It was Brandt who was responsible for the inauguration of the Film Board arbitration system in New York between the F. I. L. M. Club and the T. O. C. C. long prior to the plan being generally adopted throughout the country.

Palace In N. Y. Does Three-A-Day Against Film Houses

The Palace, New York, star house of the R-K-O circuit, went to three-shows-a-day last Sunday, for Sundays only. The purpose of this was to provide direct opposition to the film houses. The regular two-a-day film attractions play three-a-day on Saturday and Sunday. Over the weekends the two extra performances in the picture houses manage to boost the receipts considerably on the week.

Fannie Brice Will Start Talkie In June For U. A.

Fannie Brice will start work June 1 for United Artists on an all-talking and singing film. Billy Rose, whom Miss Brice recently married, is writing the story directly for the screen and is composing the music as well.

Paramount Sells Stock To Canadian Interests

A SUBSTANTIAL block of Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation stock holdings in the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, has been disposed of to Canadian interests, thus insuring continued Canadian control of the enterprise. Adolph Zukor stated that there will be no change in the management or officers of the Canadian company. The franchise agreement between Paramount Famous Lasky of New York and Famous Players Canadian runs until 1932. The sale of Paramount's holdings in the Canadian corporation has no bearing on the franchise.

Famous Players Canadian shares, having a nominal value of $25, have jumped to $52. Talking pictures have had considerable to do with the rise in the securities, it is conceded.

Producers Race For First Three Dollar Showing

and later was responsible for the $4.40, $5.50 and $6.60 admission scales which the other houses along the street followed.

William Fox has had in preparation at his Coast studios a "Fox Follies" for more than nine months. Portions of this picture are said to have finally been shot on the wide measure film. Originally it was framed as a revue type of entertainment, but lately it has been revamped and a love story substituted, with the blackout portions only playing an incidental part in the general scheme. When a thread of story was first suggested on which to hang the revue idea it was rejected by the production supervisor, but since the folly of a series of unconnected scenes was realized after a couple of hundred thousand dollars had been spent, and now the "Fox Follies" is also in the race for the Main Stem at $3 top.

Dowling Looks Around

Eddie Dowling's musical comedy production, which has been made by Sonoart, is also looking for a Broadway house with the Cohan in view for the summer, and also with the $3 top idea at the box office.

The Warner Bros. are getting finished on "On With The Show," which they figure as a $3 top possibility and will bring to Broadway with that idea in mind.

It now remains to be seen which will be the first of them to arrive.

With the success that "The Broadway Melody" has had and continues to have it would not be hard to put up a $3 top scale for that production over the week ends. The box office might as well get that price as the speculators who are charging $3 and more for the picture on Saturday and Sunday nights. "Weary River" when it opened put a $2.50 top scale in effect at the Central over Saturday and Sunday and that scale still being operated makes it possible for the house to run up an unusual gross.

Decision Favors Jetta Goudal In Hollywood Suit

Clause Defining "Outbursts" Will Shortly Be Inserted In All Contracts

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Mar. 21.—A new clause in actor-producers contracts, definitely defining temperament, will be inserted shortly as a result of the decision favoring Jetta Goudal in her suit against Pathe Studios, Inc., handed down in Los Angeles Superior Court by Judge Yankwich. Miss Goudal was awarded a judgment of $31,000, having sued for $100,000, claiming breach of contract. The studio's defense was that they were compelled to discharge her by reason of her temperamental outbursts.

In deciding in favor of the actress, Judge Yankwich ruled that the obedience of an artist is not the obedience of a menial, and that she has a legal right to so-called fits of temperament. In other words, the court held that the value of Jetta Goudal, discharged by the company largely because of her bursts of artistic temperament, lay not in her ability to obey slavishly, for the humblest extra can do that, but in her ability to inject the force of personality, experience and intelligence in her acting.

This decision, according to attorneys, cannot help but result in a new relationship between actors and producers in the drawing of future contracts. There is too wide a scope in "temperament" to protect the interests of producers. Some definite description of what liberties can be accorded a player, and just what constitutes "temperament" will have to be included in contracts.

Much Sought After Hartford House Goes to Publix

Publix is said to have picked a choice plum from the Connecticut theatre tree when this company announced securing a lease on the Allyn Theatre, Hartford, Conn.

The Allyn is the property of Robert J. Allyn and Dorothy Bell Allyn Seymour and report has it that this house has long been sought by a number of prominent New England theatre-operating companies.

Lease was negotiated by the Allyn branch of Clarence W. Seymour of Hartford. Western Electric sound equipment is being installed and Publix will assume operation March 23.

Drumbar City Manager

to immediate or future application of both types of recording—disc and film track—are factors receiving great considerations by exhibitors in determining their future course was evident in the questions put to the various speakers by the members present.

Interchangeability bobbed up in the course of some questions addressed to the representative of RCA Photophone. The latter declared that "interchangeability is as dead as a doornail." Regarding the increased cost of film production, he said he was not qualified to speak authoritatively on that, but gave it as his opinion that the producers are spending large sums in the production of sound films, due to the fact that the talking picture has caused a revolution in Hollywood, with large turnover in the ranks of the stars and directors, difficulties in recording caused by outside noises of automobiles, aeroplanes, etc.

Regarding the addition of "sound heads" for reproduction of film recorded sound as added equipment for machines now providing only for disc reproduction, the representatives of several companies said that they were preparing to make their equipments "dual reproducers" in the near future. The representative of the Pacent company said that film-track reproducers would be available with the Pacent machine, now exclusively a disc reproducer, within a couple of months. Jesse Goldburg, representing the General Talking Pictures, Corp., distributors of the De Forest Phonofilm, said that a disc attachment had been perfected for that machine and would be available soon.

At the conclusion of talks by representatives of RCA Photophone; Silver-Marshall, Inc.; Johns-Mansville Company; Biophone; Master; Sonora-Bristolphone; Powers Cinephone; Royal Amplitone; Melotone; Reeltone; Pacent; Traveltone, and other equipment companies, the meeting was addressed by R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A.

In a set speech, delivered in the typical Woodhull style, the president of the national organization told his audience that on a recent trip he saw theatres doing tremendous business with pictures which judged by pre-sound standards were not up to even "program grade" merely on the strength of the public's interest in sound. But he warned his hearers to "go slow" and hold out from the sound policy as long as possible.

"Hallelujah" Trailer Will Combine Sound And Titles

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 21.—In making the sound talking trailer for King Vidor's "Hallelujah," Pete Smith, publicity head of M-G-M studios, will combine sound with titles in selling the picture to theatre patrons in advance.

Smith has developed a system of double exposure of motion black-outs with sound; with sales titles in the center of the frame.

All Broadway Grind Houses Except Two With Holdovers Do Better Than 100% Average

E. V. Richards, Jr., who was elected president of Saenger Theatres, Inc., to succeed Julian H. Saenger, with whom he founded the Saenger circuit

E. V. Richards Jr. Is Elected Chief Of Saenger Chain

E. V. Richards, Jr., has been elected president of the Saenger Theatres, Inc., affiliated with Publix, succeeding Julian H. Saenger, who is made chairman of the board of directors. Formal announcement of the election held February 25th was made by Mr. Richards Wednesday, March 13. No changes in the corporation's policies were announced. All other officers were re-elected.

Saenger Theatres, Inc., owns and operates 150 theatres in 50 cities in Dixie, and also owns a chain of theatres in Panama, Havana and some Central American cities. Mr. Richards founded the company twelve years ago with Julian Saenger, A. D. Saenger and L. M. Ash.

Fox To Put Dialogue Into Films Planned As Silents

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 21.—Fox, heretofore one of the most conservative companies in the making of talkies despite its greatest outlay for equipment, is becoming more aggressive and has decided to put dialogue into at least five of eleven pictures intended as only silent releases until last week. Of the six remaining, it is estimated three will be switched to dialogue versions as well, making a total of eight.

The eleven in production which were slated for only silent versions include "Our Daily Bread," "The Grouch Bag" (also temporarily titled "Empty Arms") "The River," "The Far Call," "Joy Street."

Roxy Anniversary Gets $136,754; "Canary Murder" Does $80,000; Capitol And Strand Both Drop

EVERYONE of the Broadway motion picture houses operating on a grind policy, whether weekly change or playing runs, with the exception of two, last week did better than 100 per cent of their average business. In the two-a-day houses things weren't as good as that for but three of eight houses showed over the 100 per cent mark. This business was done despite cold and rainy weather.

Among the grind houses the two that failed to come up to the mark both had holdover attractions. They were the Capitol, which was playing "Alias Jimmy Valentine" for its second week, and the Strand, which had held over Fannie Brice in "My Man." The former house played to $65,831.60, which made it a total of $142,440.50 for the two weeks. The Strand got $30,000 last week, which gave it $71,572 for the fortnight.

The Roxy celebrated its Second Anniversary with a special stage show and "Speakeasy," a corking Fox talker. With a heavy advertising campaign behind it that must have cost over $25,000 the house played to $136,754.25, with the result that the show was held over for the current week. The Paramount, with "The Canary Murder Case," played to $80,700, which was enough to have them hold the picture over there. They did, however, switch their stage show for this week, putting in a new Publix Revue.

Velez Over The Top

Top percentage rating for business on the street went to the Mexican Hot Tamale, Lupe Velez, who is making personal appearances at the Rialto with her picture "Lady of the Pavements," a D. W. Griffith production. The little star is doing five shows a day with the result that the business reached a percentage rating of 156 1/10 on a gross of $44,800. Douglas Fairbanks in "The Iron Mask,' in its third week at the Rivoli, played to $35,100 for a percentage of 124 3/10.

Even the Colony last week managed to go over the average. The attraction at that house was the Columbia talking production "The Younger Generation," which, with a strong stage show, attracted $12,562 to the box office, and made the figure for that house 107 1/5 per cent. Even the little Cameo did the trick with "That Murder In Berlin," a gross of $6,000 figuring 101 per cent for that little house.

"The Broadway Melody," at the Astor, is the percentage leader of the two-a-day runs, with a rating of 164 4/5, the picture playing to $24,068.25 in its fifth week at the house. The speculators of tickets are still cleaning up at both matinee and night

The Garden Theatre, Tampa, Fla., has been enlarged three times in a year because of increased business

Six Failed—Then Along Came B. E. Gore And Made A "Jinx" House Pay Profits

HALF a dozen exhibitors tried and failed. Then along came another exhibitor—and succeeded. More than that, he made a "lemon" house pay at cheap admission prices. Business has grown so fast that he has had to enlarge the theatre several times and before he gets through he will have jumped the number of seats from 300 to 1,000.

Out on 20th Street, in the north section of Tampa, Florida, stood a little church, which had been abandoned for a larger edifice and was offered for sale. This section was well developed. It was about two miles from the down-town theatres. It looked like a good location for a neighborhood house. A man had the cash to back his judgment, so he bought the property, converted it into a theatre and named it "The Garden."

Beating The "Jinx"

It was a neat little show-shop and prior to the opening, the interest of the neighborhood seemed to indicate a sure-fire success, but sad to relate, the opening night seemed about the only one that drew sufficient to pay the film rental. The owner had his investment at stake and held on for several months, trying out all the schemes, but the business failed to develop and finally he closed down.

This all happened several years ago. During the years the house has been sold and leased to different ones, who operated from a few days to a few weeks, but all finally gave it up in disgust. The house seemed to have a jinx that no one seemed to overcome, and for months it remained dark.

About a year ago a young man named B. E. Gore, who was operating picture shows in the schools, got a hunch that the Garden could be made to pay. Gore had been very successful with his school shows. He had a circuit of six schools. He bought big pictures that had been shown quite a time before in the big theatres, at very reasonable prices, and passed them along to the school children at a 10c gate. He had a little money ahead and decided to try out the Garden. He leased it, did a little fixing up and opened up at 5c and 10c prices.

Cheap Admission Prices

Now these prices had been unheard of in Tampa since long "before the war" and it started something out there in that north section. The Garden commenced to "pack 'em" every night, and turn 'em away on Sunday. Gore was sittin' pretty and adding to the bank roll daily.

The talkies had been introduced in one of the down town theatres and were mopping up, so Gore decided to give his patrons "synchronized" music. He built a double turn-table phonograph in the booth, hooked it up with amplifiers and horns back of the screen, and with just the regular phonograph records, cued his pictures so that they gave the effect of full synchronized scores. This gave him a chance to advance his prices a little, but the 5c and 10c prices stood four days of each week, and were tilted to 10c and 20c only on Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Three times in a single year, Gore had to enlarge his theatre to take care of increased business. Read this remarkable story of what clever showmanship and dogged persistence can do to win success for the exhibitor.

The 300 seats of the Garden wouldn't hold 'em, so Gore decided to add on. However, he was not going to build onto the other fellow's property and so he arranged to buy the building, using most of his profits for the initial payment. The first addition was on the right side, which gave him a little better than 15 feet added width. This increased his capacity about 170. Still, with the added seats, he had as many standing nightly, so he took out the back wall and went back to the limit of his lot, adding another 150 seats, and now today he is getting ready to tear out the other side and add more capacity there.

300 Seats To 1000

"I'm going to have a thousand seats in the Garden before I am through," said Gore, "And then I guess I will have to tear it all down and build me a regular show shop."

He has bought the next lot, where he lives, is advertising his shows in the papers and says people come from all sections of Tampa to see his big second runs at the cheap prices. He is also planning on adding real sound equipment so he can show the regular talkie releases.

"Good pictures, good music, good projection, and cheap prices have put the little Garden into the winner class. Yessir," said Gore.

How A Novel Idea Turns Junior Matinees Into Gold Mines

WELL exploited junior matinees are gold mines if properly handled. If you don't believe it step up and listen to the testimony of a manager who has doubled his Saturday afternoon take.

That man is Cliff C. Chellew, manager of the Fox West Coast Alexander Theatre at Glendale, Calif. Women's clubs throughout Southern California are seeking him every week to tell them how he does it. At a recent meeting of the associated women's clubs and P.T.A. groups Chellew was characterized as "the most successful exploiter of children's shows."

It's A Game

The secret of his success lies in making a game of the whole business.

A year ago in company with other theatres in the West Coast string the Brownie Club idea was established. It is supposed to have been copyrighted by its originator, E. Sperry, while he was connected with the chain. In twelve months Chellew's theatre can truthfully record a complete success for the Brownie idea.

Every Saturday afternoon there are from 1300 to 1500 youngsters, under the age of 14, that storm through the doors of the theatre. Many of them bring their parents. The gross income of the theatre for Saturday afternoon has been increased on an average of more than 100 per cent.

Brownie club members in good standing are admitted for seven cents each if their credentials are in order. To obtain this special club price they must bring a letter from their parents stating that they have been good Brownies during the week, have helped with housework in a willing manner, studied hard, bathed and washed regularly and in general conformed with the Brownie rules.

Any perfect grade in school is also credential for the cut rate ticket. The paper must be shown at the box office. A card showing Sunday school attendance likewise admits to the special rate.

For 26 consecutive Sunday School attendances a free admission is given. Members are also admitted free on their birthdays.

The entire proposition is a game. Every member of the club has a membership card and a membership button. Chellew is the Great White Brownie, the orchestra leader is The Great Musical Brownie, the organist is the Great Organ Brownie and others have similar titles.

Chellew has been embarrassed once or twice by having some piping voice shrill at him at receptions and important affairs—"Hello Great White Brownie." But he likes it and plays the game.

The city's mayor, Harry G. MacBain, and the rest of the city officials also play the game. They all have membership cards and acknowledge the greetings of the members of the club.

The shows are specially prepared for the youngsters. Vaudeville acts are cleaned up before being used. Special pictures are selected with every film that is shown being approved by the women's clubs reviewing board.

Chellew's Brownie Club has a membership of 2000 youngsters. They storm the doors of his theatre every Saturday afternoon. He gets more than 1000 letters weekly from parents. Any theatre manager can put the idea across if he is willing to work.

"Of course I have doubled my Saturday afternoon gross," Chellew declared, "but that isn't what counts most. I have every one of those kids, more than 2000 members now, talking, singing and cheering for the Alexander. As far as they are concerned it is the 'only' theatre in town. This gives me invaluable word of mouth advertising. Then every week I receive more than 1000 letters from parents regarding the children—the letters being statements of how good the Brownies have been during the week. This gives me direct personal contact with these parents. That means good will for us.

"The parents have found that they can place their children with us for the afternoon with utmost confidence. They know that we will take care of them. It only took us four days to start the Brownie clubs here but it has taken a year of mighty hard work to make it the brilliant success that it now is. Any theatre manager can put the idea across if he is willing to work."

Cliff C. Chellew, manager, Fox West Coast Alexander Theatre, Glendale, Calif.

Chellew experienced considerable trouble for quite awhile with adolescent youngsters with slightly perverted twists to their minds. Then he discovered a number of suspicious men who always attended the Brownie shows — adult tickets may be purchased but they are discouraged unless it is a parent.

He worked around this trouble by segregating the boys and girls in different sections of the house. The girls he now has in the large center section and the boys on the two sides.

Group Rivalry

He continued to make a game of it. He told the kiddies that they were to have contests between boys and girls. They have done this, Herb Kern, who was at the console of one of the large Los Angeles houses for a couple of years and who is recognized as one of the most versatile organists in the business, conceived the idea of song contests between the groups.

It went across with a bang. Now neither the girls or boys would think of sitting in the others' sections.

By making the matter a game Chellew and his fellow workers in the theatre are enabled to have complete control over the group. Any rough actions, hair pulling, refusal to be quiet when told to be, or other violation of rules meets with a suspension from the club.

The usual suspension is three weeks and means that the child cannot attend the show for that length of time.

Chellew has reached the conclusion that the junior matinees are the best all-around advertising he gets and he wouldn't quit them on a bet.

Is Your Theatre Stealing A Ride At Local Expense ?

By Daniel N. Casey
Secretary, Chamber of Commerce, Harrisburg, Pa.

IF a theatre is in the Community, it ought to be OF the community. A theatre is a semi-public service institution, depending upon the public for its sustenance and upon the prosperity of the community it serves for its continuing business volume.

The owners and operators of this utility, therefore, have an abiding interest in all those elements which affect their very balance sheet. This interest to have value must consist of something other than a mere necessary payment of restricted dues to community organizations; it means active participation in the affairs of these associations. It contemplates something more than passive support; it indicates genuine cooperation.

Playing Fair

If any group of people have employed high sounding phrases to illustrate the service features of their business, it is the theatrical group. Do they mean it? What is the object of a theatre in the community?

Before days of mergers, distant control, absorption and what-not, the local theatre operator distinctly was a vital factor in the community in which he moved and of which he was a part. Now, the number of individual operators steadily is shrinking. What will the new people do? Will they come in, just to run a house, draw out the proceeds each night, milk the community for all they can, show large profits and sell out to a larger group—or will they, while striving fairly for all volume, give the people and the community a run for their money?

There are many kinds of chains in all fields, but a survey recently completed by the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries shows that the large majority realize their community responsibilities. Formerly it used to be—"We have 100 stores; we can't join 100 Chambers of Commerce and subscribe to 100 Welfare Federations;" now they are recognizing that they have a definite obligation wherever they have a unit. If your manager is ill; if people are hurt in your theatre, you expect the community to have hospitals, don't you? You want conventions to build your business and you want all retail trade stimulated so that people may be attracted to the community? Well, those are only a few things the Chamber of Commerce, Welfare Federations, and similar organizations constantly are doing. They mean business to the house.

Is your local manager "too busy" to attend community meetings? Do you encourage him to take a real part in community affairs, or are you and he standing aside? Here is what you are doing, if this is your policy: Stealing a ride on the chariot of progress. And surely, that isn't fair.

Let's have things like the days of the individual show-man—get in step with the city and play the community game. It will get the institution a whole lot further.

Any individual or institution either is for the things of the community or against them. A lackadaisical, nonchalant, distant attitude, is pussy-footing. The theatre itself is outward evidence of material progress. The human element controlling the theatre should be out in front with the community of which it is a part.

Civic Loyalty

Communities differ in their needs. It would be difficult to suggest merely in the abstract what civic activities theatre men all over the country should sponsor.

Civic loyalty is a half-brother to national patriotism. This latter, the theatre with its inspirational environment, helps to promote. A desire on the part of Mr. Citizen to work for his community can be furthered through the theatrical medium. And a good way to start is for the theatre man to be a known leader. Such is in the case in Harrisburg where all the houses are owned by outside groups, but local managers are integrally of the community and one of them a past president of the Chamber of Commerce. There's the answer.

Editor's Note: Chain theatre owners and operators will do well to listen to what Mr. Casey says in this article. The relation of the chain house to the community is of the first importance in this industry. Here is a straightforward, two-fisted statement of the attitude of a Chamber of Commerce official toward community responsibilities of chains. Motion Picture News knows there is widespread resentment among civic bodies in various parts of the country toward chains that fail to get in step with cities in which they have theatres. This feeling is not directed particularly toward picture chains, but equally to chains of other industries. No greater mistake can be made by any theatre owners and managers, chain or independent, than to fail to live up to their community duties. This is the first of a series of articles by executives of Chambers of Commerce.

Motion Picture News Weekly Box Office Check-Up And Showmen's Ad. Tips

Abie's Irish Rose (Paramount)

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Fair weather, Criterion Theatre, Creatore's Band, Fox Movietone News.

Rating—150% (2nd week).

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Clear and rainy weather, Eastman Theatre (3,400), 7 days, 35c-65c, Publix Unit, "Papa's Vacation" (Pathe), selected news reel.

Rating—85%.

AD TIPS—Film sold good deal on own merits, although theatre ballyhooed it a little in department store window displays and tie-ups with florists on roses. Newspaper ads stressed fact that film was version of stage success. Little emphasis placed on players. Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—Eastman Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., M. J. Murphy, Mgr.

Alias Jimmy Valentine (M-G-M)

TROY, N. Y.—Fair weather, Lincoln Theatre (1,000), 7 days, 35c, Vitaphone act, Hal Roach Comedy (M-G-M), Kinograms.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—Weather: Cold and Rain. Capitol Theatre, (4620) 35-50-75c-$1-$1.50. 7 days. M-G-M News, Fox Movietone. "Navajo" Revue. (Second week.)

Rating—96 7/10%.

AD TIPS—In handling this picture, I used double the amount of advertising space, principally because the theatre opened with this picture with sound. I also called attention to the fact that the picture had been one of the hits of the winter in New York City and further, that it had played to capacity business in the neighboring city of Albany. The combined advertising and drawing features of the picture served to establish a new house record for the theatre during the week. —Ben Stern, Manager, Lincoln Theatre, Troy, N. Y.

The Apache (Columbia)

WICHITA, KANS.—Fair and warm weather, Orpheum Theatre (1,700), 25c-40c, comedy, Lole Bridge, Int'l News.

The only thing to sell in this picture is the fact that it is an all-talking one and a comedy. Stressing the detective angle will help some. Audiences like it, but will not enthuse over it in advance. Audience appeal is general, children delighted with it. —Metropolitan Theatre, Houston, Tex.

Work of Mickey Bennett, kid star, Horation Algeresque hero of film, worth playing up for its interest to both juveniles and grown-ups.—Loew's State, Memphis, Tenn., City Mgr., Ernest Emerling.

Many exciting moments, plenty of laughs supplied. Mention these, also stars, Chatterton, Bennett, Pitts. Audience appeal: both old and young. Entertaining picture.—Herbert D. Grove, Mgr., Capitol Theatre, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Fairly good picture; needs exploitation to overcome unattractive title. Bennett, kid actor, can be played up as he gives good performance. Also fact that it's 100 per cent talking is worth advertising. Audience appeal: family.—Mary Anderson Theatre, Louisville, Ky., A. B. McCoy, Mgr.

Exploitation featured all talking cast, the stars of picture. Universal appeal.—Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, Min., Murray Pemock, Manager.

Exploit fact that whole cast talks; fast detective work and Ruth Chatterton in leading role. Audience appeal: All classes, from high school age up.—Capitol Theatre, Walter Mergel, Mgr., Springfield, Mass.

Rating—93 3/5%.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Fair weather, United Artists Theatre, Movietone acts, presensation Sharpe Minor, Fox M. News.

Rating—250% (2nd week).

AD TIPS—From the opening a very heavy daily paper advertising campaign has been carried, but this has not pulled business. The decided slipping after the first week's business shows that it hasn't the strength for a run.—Gaiety Theatre, New York.

Found it easy to put over. Came within an ace of establishing new house record. Used plenty of advertising space and did not forget to tell that they now had chance to see one of real big pictures at 35 cents admission as compared with same picture for which New York charges $2.00. Played up that picture had an all Negro cast.—Alec Sayles, Mgr., Leland Theatre, Albany, N. Y.

Rating—200%.

AD TIPS—Douglas Fairbanks is always a sure fire hit and this one went over big especially due to the fact that it was along the lines of "The Three Musketeers," a very popular photoplay in this section.—Saenger Theatre, New Orleans, La.

Doug Fairbanks was played up and the picture featured as a continuation of the adventures of "The Three Musketeers." Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—Loew's Midland Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., Walter Maloney, Mgr.

Exploit the fact that Douglas Fairbanks' voice is heard in the picture. Next in importance is Fairbanks' name, but the fact that he talks is the best selling point. Romantic settings, and the fact that this is a sequel to "The Three Musketeers" is of some value in exploitation. Audience appeal is general.—Kirby Theatre, Houston, Tex.

Over the heads of all Omaha, exceptionally as it may seem. Played up as Fairbanks first talker, which together with star's name was a big attraction. However, lack of love element kept flappers away. Audience: adult and sophisticated type.—Ray Jones, Manager, Riviera, Omaha, Neb.

Dumas story, sequel to "The Three Musketeers." Doug's audible soliloquy. Indefinite run, extra performances. Audience appeal: universal, popularity of star unquestioned.—"United Artists," Portland, Ore., J. J. Parker, Mgr.

Pulling power of Fairbanks' name should be stressed with emphasis on sequel to "The Three Musketeers." Also play up the athletic stunts of Doug as being of interest to one and all. Appeal: all classes and ages.

Exploit as Fairbanks' first "talkie" and sequel to "Three Musketeers." Be careful of way in which "talking" scenes are advertised. Audience appeal: all classes, particularly youth.—Music Box Theatre, Seattle, Wash., Robert Murray, Mgr.

Exploit as Fairbanks' first talkie. Thrills, gorgeous settings. Audience appeal: every age and class.—Granada Theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah, Dave Schayer, Mgr.

We did not consider Fairbanks' small amount of talking in picture sufficient to advertise it as talking film. Big play it got as silent makes me wonder if public is so sound crazy as we sometimes believe.—Harry Gould, Palace Theatre, Fort Worth, Tex.

Sell Doug in his first "talkie" as sequel to "Three Musketeers." Appeals to all classes and ages.

Play up Fairbanks in his first talkie. Audience appeal: all ages.—John Carr, Mgr., Century Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Voice of the Screen

Manager And His Projectionist Invent A Device

Utica Theatremen Contrive The Linerophone, 2-Unit Sound Film Apparatus

A case where a theatre manager, in conjunction with his projectionist, contrived to make a sound apparatus that gave him more satisfaction than any that the large electrical companies are offering for sale has just been brought to light in Utica, N. Y. Here Evans W. Linton and Harry Cross, manager and booth operator respectively of the Olympia Theatre in Utica, have invented a talking picture device, the Linerophone, coined from the names of the two men.

The invention is said to involve two units, one for non-synchronous pictures and the other for photoplays synchronized with sound or talk. Filtering devices eliminate extraneous noises in the speakers, it is claimed. Most of the apparatus is located in the projection room, including a mixing panel, while the six extra large dynamic speakers are behind the screen. Two heavy amplifiers enable the operator to change from one amplifier to the other in case of emergency, and Mr. Linton asserts that it is possible to resynchronize instantly. The turntable runs with wormed gears in a bath of oil at all times, and the machine is strictly A. C. operated, it is declared.

It is planned to form a corporation to manufacture the apparatus. Application for patents has already been made.

Couple Of Ottawa Exhibs Hang On To Their Organs

In spite of strides made by producers of talking pictures a recent incident which occurred in Ottawa, Ontario, reflects an attitude of uncertainty on the part of certain theatremen.

Two local exhibitors, presenting sound programs, received an offer from a church for their pipe organs, at present standing practically idle. The reply was that the organs were being "held in reserve."

"Rainbow Man" Completed, Dowling Returns To N. Y.

Having completed "The Rainbow Man," his first all-talking feature picture, Eddie Dowling returned to New York this week. It is expected that his new vehicle, a production of Sono-Art, will have its world premiere in New York in the near future.

Rival Border Exhibs Compete With Sound

EXHIBITORS along the border line of Canada and the United States are finding that the talking pictures are one means of meeting competition where rival cities are within a short traveling distance from one another.

The Imperial Theatre, Sarnia, Ontario, managed by John Meyers, has been wired to meet the competition from a rival United States city, Port Huron, Mich., just across from Sarnia. Sarnia, with a population of 21,000, is the smallest city in the Dominion to have sound pictures so far.

International competition from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., has also led to the wiring of the Algoma Theatre there.

New Sound Device Company Will Cater To Independents

A new company, with the purpose of catering to independent producers and exhibitors making and showing sound pictures, has been formed under the name of Vitovox, and is shortly to be incorporated in California. Walter Ford Tilford is general manager for the firm which has established headquarters in the Tec-Art Studios.

Vitovox records on film on a variable area tract and is interchangeable with all reproducing devices using sound on film. The company also intends to turn out a portable recording device, of particular value to news camera men and directors on location.

The company is to be incorporated for $10,000,000 under the laws of California. Among its officers and board of directors are: Charles B. Jones, vice-president and treasurer of the Rio Grande Oil Company; R. A. Broomfield, president of the Broomfield Oil Company; William Foretine, capitalist; L. E. Lockhart, vice-president, Rio Grande Oil Co.; Lyman J. Gage, president, Precision Electrical Manufacturing Corp.; J. A. Miller, well-known radio engineer and Walter Ford Tilford.

Chas. Butterworth To Make Paramount Talkie In East

Charles Butterworth, musical comedy comedian, will star in a short feature talkie for Paramount and is expected to begin production shortly at the company's Astoria studio, with Fred Allen directing.

Touring For Bristolphone

M. Millen, supervising engineer of the Consolidated Bristolphone Corp., is now on a service inspection tour that will cover every city in which Bristolphone equipment has been installed.

Old Sensational Successes To Be Made With Sound

"Birth Of Nation," "Thief Of Bagdad" Planned For Reissue

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 21.—The oft-mentioned idea of remaking old film sensations with sound is now to become a fact. Two of the industry's classics are definitely intended for new dialogue and sound effect versions, these being "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Thief of Bagdad." In addition to this, come plans from others to reissue big spectacular productions with newly synchronized sound effects. The most important rumored among these is "Ben Hur."

D. W. Griffith is now in New York, but according to close associates in Hollywood, he has expressed both desire and intention of making his world-famous epic. He plans to gather as many of the original cast as possible. Among those available, although some are in retirement and have changed with the years, are Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish, Walter Lang, Henry B. Walthall, and Mary Alden. New faces will have to be engaged to take the roles played originally by Robert Harron, George Seigmann and Wallace Reid.

"The Iron Mask' is commonly accepted as Douglas Fairbanks' last picture. He and Mary Pickford have announced their intention of making one co-starring feature to mark their retirement from the screen However, unless Fairbanks decides merely to synchronize it with sound effects, he will make a talkie version of "The Thief of Bagdad" first.

Jack White's First Talking Comedy Released This Week

Exhibitors who are bookers and buyers of Educational product will interestingly await public reaction to the first of producer Jack White's talking comedies, "Zip!—Boom—Boom!," prints of which are being delivered to Educational exchanges this week.

Vitaphone Artists Grow

Warner Bros. list of artists recording Vitaphone subjects was much increased this week when the following signed to appear in talk and sound films: Rudy Vallee and His Connecticut Yankees, Leo Reisman and His Hotel Brunswick Orchestra, Minnie Du Pree, who was signed to play opposite J. C. Nugent in "The Veteran," a sketch; and Josie Heather, Scotch comedienne.

Broadway Show Reviews

Colony's Comedy Bill Topped By "Cohens & Kellys"

Walter O'Keefe Still M. C. With Sam Kahn Band And Specialty Acts

With "The Cohens and The Kellys at Atlantic City" as the feature film attraction for the week a fairly entertaining comedy show was built up at the Colony. It wasn't the feature that really handed the audience what it paid its money for, for although there are any number of laughs in the picture it is in reality based on the old-fashioned chase formula. The stage show running thirty-six minutes, a Pathe Sound News for seven minutes and the feature taking an hour and twenty minutes made the show run just a little over two hours.

The stage still has Walter O'Keefe as master of ceremonies, and the boy is making himself very well liked by the customers, and Sam Kahn and orchestra. Kahn opens the show with "Sweethearts On Parade," paving the way for the appearance of O'Keefe, who steps out with "I've Got a Cold In My Nose," getting a lot of laughs with the number. The Vorsell Sisters in a dancing divertissement followed to a light hand. Kahn, with a burlesque of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" by the band, got a number of laughs, and Lydia Harris stepped in and shot over a couple of numbers for a real hit. O'Keefe, just ahead of the finale, landed solidly with the audience with a new version of "Frankie and Johnnie," the number is filled with laughs and the wise ones in front got an extra kick out of it.

In the seven minutes given over to the Pathe Sound News four shots were shown. The most interesting to Broadway was the explanation of Senator Jones of the how and whyfor of the new Jones Law is connection with prohibition enforcement.

Walter O'Keefe and the Sam Kahn Band are now featured in the lights at the Colony above the film attractions.

"Alibi" Will Come To The 44 St. And Not The Harris

United Artists' "Alibi," directed by Roland West, will arrive for its New York premiere at the 44th Street Theatre and not at the Sam H. Harris, as previously announced. The first showing occurs Sunday night, April 7.

Helen Morgan, stage star who recently made her screen debut in "Show Boat," the Universal talkie which this week had sensational double premiere at Miami and Palm Beach. She is seen above rendering a vocal solo

"Canary Murder Case" Held Over But Rest Of Paramount Bill Changed

AT the Paramount this week, for second time in the history of the house a feature film was held over. The picture was "The Canary Murder Case," but all of the other features of the program were changed for the current week.

Opening the show an overture of Irish airs was offered, with the musicians flooded with a green light, while Dave Rubinoff pulled his usual solo on the violin in an orange spot. One of the electricians must have a sense of humor, or a grouch against Rubinoff and hoped that some real rabid Irishman would take offense at the orange spot in the flood of green and take it out on the orchestra leader. But up to midweek no ambulance calls for the Paramount were reported. The overture runs eight minutes and has all the usual Irish melodies including the more popular ones that were written in this country.

The Paramount silent news, running for eight minutes, held the next spot in the program. Five shots were shown and the "Redskin" trailer was placed in the news. The clips were Wilkins Return from the Antarctic; Zep Tunes Up for Pole Flight; The Hoover Cabinet; Lee Bible's Florida Auto Smash and the Pacific Fleet in action.

Mrs. Jesse Crawford worked out a novelty in a program that was dedicated to her favorite orchestra leader of the radio, in which she introduced Lopez' favorite "Nola"; Rudy's Vallee's "Deep Night"; Lombardo's Royal Canadians playing "I Faw Down"; Ben Bernie's "Carolina Moon"; and finally Paul Ash with "I'll Never Ask For More." The latter number was given real plug with a singer planted in the audience for a chorus, and Mrs. Crawford ragging the number after that. Still it only took seven minutes to put it over.

"The Trail of The Rainbow" was the Publix Unit for the week. It is a Dave Gould production, with a chorus of Gluck Soull girls. As specialties with the unit are Ossman and Schepps, the banjoists, The Bachelor Four, and Bud Carlell, the cowboy roper. For a novelty there is a sharpshooting bit by the chorus as a finish to a Jesse James number. Jean Wardell walks away with the hit honors doing a comedy number.

Colleen Moore Will Make "Irish Eyes" As First Talkie

"When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," a First National-Vitaphone vehicle, will mark Colleen Moore's entry into the circle of the talking stars. It will be an all-talking and all-singing attraction and Colleen will speak with a brogue.

Father of Wolf Bros. Dies

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 2.—Solomon Wolf, 70, father of Fanchon, Marco and Rube Wolf, died at San Diego last week following a heart attack. Fanchon and Marco are presentation producers for Fox-West Coast; and Rube Wolf is band leader and master of ceremonies at Loew's State, Los Angeles.

"Bellamy Trial" With "Tallyho" Revue Provides Enjoyable Capitol Program

"THE BELLAMY TRIAL," having its first run in New York at popular prices, is the screen attraction at the Capitol this week. Surrounding it is a pleasing program headed by the Chester Hale stage production "Tallyho" which has as its kick at the finish a horse race on a tread-mill with three thoroughbreds competing. The show runs two hours and twenty-five minutes.

For the opening of the program the overture to "Raymond" is played by the Grand Orchestra. The selection running ten minutes, and receiving a very fair applause return from the audience. It is followed with several selected shots from the M-G-M News and Fox Movietone, which runs for nine minutes.

George Dewey Washington, the colored singer in his latest M-G-M Movietone Short, offered three popular numbers, "Lonely Vagabond," "The Sun Is Shining at My Window" and "The Curtain Comes Down." All three numbers were put over effectively.

"Tallyho," the Chester Hale Revue, runs twenty-six minutes. Dave Schooler and the band are in polo costume for the week. Outstanding is the male singing ensemble of twenty voices. Harry Roye and Marjorie Linken offer a dance novelty, while Gus Mulcahy, with his talking harmonica and dancing, slipped over an applause hit. For the finish of the offering there was the old tread-mill horse race, which gave the audience as big a kick as ever. Three horses runing on the mill upstage on a platform above the heads of the band made a corking flash picture. The feature ran an hour and thirty-three minutes, which accounted for the unusual length of the show.

Musicians' Anti-Talkie Parade Falls Through

Musicians are in a sad plight at the present time, according to the Musical Mutual Protective Union, which says 35,000 throughout the nation, 6,000 in New York alone, are either jobless or in critical circumstances. Recently a group of them, affiliated with the New York Union No. 802, of the American Federation of Musicians, voted to name a committee to confer with the governing body to discuss means for checking unemployment.

The musicians intended to stage a parade this week in New York as a demonstration against talking pictures, which they charge with having deprived them of their jobs. Not so long ago they steadily earned $43.75 a week for nightly performances and $5.50 extra for matinee work.

The parade was never staged due to police refusing a permit. To add to their discomfiture a disagreement as to the extent and causes of the musicians' plight occurred between J. M. Camuti, who was to have lead the protesting musicians in the parade, and Joseph N. Weber, president of American Federation of Musicians. The former declared 11,000 out of 17,000 musicians were out of work in New York, while the latter asserted that the correct figure was but 300 in New York and 3,000 in the United States and Canada, and said that most of the unemployment is due to the few musical shows on Broadway and on the road.

performances on this one. "The Letter," which Paramount brought into the Criterion a week ago, played to $13,717 for a rating of 102 1/10 per cent.

The Warner Brothers brought "Noah's Ark" into the Winter Garden last Thursday night with a typical Hollywood opening night with the seats at $11 a copy, varicolored searchlights and sun-arcs flashing to the skies and the full dress parade on the part of the Warner set. The opening was followed with an extra heavy advertising splurge in the newspapers, possibly to overcome the lukewarm and some condemning notices that the picture received, with whole pages being devoted to paid superlatives about the production. The business on four days went to $24,239, which is an average of 106 per cent for that house on the figures of the Jolson run there in "The Singing Fool."

"The Singing Fool" was moved to the Sam Harris Theatre after 26 weeks at the Winter Garden; in its 27th week it played to $15,361.50. "Sonny Boy," in its second week, got $15,634, and finished at Warner's on Thursday night, with Corrine Griffith's "The Divine Lady" coming in on Friday night. Incidentally, "The Wolf Song," at the Embassy, finished on Friday night. Last week the picture played to $6,615 in its third week.

A heavy advertising campaign in the daily papers placed behind "Hearts In Dixie," at the Gaiety for the second week that the picture was in there, could not stop the receipts from slipping to $8,732.50, while "Weary River," at the Central in its seventh week, played to $14,989.

MANAGER'S ROUND TABLE CLUB

CHARLES E. LEWIS Chairman and Editor

A National Association of Theatre Managers Meeting in

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Every Week—for Mutual Benefit and Progress

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

"The Spirit of Co-operation"

OVER a year ago, while engaged in operating a small chain of theatres in New England, the thought came to me that there was needed in this great industry of ours a trade paper department which would accord to the manager of theatres the recognition and respect that he is worthy of. This thought stuck in my mind for a long time and finally I decided to drop a few lines to Mr. William A. Johnston, of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and put the idea up to him.

The present Managers' Round Table Club, and the pages it uses every week in the News, is the most dramatic answer we can offer to our hosts of readers and members. The fine, attentive cooperation which was accorded me is, to a large extent, responsible for the success of the organization and now, with this issue, we present the new enlarged edition of the Managers' Round Table Club news.

If it will not impose too much on your time, just bear with me for a few minutes and I will show you why this great National Association of Theatre Managers holds the spot it now occupies in the theatrical business.

Co-operation!

That is what turned the trick. Without it we were licked before we even started, but right from the first shot of the gun we began to interest theatre managers, publicity men, supervising managers, general managers (yes we have quite a few G. M.'s), and others all connected with and interested in this great business of ours. Their problems were discussed in an open and frank way, their theatre operation methods and exploitation ideas were published on the Club pages and suggestions were given and received. Soon there was started a sort of 'spirit of intercommunication' (rather a long winded way of describing it), but just the same that is what hapened. Managers in one city began to correspond with managers in other cities, their topics of correspondence were the different items appearing on the Club pages. Distance ceased to be a factor and soon, either direct or through the Club headquarters hundreds of letters were being exchanged.

This spirit or cooperation has reached the point which we now will call your attention to.

About two weeks ago a regular Club bulletin letter was mailed to every member of the Club with the request that they pledge their support for a certain advertising survey which we decided to make at the insistence of a great number of Club members. There was nothing compulsory in the request, it was left entirely to the individual members to decide whether they wanted to give a little of their time to make the survey a success. Now the important news, the point which we have been building up to, is this: OVER NINETY-FIVE PER CENT OF THE ENROLLED MEMBERSHIP IN THE MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB PLEDGED THEMSELVES TO HELP ON THE SURVEY.

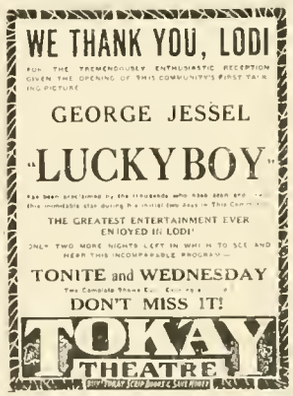
We point with tremendous pride to that statement boys, because it is the answer to almost a year's hard work to build up the CLUB to its present fine standing and when so large a group of showmen will get behind a suggestion of this kind, then we have no more doubts about the success of our efforts.

Fellows, the MOTION PICTURE NEWS stood behind me and gave me every possible help, sympathetic cooperation, and spent plenty of money to help us put this idea across and to the NEWS we should indeed be grateful.

We are all pulling in the right direction, boys, and let's keep up the great work. Keep on shooting in your advertising and exploitation ideas, tell us how you run your theatres, send us your own and your theatre's photographs, in other words, "Keep the Pot Boiling" and keep your shoulders to the wheel. It's "All for One and One for All." C. E. L.

C. F. Lawrence Is Now Located Up In Utica At The Avon

At the request of Mr. Schine, head of the circuit, C. F. Lawrence was shifted from the Ohio Theatre, in Lima, Ohio, to the Avon Theatre, in Utica, N. Y., and it did not take him long to start things humming in Utica. He used one of the most popular forms of teaser throwaways that is rapidly coming into favor all over the country. Sid used this one on "The Flying Fleet" and knowing how well he can get behind a stunt, we feel that his effort met with much success.



In addition to this throwaway idea he inaugurated a flying contest for the last day's presentation of the picture. All the entrees were planes designed and constructed by members of the Wings of Utica, Boys' Club. These he placed on exhibition in his lobby for several days and then the contest was run to determine which of these miniature models would make the best speed, or fly the highest in the contest. With interest so keen at this time on anything pertaining to airplanes it did not require a lot of advertising to bring out a huge crowd to see this stunt pulled off and naturally the business reflected the success of the entire stunt that day. We are watching for further news from Utica. Get busy, Sid.

Ventilation Is An Important Matter This Time Of Year

Many letters we receive dwell on the subject of good clean air and ventilation in the theatres, especially at this time of the year. We are sort of between seasons, and while the weather may be chilly in the morning and afternoon, it is quite apt to warm up during the evening, and if you have a good sized crowd you are going to hear some squawks from the customers, unless you watch your ventilation carefully. One good suggestion we received from down south was, if you run matinee and evening separate, it's a good idea to open up every door between shows and give the theatre a good airing, regardless of the weather. This is good sense because fresh, clean air is important if you expect to keep the patrons satisfied. Don't create bad draughts during the show if you can possibly avoid it; they will cause more kicks than the hot air itself; but at the same time watch the weather conditions outdoors and use that as a guide for what you must do with your own heating and ventilating plant. It used to be a habit with me at this time of the year to walk out in front of the house several times early in the evening and if I thought the weather was getting warm and the crowds coming good, I would see that the heat was shut down and one of the fans started very slowly to draw out stale air. This could be increased as conditions warrant it. Don't overlook this angle in your theatre operation because it's too important.

Getting and Holding Good Will Is The Way Marpole Works

Most of you will recall the story I printed a short time ago about Marpole and the New Tokay Theatre in Lodi, Calif., and the opening he handled on the "sound" pictures in his house. Now we are showing you an ad. he used the day after the opening which shows that he is not slow to keep in the good graces of his patrons. This kind of advertising is great stuff, boys; it just makes them feel good and gives the impression that the New Tokay Theatre is the most important theatre in town. That is what you want them to believe so live up to it. Crowds like to follow the crowds. If people see others trying to get into a theatre, they themselves invariably want to get in, too. It's theatre psychology and darned good psychology at that. From the same paper that we clipped this ad. we found a news story in which the New Tokay Theatre announced that—"due to a regrettable error in shipment, the sound and color subject, 'In a Persian Market,' did not arrive for showing on Sunday, but anyone who cares to see this subject will be admitted free . . . " So once again Marpole shows good showmanship in holding the good-will of his patrons. It's an example worth following in many a town of the same size as Lodi.

Australians Use Different Methods In Their Theatres

In a most interesting talk with I. Hamilton Webb of the Union Theatre, Ltd., in Australia, but who is at present in this country investigating theatre conditions, we learned that the showmen in his far off country use many different methods in their operation and presentation of shows.

According to Webb, continuity during the running of a show is of utmost importance and the dreary stage waits, so common in this country, are absent in his. As soon as an act is over the floods and spots are thrown onto the orchestra pit and leader and they entertain for the few minutes necessary to prepare the stage for the following act. Not just fiddle away on any old orchestration, but they render a short popular number which gives them the featured spot while this is going on. As soon as they finish the eyes are directed to the stage by a quick shift of the floods. Many managers in this country would do well to give this angle serious consideration, because I remember distinctly from last summer's tour of the middle west that stage waits were evident in many of the finest houses in the cities through which I passed. I do know that it "killed" many a good performance.

Those of you who are located in states where censorship is particularly strict should be thankful that you do not have to contend with the Australian's position when it comes to censorship. Mr. Webb told me that the censor board, consisting of two men and a woman, use the knife on practically every picture that comes into the country. They do not permit the showing of a fist fight; the marching of soldiers must be short and snappy; soul-kisses must also be abbreviated; main titles are often ordered changed because they do not meet with the board's approval. Sub-titles must be carefully worded. And many other similar restrictions. What they are going to do with the "talkies" is apparently going to be tough. But perhaps they will find the solution.

Mr. Webb has consented to an appointment on our Australian Membership Committee and has already started work by writing to his many friends down there. So we may soon carry a section devoted to the Australian Theatre Activities. More about this country later on.

Good Old Days Are Coming Back With Flags And Banners

This sure is a queer business all right. When the so-called high class and de luxe type of house came into existence we were told that our showmanship was "behind the times" because we used to decorate the fronts of the theatres with banners, flags and other kinds of display. Not so any more, boys, not so. The finest, and when we say finest we mean finest, theatres are going in for banners and flags and pennants just as in the good old days. Maybe the displays are a little better looking and cost more than what we used to use, but they are banners, etc., just the same.

Take a look at this attractive banner which was recently used at the famous Hippodrome Theatre in New York City. This and several others adorn the theatre almost every week. Change of colors and sizes make the difference that attract the patrons, but you must admit that this is an attractive affair. If you were to walk down Times Square you would find banners of some sort on practically every theatre in the famous district.

It's the good old ballyhoo, but it catches the eye just the same, so why worry about the "high-class" or "De Luxe" names when you can draw the customers to the B. O. Better a few red banners once in a while than a few red ink statements. Are we right or are we right?

E. T. Zadra Sells "Valentine" With New Serial Stunt

Mr. Zadra needs no introduction to Club members, he was one of the first members to enroll in the Club and was, until recently, a steady active member. But he is now making up for his inactivity and the first letter we received tells about a mighty fine idea of tieing up a serial story on "Jimmy Valentine" with a herald, making them one and the same thing.

In the first place, in case you don't know it, Ed. is the manager of the Lyric and Ramsdell Theatres in Manistee, Mich., for the Butterfield Circuit, and has been active in theatre circles for quite a few years.

This latest stunt of Mr. Zadra was to take the mats which are furnished gratis by the exchange on the serialization of "Alias Jimmy Valentine" for the purpose of tieing up with local newspapers, and printed them on a 9 by 12 inch throwaway. A separate herald for each of the ten chapters was employed and on the reverse side of each herald he printed: "See This Story brought to Life on the Lyric Screen—date, etc.

We would have liked to reproduce the herald here but the copy which we received was not fit for reproduction due to extremely light print. However, those of you who are looking for something new on this picture can write direct to Mr. Zadra, whom, we are sure, will send you a copy by return mail. O. K., Ed.?

"Tod" Browning Is On The Job With Real Showmanship

"Tod" Browning, managing director of the Famous B. F. Keith Memorial Theatre in Boston, Mass., pulled a master stroke in showmanship when he signed up Jack Sharkey, outstanding heavyweight champion contender for the title left vacant by Gene Tunney. "Tod" has to keep on his toes every minute so that the Memorial Theatre continues to occupy the fine position it now holds in Boston, so he never misses a single trick when it means bringing more business to the theatre.

This vaudeville engagement, by the way, will mark Sharkey's first appearance on the variety stage. Exhibition bouts will be staged and the real atmosphere of the ring will be injected into the entire presentation. This whole engagement demonstrates an interesting angle because the Memorial Theatre is strictly a "class" house catering to the best people in and around the Hub, and it clearly shows that surrounded and presented in the proper manner, any theatre, "class" or otherwise, can put over a stunt which will draw the business.

"Tod's" further activities will be looked for with much interest in the future. Shoot them along and also your photo.

Does Misleading Advt. Ever Bring More Business?

We are tempted to ask this question and trust it will evoke some interesting answers and comment. I have before me some theatrical pages from a certain city where one theatre has installed a sound plant and another has just a cheap non-synchronous machine. The theatre without a synchronous outfit, probably believing he was fooling the patrons, immediately started using the same expressions and captions as his opposition. "See Frankie Darro and hear a fine musical accompaniment," is what he advertised to his patrons, but it is not so strange to relate that he was fooling no one but himself, because those who did come soon left to tell the neighbors that the "So and So Theatre" was bunk and did not have any talking pictures.

If it were the last thing I ever accomplished in this business I would impress on every exhibitor and manager the importance of "Truth in Advertising." Don't try and deceive the theatre-goers, because they are practically "fool-proof" in this modern age. They go to the larger cities and theatres and know what it's all about, so just confine yourself to telling the truth and selling the show you have.

Culver Announces "Sound & Talkies" On Neat Mail Card

We are in receipt of a mighty neat looking announcement card which the Culver Theatre in Brooklyn, mailed to all their patrons. The card was the idea of Harry Lewis (no relation), manager of the house for the Seigel Circuit and well known in Brooklyn theatre circles.

With some very well chosen words, Lewis has set forth the inauguration of the sound equipment in the Culver and assures his patrons that all the finest "talking pictures" have been contracted for and that they will be presented with all the trimmings, the same as on Times Square. And Harry knows how to do it; what say, H. L.? Haven't seen you for a few years, but I hear about you, so that's not so bad.

HAROLD B. FRANKLIN, in last week's issue of the NEWS, said: "If I were a manager I would find out what the other fellow is doing and try to improve . . ."

That's the spirit of the Round Table Club.

Find out what the other fellow is doing by reading the Club pages every week.

Marquee Displays Being Used For "Talking Shorts"

The "sound" angle brought about one very desirable change in theatre advertising by reason of the ever-growing popularity of the "talking short" subjects. Here we picture the Isis Theatre marquee in Kansas City, Mo., and the Plaza Theatre in the same city, where you will note that Educational's "The Lion's Roar" and Mack Sennett's "The Bride's Relations" are getting prominent billing along with the other main attractions on the program. And this is as it should be. Why let the opportunity roll by to play up a part of your show that is as entertaining, or sometimes more entertaining, than even the featured picture? I personally witnessed the showing of "The Bride's Relations" in the Paramount Theatre in New York a few weeks ago and in my humble opinion it was the outstanding attraction on the entire program. "Sound" has opened up a wider field for shorts than for the feature length productions for many good reasons, and we should be quick to grasp the opportunity to play them up strong. That goes for lobby and program billing as well as newspaper ads. Take it from me, boys, it's worth the billing. Get after it you "sound" house managers.

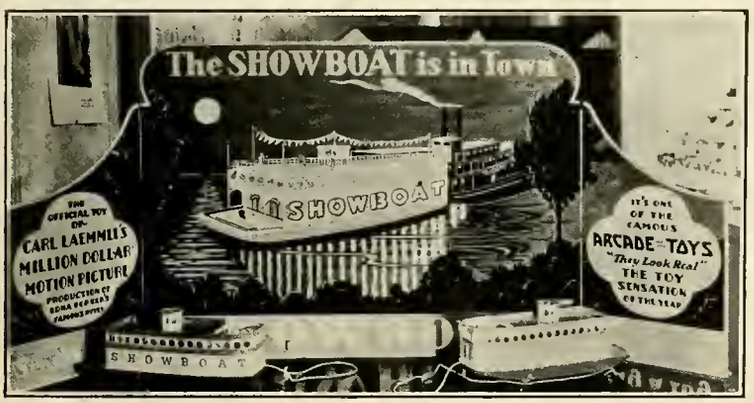
Egan Is Always On Job To Keep The Capitol In Front



From the Capitol Theatre, in Regina, Sask., Canada, our good friend P. D. Egan tells us that he is getting plenty of publicity and keeping the theatre in everyone's attention through a tie-up with the local Radio broadcasting station CHWC.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

The station asks every day over the air, why the Capitol is so well liked and the idea is that the listeners must embody their answers in ten words. Free passes are sent to those submitting the best phrases and to give you some idea how successful the stunt is working we need only call your attention to the fact that almost one thousand answers were received during the first week. Just imagine the interest this stunt has created and the raft of new names Egan is getting for his mailing list. That's what we call "steppin' on the gas." Atta boy Pete.

Toy "Showboats" Means Good Store Tie-Ups on Pictures

Here's one that will bear filing away for use when you play Universal's "Showboat," and from advance notices we are led to suspect that it's going to be a box office winner. The Arcade Mfg. Co., in cooperation with Universal's exploitation department, has manufactured toy "Showboats" as pictured here; all you need do is to work on all your local toy stores to effect a fine window tieup on the picture by use of these boats. Another good angle is to get some sort of a tank in your lobby or foyer (if possible) and make a display of your own. Even without the tank or water you could still produce an effect which, when properly set and lighted, would make everyone stop and take notice; in other words get them talking—that's always the way to create interest in any coming attraction.

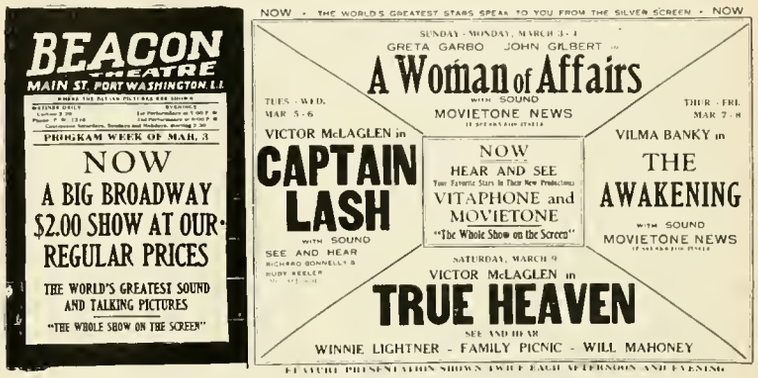
We recall on "Down to the Sea in Ships" a fine miniature stage stunt we used which showed a ship (the duplicate of the one in that picture) being tossed around on a storm sea. And make believe the cash customers didn't applaud the effect. It got a bigger hand than the favorite house orchestra. Such tieups invariably are good business getters and on this particular one the toy manufacturers have arranged to furnish every toy dealer in the country with all the necessary stuff for the window display. Don't lose track of this one boys; it's good.

W. R. Allen, Live-wire Publicity Man Joins Round Table

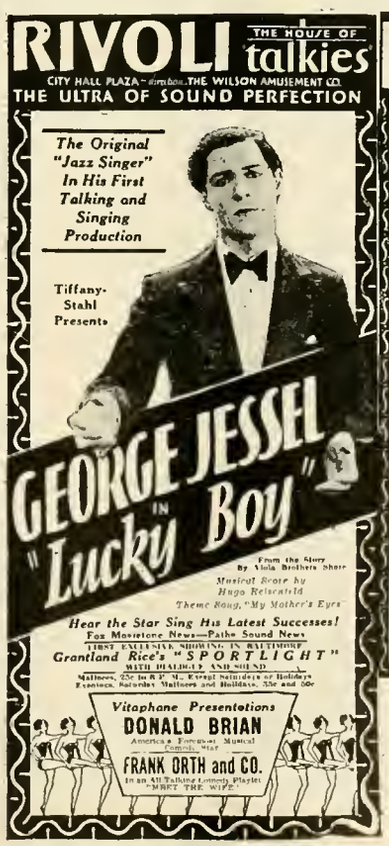
It always gives us great pleasure to single out some particular new member of the Club for special mention, and we believe this is the case with Mr. Wallace R. Allen, the publicity man for Publix-Olympia Theatre in New Haven.



Some of the exploitation engineered by Mr. Allen has been broadcast throughout the country by the Publix office because of the novelty and originality of the stunts. So we can all look forward to reading some interesting things from the Olympia Theatre and Mr. Allen.

Welcome, Wallace, and let's have your photo by return mail, and we don't mean maybe.

House Programs Will Be Publishd On These Pages



House organs and programs play so large a part in successful theatre operation that we intend to play this angle up quite a bit in the future issue of the Club pages.

The first one we illustrate is that used by William A. Levey of the Beacon Theatre in Port Washington, L. I.

You may recall that I called attention to Levey's program some time ago and since doing so, Bill tells me that he has received many requests for copies. Now we decided to show you what we were talking about. There are a lot of us who may not care for this type of house program. But to those managers who believe, as Levey does, this is just the thing. You will note the absence of theatre notes or editorials. It is strictly held to announcing the attractions that the Beacon will play. But it does announce these pictures emphatically.

Members will confer a favor by placing the Club on their regular theatre mailing lists so that we can receive a copy every week or as often as they are published. Do this right away so that I get plenty of programs to select from. Thanks in advance for this favor.

Stars Had To Put Their Own Names Up At Paramount

When the Paramount, New York, stage show added the Williams Sisters to their elaborate presentation, it was done on such short notice that no regular men were available to change the marquee signs, so the famous sisters borrowed a ladder back stage and proceeded to bill themselves. As you will readily see in the photograph, this stunt attracted plenty of attention from the strollers on Broadway, and how they do love to see strange sights in this old town. On the top of the ladder is pretty Dorothy Williams, while her sister Hanna hands the letters of their name to her. Class, eh, wot?

W. H. Hall Sends Us Some Fine Newspaper Advts.

From Baton Rouge, La., Manager W. H. Hall has sent us some copies of his newspaper ads which will come in for future use before very long. Mr. Hall is well known in theatrical circles down his way and has been schooled in the proper methods of real theatrical advertising, with the result that his ads are eye-arresting as soon as you reach the theatre page in his local papers.

Interesting Club Chatter About Our Various Members

Ed. Zadra, busier than ever, managing the Butterfield house in Manistee, Mich., always finds the time to keep the Club posted on his activities. In running through one of his recent letters we found the following paragraph—"Business is fair and I am getting ready for sound. It won't be long before the exhibitor without it will be in the 'horse and buggy' class."

As long as we're on the track of boosting the Club by quoting from some of our members' correspondence, we can't pass up the one from Lloyd E. Sinclair of the New Southern Theatre in Minneapolis. Says Lloyd: "I believe that this Club is one of the greatest things that has been created in . . . any trade magazine, and that the managers or exhibitors that do not join are missing out on a great thing." Thanks, Brother Sinclair, on behalf of all the members.

In looking at the "Season Pass" throw-away gag which seems to be sweeping the country, I have had occasion to question several members close to New York as to their opinion of this type of advertising. The decision seems to be fifty-fifty. But those who have used it seem to have kept to a neat and attractive make-up, with the result that the finished card is not a bad job. I have before me one from the Babcock Theatre, upstate house, and one from Sid Lawrence of Utica. However, you boys who run the house should know what is O. K. for your theatres. Use the old nut and you won't go wrong.

Michael Nicholas of the Farragut Theatre on the Schwartz Circuit is busier than a one-armed paper hanger with the itch these days, even though his theatre is closed. But it is only for a few weeks while they redecorate the entire house from top to bottom and install his Vitaphone and Movietone equipment. Then watch out for news from the Farragut and Nichols.

Fred Johnson hit the "bull's eye again when he worked some good dope on censorship into the editorial columns of his local paper. Fred always manages to keep himself and his theatre in the public eye and that's high-powered publicity in anybody's town. But whether he is busy as the devil or not he always keeps in touch with us. Gosh, Fred, what a shining example you would be for members with the the writer's cramp. Hey, hey.

Morris Rosenthal, manager of Schwartz' Queens Village Theatre, starts off his membership in the right way. Says Morris—"I will send you details of a campaign I executed here in changing from Vaudeville to Vitaphone policy. This may be of interest to many exhibitors who are facing the same problem we did." That's the spirit Rosenthal, the CLUB "bug" has bitten you already, so keep to your promise and the good work you have started.

What we would term originality is the best way to describe the very novel method which was used by Manager A. Baier of the Lindbergh Theatre in Kansas City, when he injected an entirely new "line" in theatre advertising by finishing off his ad with these words: "Thanking you in advance for your presence, we are, sincerely, Mr. and Mrs. A. Baier."

Maurice Bliss, of the Metro Theatre, in the Bronx, N. Y., is one of those members who fall behind once in a while and then make up for it by "shooting" some good stuff along. And his latest is a "WOW" in any language. Maurice, it was one of the best expressions, and truthful, that I have ever seen, but I like to get them just that way. We are all brothers under the skin, and when we want to say something in plain words and still feel certain that our confidence will not be violated, then you picked the right man to send it to. Let's hear some more from you Maurice, I like your stuff.

Manager's Round Table Club

Permit Us To Introduce Some New Members

CHARLES E. HUTCHINSON, of the Folly Theatre, in Oklahoma City, Okla., is busy preparing for "sound" and no doubt busy preparing an advance campaign for the inauguration of this type of entertainment. The way he engineers it should make darn good reading on these pages. Anything to start with Charlie?

EDWARD L. CONROY, directing head of the Capitol Theatre in Shreveport, La., has now had enough time and experience on "sound" pictures to make his views well worth reading about. Suppose Ed., you show us what a good member should do in the line of communicating with us on your exploitation of sound pictures?

* * *

J. EDWIN THAMERT, under whose direction the Strand Theatre keeps going out in Boise, Idaho, is just the type of smaller town manager whose views we value very highly. The small town is worthy of all the space that we can give it and from managers like Thamert we want the 'up to the minute' news.

ART HILE, the Judith Theatre manager from Lewistown, Mont., must have more than a passing knowledge of the show business because he has to handle everything from road shows to vaudeville and pictures, and besides his house is now wired for the "talkies" so that makes news from him still more interesting.

ARTHUR BACHECHI, manager of the Kimo Theatre in Albuquerque, N. M., runs a 1,500 seat theatre in the modern manner and a letter from him, now and then, should prove interesting reading for all the members. Come on, Art.

* * *

L. E. BREWER, manager of the Royal Theatre in Pauls Valley, Okla., is another new member whose theatre is now being wired for "sound," and while waiting for "talkie" news from him he might tell us how he put over the Royal advertising up to this time.

GEORGE E. CUIMETTE, Princess Theatre manager, from Fairhaven, Mass., is one of those managers who deals rather in quality than quantity, and for this reason he ought to come out in the open and tell us some of the ways he put over the pictures up there. We shall watch the mail for more about him.

FRED B. PICKREL, director of the Murray Theatre in Ponca City, Okla., has had a long and varied career in the theatre game and so should be well equipped to write us some news about the way he runs his theatre and sells the picture.

WALTER NEITHOLD, manager of the Liberty Theatre in Plainfield, N. J., has earned a reputation for bringing Broadway to Plainfield and his many novel exploitation and theatre operation methods have brought him into the limelight very often, which just proves that you can't keep a good man down. Walter should be sure to keep us posted on his activities.

J. E. JONES, who manages the Rex and Ritz Theatres in Seminole, Okla., has a man-sized job on his hands with the effort necessary to properly handle both those houses, but J. E. knows the show business and it takes more than just two houses to stump him. He could, if he wanted to, make a real active member by keeping us posted on how he exploits his pictures. Right, J. E.?

The Younger Generation

Not Jazzy, But A Well Done Talker

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

"THE YOUNGER GENERATION" is not one of those jazz and gin pictures as might be expected from the title. It is a story of advancement in this country of an emigrant family of Jewish faith, who rise from Delancey Street in the Ghetto of New York to Fifth Avenue, and in the process the son of the family changes from Morris Goldfish to Maurice Fish. The picture is a sob talker, produced by Columbia, and in all it looks like a good box office bet. Not a world beater by any means, but a picture that will get average business.

Columbia went out and got a very competent cast for this production as befitted the Fannie Hurst story which they had first secured. Then they went along and made a talking picture that rates fairly well with those that have been turned out in the first rush of dialog production.

The early scenes of life in the Ghetto district are well handled and the youngsters playing the roles of the children of the two families are worthy of billing, but unfortunately they were not programmed. Here the young son of the Goldfish family shows that he is destined to make his mark in the business world and he is the light and pride of his mother's eye. By the same token it is the daughter that is daddy's pride. When the boy reaches man's estate and becomes Maurice Fish an antique dealer of Fifth Avenue he moves his family to a spot where they will be on the edge of the social circle. That is all very well for he and mother but the father longs for the old neighborhood and his bearded cronies who speak his language and the daughter has not outgrown her childhood love affair with one of the old neighborhood boys, despite the fact that her brother upbraids her for it. When the sister's sweetheart becomes involved in a robbery and the girl sticks and marries him, it is too much for the high-toned brother and he turns her out of the house. She does not get back until she arrives at her father's bedside as he dies. By that time she is a mother and her husband has been released from prison. Then even the old mother turns from her boy and decides that she too would prefer to go back among her own people in the Ghetto, where the daughter is living.

Melodramatic yes, but the kind of melodrama that the majority of audiences like.

Drawing Power: General. Teaches a fairly good moral in honoring the parents. The cast with Jean Hersholt as the father, Lina Basquette and Ricardo Cortez have box office value.

The Woman Who Needed Killing

Title Tells The Story

(Reviewed by Jerry Hoffman)

"THE WOMAN WHO NEEDED KILLING" is made obvious from start to finish by its title and the earlier sequences. The audience knows, from the moment the title is flashed, that they will see a woman who is a rather mean person and that she will be disposed of in some manner for the good of the rest of the characters before the final fade-out. This brings the only suspense or interest from the audience in speculation as to how this killing will be done and when.

It is from the story by Margaret H. Lawrence, which is supposed to have been widely circulated. The locale is South Africa, wherein an English gentleman and his wife are stationed in a government post. From the outset, we see that the woman is the type who needs killing, simply because she can't help vamping other men, particularly youngsters. When she tries it on the younger brother, an idol of her husband, that calls for the execution. While the husband sets about exterminating her, (for the good of the race) he is spared that crime by another circumstance. Clyde Cook supplies the other circumstance which relieves Clive Brook of the vampirish presence of Baclanova. And Neil Hamilton, as Clive Brook's younger brother, furnishes impetus to the motive. Prior to this Leslie Fenton appeared as a young man who served as "lure practice" for Baclanova.

The sound apparatus in the theatre where previewed was horrible and didn't enhance the value of the dialogue one bit. That the dialogue is good was proven by the fact that the audience liked it when they could understand it. There are a bit too many Russian songs from Baclanova. So far, this gorgeous lady has delivered Russian chansons (an odd combination but it goes) in "The Wolf of Wall Street" and now unloads a truckful in "The Woman Who Needed Killing."

For exhibitors "The Woman Who Needed Killing" is a sporting proposition. It will rate one extreme or another in your locality depending on exploitation, the type of patrons and sort of newspaper reviews. In other words, it will be hailed either as "great, different unusual, brilliant" and whatever adjectives are the favorites of alleged "high-brow" critics; or it will be just plain flop. The odds are in favor of the former.

That Murder In Berlin

Just Another Court Room Melodrama

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

AS suggested by the title this is a German made production. That means good photography, direction and possibly acting. The question of story, however, is another matter. In this particular case the story is rather unsatisfactory for the audience will leave the theatre wondering what really happened, who committed the murder or was it a suicide. Their curiosity won't be satisfied, so they won't be satisfied with the picture. Then there is the title to raise something of a question. Will American audiences be interested in a murder that occurred in Berlin?

The tale does show German court procedure to be somewhat different from our own, but at the same time it shows that the juries are no different and a good looking woman charged with crime has more than an even chance of being acquitted.

In this particular instance the story opens with an aged artist, who has been secretly married for months to a young and very beautiful actress, disclosing the fact at a little wedding supper for three. The next morning he is discovered dead in his room, while his wife is found tied to her bed in the adjoining room. From that point the action is wholly in the court room, with the various theories of what took place being pictured as the testimony of various witnesses is given, and then picturized differently when the prosecutor and the attorneys for the defense sum up. In the end the woman is acquitted, and when her attorney proposes to her in the empty court room, she rewards him with a smile and says she will consider his proposal later.

Magda Sonja who created the role of Mata Hari in "The Red Dancer" is the woman in the case in this instance and gives a very finished performance. Her aged husband in the hands of Carl Gotz becomes a fine piece of character work, while Karl Ettlinger is the attorney hero of the affair. The heavy played by Anton Pointner is passable. A comedy character played by Gustav Diesel lends itself perfectly to what is rather a dreary affair.

A twist at the end of this picture, showing what a farce some jury trials are where a pretty woman is concerned, by having the heroine walk out and marry the heavy might have helped.

Drawing Power: Little if any. The picture will do to fill in though as against another mystery feature that may be played up in your town by the opposition with heavy advertising.

Produced and distributed by The Big Three. Length 5,700 feet. Running time an hour and twelve minutes. Story by Max Brod, directed by Frederick Feher.

THE CAST

The Husband	Carl Gotz
The Wife	Magda Sonja

Where East Is East

Fine Audience Picture

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

REGARDLESS of a perfectly obvious story that tells what's coming reels in advance, there are so many good points to the production, that story faults are easily forgotten.

"Where East is East" is an example that good silent pictures still can be made—pictures that can and do hold the attention of audiences even better than the newer form of all-talkers and sounders. Even in rough preview form, with a few hundred feet still to be shaved, and with necessary brushing up of titles to be accomplished, the picture unwound at a clip that held audience interest throughout.

Lon Chaney is, as always, an outstanding actor, and presents a forceful characterization. He is supported by Lupe Velez, United Artists meteoric star; Estelle Taylor, in a role that is outstanding; and Lloyd Hughes, former First National star.

"Where East Is East" as a picture grips an audience. It's one of those stories laid somewhere east of Suez with Chaney in the role of a hard-boiled wild animal trapper for one of the large circuses. Chaney achieves another excellent makeup with a face torn and scarred (but not grotesque) where sundry jungle "eats" have raked their claws.

Estelle Taylor handles one of the oddest roles of her screen career—and one of the most difficult portrayals that have been handed out in many a day. Around her characterization revolves the entire plot of this weird story.

Toyo is in reality Estelle's daughter—and therein lies the salt of one of the oddest plots in a long time. The struggle of a French mother, versed in all the trickery of the Orient, trying with all her wiles to lure away the sweetheart of her daughter, is in itself a novel idea that Tod Browning developed to the fullest extent.

The climax is one that causes the audience to hold its breath, even though it had been telegraphed three reels previously. To forever still the luring eyes of his former wife, Chaney uncages a man-eating gorilla, which was waiting for an opportunity to go after Estelle for a hurt years previously. When the gorilla first attacks Estelle, Chaney apparently changes his mind and makes a futile attempt to save her. Toyo and the boy are married in front of the mangled animal trapper, and embark for the West as Chaney peacefully eashes in from his wounds.

It's a picture with plenty of wallop.

Drawing Power: Lon Chaney Lupe Velez Estelle Taylor, a combination that is sure-fire to attract attention. You can go the limit in advertising this one as fine entertainment, and will have to make no apologies after. It's a star cast in a Kiplingesque love story of the Orient.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Story by Tod Browning and Harry Sinclair Drago. Adapted by Waldemar Young. Scenario by Richard Schayer. Directed by Tod Browning. Photography by Henry Sharp. Length, approx. 6,500 feet. Release date, May 4.

The Spirit Of Youth

Exceptionally Good

(Silent Version Only)

THE career of a certain boxing champion who retired and married an heiress forms the basis of this Tiffany-Stahl picture starring Dorothy Sebastian. From the enthusiasm displayed by a jaded evening audience, the film is a certain box office kayo. It's a pip of a program picture neatly directed by Walter Lang and is well-edited.

The story opens in a harbor town. Larry Kent is cast as the sailor-boxer—the pride of the Navy. He is enamored with the village librarian, Dorothy Sebastian. After several sequences establishing the idea that she's a sweet young thing, madly in love, his boat leaves. Kent promises to come back to her and to "write a postcard from every port."

Time lapses are cut in neatly by showing Dorothy making trips to the mail box hopefully awaiting the promised postcards. In a trip from the house through the snow is interlapped a shot showing her stepping from the door in summer finery. The next she hears Larry is the world's middleweight champion.

In the meantime he has fallen in love with another girl—a rich heiress who lives in the harbor city and who is very friendly with Dorothy.

The heiress prevails upon Larry to stage an exhibition bout before he retires for all time. His sparring partner pulls a double-cross and when Larry is blinded from rosin in the other's gloves, he is knocked out. Naturally the heiress is disappointed but Dorothy, who is in the crowd, comes to the ring, and with the love light gleaming in her eyes, tells Larry he is still champion as far as she is concerned.

At this point Larry re-enters the ring and knocks out the unfaithful sparring partner. Then he rushes to Dorothy's little seaside cottage for the final fadeout.

It's a clever little picture for some reason. It caught the audience's fancy right at the start, and held right through to the finish. The immense amount of ballyhoo which has been put forth for championship boxers evidently strikes home to most of the public.

Betty Francisco handles the role of the heiress daughter in capable fashion. The cleverest individual work in the picture is contributed by Maurice Murphy, the young brother of the heiress.

Drawing Power: Dorothy Sebastian is forging ahead rapidly in popularity and should mean something as the star. The picture can be recommended as fine entertainment, as it is way above the general average of program pictures. Stress can be laid on the fact that it's the love story of a boxing champion—but most of the business will come from favorable word of mouth advertising.

Produced and distributed by Tiffany-Stahl. Story and scenario by Eve Unsell and Elmer Harris. Directed by Walter Lang. Photography by John Boyle. Titles by Frederic and Fanny Hatton. Length approximately 6,000 feet. Released Feb. 20.

The Canary Murder Case

A Mystery Thriller In Talk Well Handled

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

HERE is a crackerjack mystery thriller done in dialog. It is from a "best seller" by S. S. Van Dine and the audiences should eat it up. The mystery and suspense are maintained until the final minutes of the picture and the story has the audience on the edge of their seats the biggest part of the time. From a box office angle it is a bet that you can't afford to miss if you have a wired house.

The cast is one hundred per cent great with William Powell, Louise Brooks, James Hall and Jean Arthur as the featured members. William Powell in the role of Philo Vance the society criminal investigator walks away with the honors of the picture, but the others are close behind him.

It is a story that combines the stage and screen and it is quite possible that S. S. Van Dine received his original suggestion for the novel from "The Broadway Butterfly" case several years ago. In adapting the book Florence Ryerson and Albert Shelby LeVino have done a neat and effective piece of work, while Malcolm St. Clair who directed cleverly maintained the suspense to the last shred in his screen development of the story.

"The Canary" is a musical comedy girl who has had considerable of a past and any number of admirers, most of them being around that dangerous age of 10. Finally she meets with young Jimmy Spotswoode. He is socially prominent and there is money in the family. The fact that Jimmy is engaged to another girl in the show means nothing to "The Canary." He's her birdseed and she goes right after him. Jimmy finally tries to break off, his father also goes to see her, but she is determined to marry the boy and proceeds to call up all of the men in her past and tells them that she is going to wed and advises them to "kick in" to her with substantial wedding presents, checks preferred. The admirers dare not disobey her summons to her apartment and the next morning when it is found that "The Canary" has been strangled with her own necklace, they are all under suspicion.

Of course Philo Vance arrives and clears the mystery and shows how cleverly the one who committed the crime hid his tracks.

Drawing Power: You can go as far as you like on this one and rest assured that it will please any type of person that sits in your audience.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length: Sound, 7,171 feet; silent, 7,171 feet. Running time an hour and twenty-two minutes. Released Feb. 23, 1929. From the mystery novel by S. S. Van Dine. Adapted by Florence Ryerson and Albert LeVino. Directed by Malcolm St. Clair.

Speakeasy

Good Underworld-Prize Ring Talker

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

"SPEAKEASY" should get a lot of dough at the box office. In the first place the title is one that should intrigue audiences. It is a fast moving story, well acted and directed with as good dialog as any of the feature length talkers have had to date. It came into New York this week for the 2nd Anniversary Bill at the Roxy and was backed with a whale of an advertising campaign that is second only to that given to the advent of "In Old Arizona."

The original play of Edward Knoblock and George Rosner won't be recognized by those writers when they look at the picture. But Eddie Burke who handled the changes of dialog to fit the new version has done a good job. Ben Stoloff who directed also did a very workmanlike piece of work, and the picture brings a new leading juvenile to the screen in Paul Page who was given all the best of it in the advertising. He proves fairly satisfactory as does Lola Lane who has the lead opposite him, but the three people who really run away with the picture are Helen Ware, Stuart Erwin and Sharon Lynn.

The tale concerns a middleweight champion pugilist who wants to retire, but his manager in order to keep him in the fight game frames for him to be defeated. This manager is a pretty tough egg, a slick politician, protector of speakeasies and the leader of a gun mob. The complications start when a girl working on one of the newspapers decides that she will be able to get a story out of the defeated champ despite the fact that he has refused to talk to anyone. Accompanied by one of the reporters of the paper she invades the speakeasy where the champ and his manager make their headquarters. The manager tries to make her and when it becomes necessary for her to prove to the fighter that he has been framed she seemingly falls for the manager's wiles, and once she has the proof the former champion decides that he will go back in the ring and regain the crown he has lost—just for love's sake.

He gets a return match, which he wins, but not before there has been a kidnapping of the heroine, the murder of the crooked manager and the shooting of an old piano player in the dive. Just why this piano player wanted to protect the young girl will be one of those mysteries but he did protect her and paid with his life for it.

"Speakeasy" is a safe bet for it has anything that an audience can ask for.

Drawing Power: All classes. It will get those who want underworld stuff, and you can make a play for the sports and fight followers. Still there is sufficient of a love story to keep the flaps thrilled and maybe they will fall hard for this Page boy.

Produced and distributed by Fox Films Corp. Running time an hour and one minute. From the play by Edward Knoblock and George Rosner. Directed by Ben Stoloff.

Battle Of Mons

War Scenes Without A Kick

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is a picture that glorifies the English Army that was first to cross the Channel secretly in 1914 to throw its force with the French to stop the German invasion. However, the picture is one that is patently a manufactured product with a few actual shots incorporated. The fact that it is manufactured and the troops are so evidently taking direction makes it a laugh at times. There is little interest in the picture for this country, although it should find ready box office patronage in Canada.

The titles are a series of dates, beginning with August 14, 1914, and running through the memorable retreat of the English and French armies, until they stood with their backs to the walls of Paris before they were able to repulse the invader. Regiment after regiment of English troops are mentioned. They don't mean anything to those of us in this country who are not English. The tradition and history of these regiments are not familiar to the average American audience and therefore we naturally cannot get the thrill out of the picture that an English or Canadian audience would.

The New Era Films, Ltd., present the picture, which was produced with the official sanction and cooperation of the British Army Council. The direction is the work of Walter Summers.

Scenes shown are the English troops leaving Dover, crossing the channel, their arrival in France and the first battle of the war. In reality it wasn't a battle, but a running fight which virtually ended in a rout, with the mere handful of Britishers trying to stem an irrestible force. There are a couple of dramatic incidents that have been played up, one of two Englishmen standing off a troop of Germans in a wind-mill, and the Germans being finally dispersed by artillery fire. Another a street battle where again a handful of English licked the whole German Army.

But there is no story other than the combat of the military forces behind the picture and that washes it up as far as most American audiences are concerned.

Produced and distributed by British New Era Films, Ltd. Length, 5,500 feet. Running time, an hour and seven minutes. Directed by Walter Summers.

Cohens And Kellys In Atlantic City

Slapstick Hoke To Get Laughs

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THE picture is a combination of talkie and silent. The dialogue sequences are principally between George Sidney as Cohen and Mack Swain as Kelly, with the usual Weber and Fieldian cross fire clashing of the Irish and Jew partners who have been in business together for 30 years and who have fought continuously for that length of time. Albert DeMond is responsible for the dialogue and titles.

Cohen and Kelly, in this installment of their activities, are engaged in the business of manufacturing bathing suits. But they are behind the times, so Rosie Cohen and Pat Kelly, daughter and son of the respective partners decide that the firm needs new life, so they undertake to provide it. The fathers are sent on the road and the children remodel the shop and show room, putting in a bathing girl revue to attract the buyers. They have also contracted to present a prize of $10,000 to the prize bathing beauty of the Atlanic City pageant. In the midst of the bathing girl revue at the sales rooms the parents walk in and the kids flee. Atlantic City is their objective. Cohen becomes aware of this, and, with Mrs. Kelly, follows them. Kelly, believing his wife has eloped with Cohen, gets Mrs. Cohen and follows. Mrs. Kelly has had the foresight to send a telegram to the Atlantic City police asking them to hold her son and Cohen's daughter on their arrival. The police watch the trains but the kids go by auto, so when the senior Cohens and Kellys arrive they are seized by the cops and thrown in jail. Cohen is placed with a murderous crook as a cell mate and handcuffed to him. When the crook makes his escape he carried Cohen with him and then there is another chase that goes on for hours. In the end the pageant is held and Rosie Cohen wins it, so the firm is in the $10,000 prize money and the business of the firm is rehabilitated through the business activities of the youngsters.

In the matter of cast the picture is all that could be asked. George Sidney and Vera Gordon are Mr. and Mrs. Cohen, Mack Swain and Kate Price are the Kelly couple, while Nora Lane is the Rosie Cohen and Cornelius Keefe portrays Pat Kelly. Virginia Sale, sister of Chic Sale, is present in a bit as a steno, while Tom Kennedy plays the tough crook.

Drawing Power: Should get by in the cheaper houses, but hasn't the class to entitle it to a week's run in the first run theatres. Harmless enough in its hokum comedy and should pull laughs from the average second run audiences.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Length: Sound version, 7,400 feet. Running time, an hour and twenty minutes. Story by Jack Townley, adapted by Earle Snell, directed by William James Craft.

THE CAST

Mr. Cohen	George Sidney
Mrs. Cohen	Vera Gordon
Mr. Kelly	Mack Swain

"At the Dentist's"
(Pathe All-Talkie—2 Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

GEORGE LE MAIRE has gone and done it. In his first talking comedy for Pathe he has turned out an appreciable lot of humor. That the fans will gulp it down with satisfaction seems a certainty and that there will be loud guffaws and laughter is a foregone conclusion.

The scene is laid in a dentist's office and Mr. Le Maire presides as the extractor of teeth. Into his office come various sufferers from rebellious bicuspids and their reactions to the doctor's manipulations with the tweezers offer a whale of fun.

One little runt in particular (a part that is played superbly by Louis Simon) shoves the comedy up the laugh barometer. He is strikingly funny with his quavering speech and sad, inoffensive antics. "I know your goin' ter hurt me," he renders in a high pitched voice blended with fear as Le Maire endeavors to apply his pliers. When he does get them grasped firmly to a molar, the runt displays amazing stubbornness in refusing to part with his tooth and the doctor wrestles him to the floor and all over his sanctum in a mad endeavor to pull the resisting grinder. This scene is funny. Pathe will pull the laughs and the customers if the forthcoming series of talkies are even one-half as good as this one. Basil Smith directed and George Gould and Evelyn Knapp are seen in supporting roles. Le Maire's name is a new one to exhibitors, but they may as well form his acquaintance right away. And don't overlook little Mr. Simon in the hustle.

"A Final Reckoning"
(Universal—Ten Episodes)
(Reviewed by Thomas Tyrrell)

THIS serial of the early gold rush days in Australia is too similar to the old western type of picture to be interesting. The acting is a bit overdone, with the exception of pretty Louise Lorraine, who takes all the honors. Jay Wilsey (Buffalo Bill, Jr.) and Newton House are also featured in the cast.

The scenes are taken in a small town in Australia, where the old fashioned saloon still prevails. There are many thrills that will appeal to children, especially small boys.

Reuben Whitney and his sister are living alone in England while their father is seeking his fortune in Australia. He strikes it rich and sends for them, enclosing a map of the mine which "Black Jack," a renegade, and his band of bushrangers are trying to steal. Whitney is killed by Tom Thorne, alias "Black Jack," because he would not reveal the secret of the mine. He is found by Captain Wilson, a friend of Whitney's, who vows vengeance. Reuben and his sister arrive in Australia and with the aid of Captain Wilson foil all attempts of "Black Jack" to gain possession of the mine.

This serial was directed by Ray Taylor, who could have accomplished more with better material. Released April 15, 1929.

"A Dominion Of Diversity"
(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is one of the Lyman H. Howe Hodge Podge series showing the grandeur and scenic beauty of Canada, as well as some of its industrial activities. As usual the picture is splendidly arranged and the shots so diversified that interest is readily maintained throughout.

Shots showing the peaceful pastoral pursuits are followed by the lively lumbering activities and then the scenic beauties of the waterfalls, the apple blossoms and the vacation pleasures of summer and winter. There are shots of Niagara Falls, of mountain climbing exploits, of various types of Indians and of the largest ski clubs in the world. It is good entertainment for any type of house.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Seeing Sights"
(Universal—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

SID SAYLOR, who is known on the screen as the victim of the "Let George Do It" series, carries on with some effective gags in this latest release from the Stern Bros. As usual, Gus Meins directed. You can catalogue this one as a satisfying number that'll get the laughs.

George and his pal arrive to spend an evening entertaining two sisters in their parlor with musical offerings and similar endeavors. Then the comedy switches to George on his new job: that of driving a sight-seeing bus. The girls assist him in drumming up trade and more than enough customers result. A fight breaks out in the bus and chaos rules.

"A Lad And His Lamp"
(Pathe-Fables—One Reel)

THESE Pathe Fables have variety. One week they deal with Milton and Rita Mouse, the next with Thomas Cat, and so forth and so on through animaldom. This time Milton and Rita are smitten again with each other and Rita neglects her work as a beauty parlor maid listening to Milton's ecstatic serenades.

King Egypt, an evil soul, spies the lovely Rita and immediately his couriers go after her. But the heroic male mouse defends his mistress in the castles of the king, delivers her from the arms of His Royal Highness and spirits her away.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Days Of Daring"
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

BOOTLEGGERS invade the wild open spaces and cause a little war thereon in this new Westernette starring the heroic Bob Curwood. The up-to-date hijacker-bootlegger theme gives it some pep, although there is still the trite idea of the hero, as the girl's foreman, being her constant rescuer and the means through which the villain is soundly trounced. Fast riding is excellently pictured and then there are the fights with fists and guns to give it a vigorous swing. But the story is but a slight variation of the one and only theme: the hero and heroine vs. the villain. Walter Fabian is labelled as the director, Norman W. Lacy as author and continuity writer, Milton Bridenbecker as cameraman, Val Cleveland as title writer, and Richard H. Cahoon as film editor. Gloria Grey is the gal and Bud Osborn the menace.

After saving her from a runaway horse, Bob becomes the foreman of Gloria's ranch where Bud is engaged in smuggling the forbidden liquor. He smacks Bob down, ties him up, but he escapes when his horse unties the knots; he goes off after the villain who is abducting the girl. Hijackers engage the bootleggers in gunplay while Bob vanquishes the villain and the posse arrives just in time to move all the wicked men to jail. A familiar story.

"Sound News No. 12"
(One Reel—Pathe)

THE latest issue of Pathe's talking newsreel contains scenes of ex-president Taft and granddaughter, marines in bayonet practice, and a lifeboat drill aboard a modern ocean liner. The contents of the reel are not stirring, neither do they really engross the attention. The Taft story, in particular, is disappointing, because the conversation between this genial figure and his little descendant is for the most part inaudible because of some hubbub that is going on. A lion's roaring forms about the best bit of the lot. The sound absorbed by these "cameras with ears" is too mechanical at the present time and it will be some time, it appears, before they can be caught and reproduced with authenticity. Good filler on a talkie program.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"The Lumberjack"
(Universal—One Reel)

IN this cartoon, we have Oswald, the funny little rabbit in another of his adventures, this time as a lumberjack.

While the animals are busy in the sawmill, Oswald strolls into the forest to cut down trees. As he is cutting down a tree, he finds a bag of gold which is snatched by a bear who scoots off with it. In the chase that follows, Oswald executes many funny tactics, especially when he uses his tail as a wind propeller.

This cartoon has some effects which makes it very entertaining.—THOMAS TYRRELL.

"Old Black Joe"
(Fleischer-Paramount Sound Novelty)
(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is one of the Max Fleischer song novelties done in sound and released by Paramount. They have taken the old plantation ditty, that was the delight of the street corner quartets of the last fifty years and worked it out effectively in cartoon and music. Runs four minutes.

Another "Scandal" Show Announced

M-G-M Plans To Produce Annual Musical Revue

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 21.—M-G-M intends to produce one musical talkfilm yearly under a title of "Hollywood Scandals," "Revels" or some other similar designation much in the manner of the Greenwich Follies and various annual musical revues staged in New York.

This decision was reached by production executives after final rehearsals were held last week for the M-G-M Minstrel Show all-talker and musical production. A long list of prominent stage and vaudeville talent has been engaged for special numbers in the picture, and when finally cut and released, it will be more in the nature of a stage revue.

Last week M-G-M notified all employees a new title was required for the picture; and then it was decided that the word "Hollywood" would have to be included; with an idea of making an all talker musical revue annually.

Fox Buys George Jessel's Tiffany-Stahl Contract

Tiffany-Stahl's contract with George Jessel, whom they starred in "Lucky Boy," current release, has been purchased by William Fox who plans to star him in four dialogue pictures. Director and cast had been engaged for Jessel's next for Tiffany-Stahl, but the Fox offer was so tempting that his agreement with Tiffany-Stahl was abrogated.

"Twin Beds" Cast Grows

Among the names added to the cast of First National's Vitaphone version of "Twin Beds" are Zasu Pitts, Edythe Chapman, Knute Erickson, Nita Martan, and Ben Hendricks. Jack Mulhall is to play the leading masculine role in the adaptation of the famous stage play, and Patsy Ruth Miller will play opposite him.

A certain Kansas City film salesman is telling the one about a Joplin, Mo., exhibitor who advertised a synchronized picture the other day: "With noise effects."

It Has Come To This: Screen Star Wallpaper

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, March 21.—A new novelty stunt now in form of organization is a company manufacturing "Screen Star Wallpaper." The intention is to make paper of different stars, through tie-ups with studios. Thus a home can be decorated with paper glorifying different poses of the owner's favorites. Instead of a blue-room, there would be a "Garbo Room," for the kiddies, "Our Gang" or "Tom Mix Room," and for moon-struck flappers a "Buddy Rogers" or a "John Gilbert Room."

A company known as the First Eastern Film Corporation, according to York, Pa., newspapers, has been formed to take over the large warehouses of the old Foust Distilling Company, at Glen Rock, for use as studios for the making of motion pictures.

Film Notes From The Indiana Territory

NATIONAL and state sessions of conventions of the Indorsers of Photoplays will be held in Indianapolis, Ind., April 4 and 5, at the Claypool Hotel, according to the Indianapolis Endorsers. A national business session will open the meetings with an election of national officers and reporters from presiding officers. During the afternoon of April 4 an election of state officers will be held. The next day will be devoted to discussion of organization work and the annual luncheon will be held during this last day's session. Mrs. David Ross, of Indianapolis, will preside at the convention of both groups.

A new motion picture theatre, not yet named, will open in Marion, Ind., about May 15, according to Donald Graham, Indianapolis architect.

Charles Sweeton, Evansville, Ind., theatre operator and manager, now president of the North Side Amusement Company operating the Majestic, Ohio, and Royal theatres, was seriously injured one night last week when forced by a "road hog" over a 30-foot embankment into a ditch filled with five feet of water.

The New Grand, R-K-O house in Evansville, Ind., announced some time ago that RCA Photophone, with Movietone and Vitaphone attachments, was being installed, to be ready for opening March 3, at which time a 15-year policy would be changed. On March 1, when no bookings for the coming week's pictures had been received by the local management, orders came from New York to continue the vaudeville policy for at least another week. March 7, it was suddenly announced that the house would close its doors for an indefinite period. On March 9, it was stated the house would reopen, but no date set. Monday, March 11, it was announced the house would reopen Saturday, March 16, with talkies. Other policy announcements were all shows would change on Saturday and be full week stands.

Bids have been received by Oscar and Isador Fine, operators of the Alhambra, Columbia and Franklin neighborhood houses in Evansville, Ind., for their new $45,000 neighborhood house to be erected at Washington and Kentucky avenues. Construction will probably start in three or four weeks.

Carl Stearn, Veteran Mgr., Dies In Seattle

SEATTLE'S Film Row was grieved this week at the death of Carl Stearn, manager of the Warner Brothers exchange, who died at the Swedish Hospital Friday night following a heart attack suffered in his home on Thursday evening. Mr. Stearn had been associated with the film industry for nearly twenty-five years. He is survived by his widow, two sisters and a brother.

Hollywood—Continued

Shirley Mason Returns

Shirley Mason returns to motion pictures in the starring role of "Anna Against the World" for Trem Carr Productions. Miss Mason retired over a year ago. The story is an original by Arthur Hoerl, and will be directed by Duke Worne.

Completes Jolson Dialogue

Joseph Jackson has completed the dialogue for Al Jolson's next picture, "Little Pal," in which Davey Lee also will be seen. Jackson wrote the talk for "The Singing Fool."

Technical Effects Combined

Warners have combined the technical effects and miniature departments of Warner and First National Studios, with the department's new headquarters at the latter plant. Fred Jackman is in charge, with Alvin Knetchel assisting.

Renews Asther Option

M-G-M has renewed option on contract of Nils Asther, featured player, for an additional year.

Signs New Contract

Bartlett Cormack, who wrote the stage play "The Racket," and who has recently been on the Paramount writing staff, signed a new contract yesterday with that organization.

He has just completed an adaptation for the screen, with dialogue, of S. S. Van Dine's "The Greene Murder Case," which will go into production soon at the Paramount Hollywood studios.

Writing Dix Dialogue

John Farrow is now engaged in writing dialogue and adaptation of "Wheel of Life," an all-talkie, starring Richard Dix. Story is from the stage melodrama of same title by James B. Fagan. Victor Schertzinger will direct the all-talkie.

Baclanova In All-Talkie

Paramount is now planning to star Baclanova in "The Love Market," slated as an all-talker. Story and dialogue is being written by Lawrence Arnold.

Working On An Original

Samuel Ornitz is now occupied with writing an original story under title of "The Master" for Paramount. Picture when made will be an all-talker.

Lloyd Cast Complete

Casting for Harold Lloyd's initial sound and dialogue production was completed recently when Mary McAllister was signed by Production Manager John L. Murphy, to portray one of the leading roles of the story.

"Brown of Harvard" Sequel

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer intends production of a sequel to "Brown of Harvard" titled "Back to Harvard." Jack Conway who directed the first, will do the epilogue, which will again star Billy Haines. A. P. Younger is doing the adaptation.

Warner Baxter's Next

Warner Baxter's next vehicle for Fox will be the lead in "Behind the Curtain," from Earl Derr Biggers' Satevepost story. Irving Cummings will direct. Lumsden Hare is also cast.

Will Feature Fetchit

Stepin Fetchit, colored comedian under contract to Fox, will be featured in a full length comedy by that company. Paul Sloane, director of "Hearts in Dixie" will handle the megaphone and Walter Weems is writing the story. It will have a mixed cast, white and colored. No definite title yet.

Colleen Moore Vehicle

First National Pictures, Inc., announces that contracts have been closed covering the purchase of complete motion picture and talking motion picture rights for "Footlights and Fools," Katherine Brush's College Humor story, which will serve as a starring vehicle for Colleen Moore, to follow "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling."

LIVING UP TO A NAME!

WHAT a task to live up to a name like IDEAL! And how Jack White and Jerry Drew are doing it. Snappy, dapper Jerry breezes easily through a whirl of pure fun, decorated with delightful trimmings of feminine beauty, and leaves your whole audience gayer and happier. And when you can do that, that's comedy! That's the ideal touch of spice in the program.

THESE CHANGING TIMES!

THE one company that fully grasps what this new era of talking pictures really means—and is proving it week after week with great pictures—is

PARAMOUNT

As an example, take PARAMOUNT TALKING PICTURES for April and May:

CLARA BOW

Your box office doesn't know the half of "It" till you play Bow in "The Wild Party", all-talking! By the author of "Flaming Youth". Directed by Dorothy Arzner. No company but Paramount could give you such a show!

"THE LETTER"

"The greatest talking picture yet made", said five leading New York critics. S.R.O. $2 hit at Criterion Theatre, N.Y. Starring JEANNE EAGELS, of "Rain" fame. Directed by Jean de Limur. With O. P. Heggie. History-making drama!

"CLOSE HARMONY"

MAURICE CHEVALIER

Ziegfeld says, "The World's Greatest Entertainer"! Paramount brings his marvelous personality and gorgeous singing and speaking voice to you in "Innocents of Paris". With Sylvia Beecher, George Fawcett, others. Directed by Richard Wallace.

RICHARD DIX

Twice as great a b.o. draw in his first all-talking picture, "Nothing But the Truth". With Helen Kane (famous musical comedy star singing), Louis John Bartels, others. Directed by Victor Schertzinger. One of the comedy hits of all times!

"GENTLEMEN OF THE PRESS"

Revolutionary! Different from any picture ever seen or heard before! More than a picture—life itself! With the distinguished actor, WALTER HUSTON, star of "The Barker" on the stage. Directed by Millard Webb. From the N. Y. stage sensation!

"THE WOMAN WHO NEEDED KILLING"

The mighty all-talking melodrama in which the world has been waiting to see and hear The Great Baclanova! Clive Brook, Neil Hamilton and big cast. Rowland V. Lee Prod.

"THE MAN I LOVE"

"THE HOLE IN THE WALL"

With two outstanding stars of two big Broadway stage hits —Claudette Colbert (of "Dynamo") and Edward G. Robinson (of "Kibitzer"). All-talking production treating a startling subject in a startling manner! Directed by Robert Florey.

TALKING PICTURE HEADQUARTERS

BROADWAY goes PHOTOPHONE

PUBLIC recognition of the tonal superiority of RCA Photophone is in direct proportion to the showings of the pictures recorded by it.

Nowhere is this truer than on Broadway—the testing ground of all things theatrical.

Characteristic of the enthusiasm with which Photophone has been received on this famous thoroughfare, is the comment of Sime Silverman, editor of "Variety" upon the occasion of the showing of "Lucky Boy," starring George Jessel, at the Capitol Theatre, New York.

Similar acclaim was accorded "The Spieler," shown at the Roxy the same week, and "Strange Cargo" at the Paramount the preceding week, both Photophone-recorded.

Mr. Silverman's comment on "Lucky Boy" follows:

"If you want to accept this Photophone sounding, heard for the first time by this reviewer in a theatre (previously heard in the projection room of Photophone) as indicative of the possibilities of sound pictures, then Photophone seems to have it considerably over the others.

"Clear, without a blur or whirr, you must hear Jessel talk and sing to know how far ahead Photophone appears to be as a sound recorder and reproducer. In one number, 'My Real Sweetheart,' which Jessel sings, he is supposed to be on the rear end of an observation car on a transcontinental train. It's the actual sameness, as though Jessel were singing himself in 'one,' near the apron."

Praise from such source is praise indeed, but the truest test of Photophone superlative qualities is to let it speak for itself in your theatre. It will give your audiences a new conception of the entertainment value of sound pictures—and your box office a new index of their popularity.

the Pacent Film Attachment

The Finest Sound-On-Film Device Ever Built

Over six months ago, Pacent engineers started a survey of all available sound-on-film devices. These devices were thoroughly examined and subjected to rigorous test and were found wanting.

It was thereupon decided by Pacent Reproducer Corporation to devote whatever time was necessary to the development of a sound-on-film device which would set new standards in the quality of sound-on-film reproduction.

With the assistance of six additional consulting engineers, the Pacent Sound-on-Film Device has been developed with no saving of time or expense.

We can say, without fear of contradiction, that the Pacent Sound-on-Film device, resulting from the combined labors of Pacent engineers and consultants, is the finest and most efficient ever built. It is just around the corner!

Deliveries Start May 1st

The Pacent Film Attachment is already in strong demand. Dozens of orders are now in our hands.

Deliveries on the remarkable new attachment which fits right on the present Pacent Reproducer machine will start May 1st.

Substantial production of the device begins within ten days. Orders will be filled in order of receipt.

The price is $500 per attachment, the lowest price ever placed on a quality film attachment. Two attachments required with each Pacent Reproducer System.

My dear Mr. Williams:

This is to acquaint you with the fact that the World Wide production "Picoadilly", reviewed by our Committee on Exceptional Photoplays on March 20th, was selected by that group for major mention in the National Board's exceptional photoplays list.

It was the consensus of opinion of the Committee that this film is the finest picture yet imported from England and one of the finest pictures, for that matter, to reach this country from anywhere else. They considered its production quality all that American standards and American picture taste demand and particularly commented on the consistency of its story, the truthfulness of its characters, the very high level of acting on the part of the entire cast and, last but not least, the great distinction of Mr. Dupont's direction which holds the plot at a point of continuous interest.

With best wishes for the success of this very fine film,

Sincerely yours,

Sink Or Swim

The Theatre Not Equipped For Sound Will Lose Out

By William A. Johnston

THE public has gone sound. More definitely, the public has gone talkie. Of that there can be no question, provided only that the talkie is good entertainment, and not just talk for the sake of talk.

All the indications point to the correctness of this viewpoint. There is no use arguing about the matter further. The screen has found its voice and it is going to use it. There is no turning back from such a revolutionary step. Whether pictures will be one hundred per cent dialogue, or only partly vocal, is beside the point, so far as this discussion is concerned.

The vital thing now is: what's the exhibitor to do about it?—the exhibitor whose house is not yet wired. In other words, the vast majority of theatres in this country.

Are these exhibitors to say that they cannot wire their houses because of the cost? That, in our opinion, is not an answer to the problem.

We believe that the exhibitor must wire, if he is going to stay in business. Broadly speaking, nobody can run counter to great public demand and continue to live. This is emphatically true in the entertainment field. To say that the public may, a year, two years from now, walk out on the talkie and demand the silent picture again, is not an answer to the problem, either.

Make up your mind to this: now that the screen has talked and the public has listened, and liked it, the screen can never again become wholly silent. We do not say that no more silent pictures will be made. But we do say that few, if any, theatres can stay in business unless they are equipped to show talking pictures. That is where the big revenue will come, because the production people will inevitably, and through force of public compulsion, evolve a finer and more appealing type of entertainment, by the use of sound, than is possible with silence.

The theatre not equipped to show these new era pictures will just as certainly suffer.

It would seem clear enough, then, that the exhibitor, to the extent of his resources and ability, should install some sort of good sound equipment. If he is limited in his finances, it might be a good idea—certainly it would be wise—for him to seek financing of sound equipment from his banker, or in some other practical way.

As a matter of fact, the small suburban or neighborhood theatre is, for the first time, in a position, with sound, to meet the competition of the big houses. They are losing patronage now, because their communities go downtown for the talkies. But what a different position the small house would be in, if it could say to its patrons that the same pictures could be seen in suburb or neighborhood within a reasonable time after the big house had run it.

This cannot be done unless the small house is wired. And if it is wired, it has a big added advantage: good music, revues, presentation acts, jazz—all these, formerly in the big house solely, are now on the screen, because sound made it possible to put them there.

We know that many small town exhibitors are greatly worried. If they have to install sound equipment to live—well, they feel it just can't be done.

On the other hand, the resourceful and intelligent small exhibitor will find a way out. He will survive. He will fight to keep alive, instead of crying about the difficulties.

Chains Must Develop COMPETITION and

"The best operated circuit of picture theatres today is only fifty per cent efficient... The reason is lack of man power... The chains should keep the independent houses alive as good, healthy opposition... Personality in the theatre is vitally important to the whole film structure."

"NATURALLY I have a tremendous interest in the operation of the theatre chains and the individual theatre in the chain. I would be a very short sighted sales manager if I didn't. Just as naturally I cannot let my name be used in an interview, but I can tell you this, that the old adage of a chain being only as strong as its weakest link could at no time be more aptly applied than to the chain theatre operation in its relation to the entire business structure of the motion picture industry."

Lack Of Manpower

The speaker was a very prominent sales executive with one of the big companies which also operates its own chain of houses. The question had been placed before him, as to whether or not it was possible for one organization to undertake so great an operation of theatres that the very size would make the venture not only unwieldy but unprofitable.

"Right now I do not believe that the best operated circuit of motion picture theatres in the country is functioning at better than fifty per cent efficiency," he declared, and continued: "Can you realize what that means? It means that the sales organization isn't getting better than one-half of what it should be getting in returns for rentals. Now you can see where my interest in theatre operation lies.

"The reason for inefficient operation is the lack of manpower. By manpower, I mean men who are born showmen, who, in addition, have kept step with the parade of theatre advancement and adapted themselves to the chain type of operation. The motion picture theatre isn't like the chain cigar store, where you can stick any type of a counter salesman behind the showcase. The public will drop into cigar stores because smoking is a habit. Theatregoing is not a habit in the same sense as smoking is. You can't operate a theatre the same as you can a cigar store, because you're not catering to the same public psychology. On one hand you have a habit that almost amounts to an addiction; on the other, a habit that has to be created.

"The theatre-going public does not walk up to the box office window and say, 'Give me five reels of this or five reels of that,' and lay its money down. They do come and ask, 'What have you got?' or look at your advertising and see what you are offering, and then, if it isn't of a brand that they recognize as one that has been consistent in presenting entertainment value they are just as apt not to buy.

"The successful house manager and showman is the one who has built up a confidence with his public as far as the programs that his house offers are concerned. If his feature is weak he has built up his surrounding show. He feels that he can honestly tell his public that his show is the best in town because he has extended all his effort to make it that. He does not go out and make them believe, through dishonest advertising, that he has the best when he has a weak sister of a program. He lays low on a bad picture and doesn't try to gloss it with glowing superlatives and thunderous adjectives, but when a good one comes along he goes the limit, personally and in his advertising. It doesn't take the public that he is catering to long to understand him and his manner of doing business and the result is that he builds up a confidence in himself and his theatre.

Keep Independent Alive!

"Today the same condition exists even with chain operation as existed when the theatres were independently operated. And right at this point I want to clear up an erroneous impression that exists in a great many quarters. The sales managers of the big producing and distributing organizations have no desire to see the independent theatre operator wiped out. As a matter of fact I do not believe that the chain operators have either. In fact, if I was a chain operator I would make it my business to see that there was at least one independently operated theatre in every town that I operated in, that would give my house good healthy opposition; in fact, I would make it a point to see that the opposition house got the best product that they could play, for that opposition would keep my own local men on their toes fighting it, and the result would be better business for both houses.

MAN POWER

BY AN OUTSTANDING SALES EXECUTIVE OF THE FILM INDUSTRY

Editor's Note: This article is the expression of views of one of the greatest sales and executive minds of the industry. For obvious reasons, his name cannot be printed, but MOTION PICTURE NEWS vouches for the authenticity of the article. We believe the views here expressed are of vital importance to all branches of the business at this juncture in film affairs when the chaining-up of theatres is proceeding rapidly. Particular attention is directed to the part the house manager must play if the financial success of the whole picture operation, from studio through sales department to the theatre and then to the public, is to succeed. Coming from an executive who is in the front rank of film leaders, these opinions should receive the close attention of everybody engaged in the business.

"From a sales manager's viewpoint I believe that opposition is what this business needs, and as for wiping the little fellow out, that's all foolishness, for once a theatre is closed it is like last night's theatre ticket—a dead loss. The chances are it won't be reopened, and that means, to me, another account that has been wiped out for all time.

Chain Manager's Importance

"When the houses were independently operated and an exhibitor came along that could not measure up to the standards of showmanship necessary to make his house a money maker he got out of the business and usually someone else came along who was capable, and he made a lot of money for himself as well as for those that he brought product from. All right, you will say that making money for himself was the incentive that made him go out and hustle and bring in business. You'll say that he had a greater leeway than the chain manager has. I'll say that you are right in the latter instance, and I also say that the chain house manager should have the same leeway, and if he makes good he'll make money and lots of it, for those that are operating chains realize only too well how rare the men are that can do this very thing.

"I do not believe that the average chain house manager realizes his own importance to the rest of the industry. Now, I'm getting back to the weak link thought. No matter what the brains are at the head of the industry, no matter what Winnie Sheehan, Jesse Lasky, Louis Mayer or any of the other high-powered production executives may have in brain capacity, they are going to be limited by that of the weak sister in the managerial field. The reason for it is that he is limiting the financial return on pictures. If he can't get the money into his theatre then he can't pay it into the local exchange for rental, the exchange cannot make the return that it should to the home office, and the distributing and sales department cannot turn over to the production department what it should to make possible the making of better and more expensive pictures.

"That is the angle that keeps me as a sales manager interested in the operation not only of whole chains but of individual theatres.

"No doubt the day will come when theatres will be operated in a manner that will make possible the utilization of their maximum capacity. But until that time comes there is going to be a lot of water go over the dam. There'll be a lot of time and money spent training and preparing men who will employ to the fullest the best that there is in showmanship from both theoretical as well as practical standards. The question is, where to get the men who are capable of assimilating the theory of the theatre and to apply it practically.

"Right there you have the question of MAN-POWER.

"Money alone never won a war. Money plus arms and men is the sum total that spells victory. What good would a fleet of battleships be as national defense without sailors to man them? It's the same with the theatre. All the houses in creation might be welded into one gigantic operating chain, but without the manpower to adequately operate them they would fight a losing battle for public favor.

Individual Personality

"Successful theatre operation in the past can be traced directly to the individual personality of the operator. Take the biggest house in the country as an instance, its very name conjures up the personality of the man who built it and operates it as managing director, although that house is now part of a chain operation. Back in the legitimate theatre days the names of the operators have come down through history as part and parcel of their theatre operations. I mean old Wallack's and Daly's in New York, Mc-

British Producer Convinced This Is The Day Of Sound

States That English Public Is Rapidly Taking To Talkies

Thoroughly convinced that this is very much the day of the sound picture, John Maxwell, prominent figure in the British industry and managing director of British International, arrived here this week from London, and announced that the company would make 15 to 20 talkies this year and 20 to 25 in 1930. Distribution here is through World Wide.

British International is building two sound stages at the Elstree Studios, RCA recording equipment being used. There will be a variety of sound product.

By the end of the year, Mr. Maxwell believes 600 to 700 theatres in England will be wired. About 150 are equipped now. The English public is taking rapidly to sound.

Mr. Maxwell will be in New York two or three weeks and may go to the Coast to study the sound situation there.

Publix Taking Over U. A. Houses For Operation

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 28.—With the arrival here of Sam Katz a deal has been closed whereby the Publix Theatres will take over the operation of the theatres controlled by United Artists. The United Artists theatre here will be operated by Publix beginning next month. That will give them two houses in Los Angeles, the Paramount as the Metropolitan has been renamed and the United Artists, both in the down town section.

Joseph Schenck has not arrived here as yet, although reported to have left New York on Sunday. It is believed that, with his arrival, he and Sam Katz will work out the details for the operation of the U. A. houses, and this may possibly lead to a merger of producing interests between United Artists and Paramount. It would be a marked coincidence to have two of the former great stars of Paramount, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, returning to the Zukor banner.

Musical Film Shows Hold Big Spot In RKO Program

The outstanding production aim of Radio Pictures, mapped out by William Le Baron, vice-president in charge of production, is the making of from eight to ten musical film shows staged on a lavish scale with prominent musical comedy and operatic stars. The shows are to be written especially for the screen and writers, composers, librettists, gagmen, musical comedy directors, etc., will be placed under contract.

Reinhardt Believes In The Silent Movie

THE present popularity of the talking drama does not mean the death knell of the silent film, declared Max Reinhardt, theatre impresario, in Berlin recently where he embarked aboard ship for New York. Both types of screen entertainment will thrive alongside of each other, he believes. The talkie's difficulty, he stated, is that it calls for a particular brand of story and dialogue to start with and a perfect union of music, noises, dialogue and pantomime. Movie producers of America, he asserted, need not worry about the future of the art of the movie if they succeed in halting the present tendency towards shallowness.

Best Operated Circuit Is Only 50% Efficient

Vicker's in Chicago and today the Belasco and Ziegfeld theatres. The moment you mention those theatres you compel a mental vision of the men who operate them and the type of entertainment that they stand for.

"When the chain method of theatre operation arrives at the place where each of its links is commanded by a personality then it will be operating at its greatest efficiency.

"Of course there is the question as to how best to develop personalities in management. First, pick your men, men whom you think are best qualified to develop along the lines that you want them to. Put them in command of a theatre and do not limit their responsibility. Give them a chance to think for themselves, and let them put into practice what they think will be best for the theatre in accordance to the locality of the house and the population that it draws from.

Develop Personality

"Watch the man closely during his initial period so that you can check any move that might cause irreparable damage to the property, and within three to six months you will either have replaced him with some one else, because he failed to show that he had the necessary qualifications, or you will have developed a personality that will mean money at the box office.

"Of course there must be an incentive to his development. It must either take the form of a bonus for work well done, or an interest in profits, or possibly a stock interest in the company. The method of reward is one that can be worked out in various ways, but there must be a reward. You can develop a man's loyalty to a certain point and play on that loyalty for results up to a certain point, but you must give him something more material than a letter of praise or a tin medal when he brings home the bacon at the box office."

Opening Date For "Alibi"

"Alibi," United Artists talkie, comes to the 44th Street Theatre, New York, on Monday night, April 8, instead of April 7, as previously announced.

Brown Expresses Optimism As To Foreign Affairs

England Thoroughly Sold, He Says, But France's Case Somewhat Different

Expressing optimism over the foreign picture situation as related to American product, Colvin W. Brown, executive vice-president of Pathe, returned this week from a month's trip abroad on company business.

England is thoroughly sold on sound, Mr. Brown declared. Talkies already shown there have created a desire for more. This tendency is not so marked in France.

There is a steady demand for silent pictures and the popularity of American films is as great as ever. He found no evidence that America was losing playdates to native producers because of a shortage of silents. Exhibitors abroad, he added, are still in the market for silents and this is, at present, the dominant demand in Europe.

N. Y. Legislature Gets New Child Admission Bill

Exhibitors all over the country will watch with much interest a bill amending the general municipal law of New York state as it relates to the care of children in motion picture theatres, which was introduced in the New York State legislature last week by Senator Freiberg, of Buffalo. This bill allows the common council or governing body in New York State cities with a population of more than 500,000, and less than 1,000,000 inhabitants, to adopt an ordinance, if it so desires, that will result in a license being issued to a motion picture theatre permitting admission of children between the ages of ten and sixteen years, during the hours from 2 p. m. to 6 p. m. on Saturdays and legal holidays, with Sunday excepted.

The bill stipulates, however, that films shown shall bear the words "for family use." The bill also specifies that such children, if unaccompanied, shall be segregated in a special section on the street level, with a matron in charge of each 200 persons, and also that each child must have its own seat. The bill stands little chance of passage.

Dario L. Faralla Becomes Educational Comptroller

Dario L. Faralla has been appointed comptroller of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., to succeed Charles Van Zandt, recently resigned. Mr. Faralla has been connected with the film industry in kindred capacities for the past 18 years and has been chief inspector for Pathe Freres, assistant comptroller for Selznick Enterprises, financial comptroller and treasurer for Reelart Pictures, assistant comptroller and studio executive business manager for First National.

Plight Of Small Theatre Revealed In News' Survey Of Exchange Centres

THE HOLLYWOOD STATUS

News' Coast Representative Interviews Studio Officials To Ascertain Present Picture Line-Up

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Mar. 28.—Following is a summary of Hollywood producers' plans as far as can be ascertained at present:

Universal has 28 features lined up for next season, all having talkie and silent versions. A Hoot Gibson is slated for silent only. Four of the others are now in cutting and four more in production.

First National has five in production, both silent and talkie; five cutting and six starting in April. This company will make 35 next season.

Many Silents In Work

Warner Brothers have seven in cutting, both sound and silent releases; three in production and five starting within three weeks. This company plans thirty-five for 1929, each with sound and silent versions.

Fox is making and preparing one talkie with a silent version, and seven all-silents. These will complete the 1928-29 schedule.

Tiffany-Stahl has six pictures in cutting; three will have dialogue versions and the other three are going out silent, according to present plans. Later on this company may decide to make dialogue versions for the latter.

Columbia's future product will have both talkie and silent versions. Five are now in production or preparation.

Paramount has ten with dialogue and silent versions, two talkers without silent versions and one silent version in work or definitely planned.

R-K-O is preparing twelve dialogue pictures and has not yet determined how many will carry silent versions. Neither has this company made any decision on entirely silent pictures.

United Artists is preparing one talkie with a silent version and two talkies without silent versions. Nothing further here until the arrival of Joseph Schenck.

Pathe is preparing three talkies which will carry silent versions. Nothing further here until final approval of next year's program.

M-G-M is shooting and preparing eight talkies with silent versions; one talkie without silent, and one entirely silent picture. This company plans fifty pictures next season, all dialoguers but carrying silent versions in each case.

Over 1,500 Houses Now Equipped by W. E.

UP to March 16, Western Electric Company reports that a total of 1,505 theatres have been equipped with the Western Electric sound system, approximately fifty more installations having been recently completed. These are all of the film and disc type and in theatres well scattered over this country. Seating capacity of these houses range from 500 up to 3,000.

Fox To Make Voice-Music Pictures Only

Sheehan Announces No More Silent Pictures; Many Stage Stars Signed

Last Sunday, two days before departing for Hollywood, Winfield Sheehan, general manager of production and vice-president of Fox Pictures, made an announcement in New York to the effect that his company was abandoning the making of any silent pictures, and that in the future every effort would be devoted to turning out sound productions. Dialogue and musical productions would be the only product that the company would release in the future. The formal announcement also stated that a number of stage stars, including Will Rogers, William Collier, George Jessel, and others, as well as stage directors and dramatists, musical comedy producers, as well as dancers and composers, to the number of about two hundred had been placed under contract by Sheehan.

After eighteen months of preparation and experimental work and the building of new studios at a cost of about $15,000,000, according to the statement, the Fox organization was now in a position to devote itself exclusively to the production of sound pictures.

Neither Mr. Fox nor Mr. Sheehan would make a statement regarding the foreign market, but it was stated that with silent production eighteen months in advance of the foreign release dates, matters in the field outside of the United States and the English speaking countries would adjust themselves in that time.

Among the film actors whose Movietone tests have been successful and who will be heard in Fox Movietone features will be: Janet Gaynor, Mary Duncan, Lois Moran, Sue Carol, Mary Astor, June Collyer, Louise Dresser, Sharon Lynn, Charles Farrell, Warner Baxter, Victor McLaglen, Edmund Baxter, McLaglen and Lowe.

OPINIONS ARE DIVIDED

Consensus Is That Small Unwired House Would Be Forced Out By Sudden Cessation Of Silent Pictures

A SURVEY made this week by MOTION PICTURE NEWS of key city exchange managers' opinions as to what extent business would be affected by a dropping of silent pictures by a majority of producers reveals divided opinion. There is a consensus, with one or two exceptions, that the small unwired house would be practically forced out of the running, statements varying in proportion to number of sound installations in respective zones. Most managers also agree that the distributors would suffer a certain loss of revenue.

Seattle Suprises

From Seattle comes the surprising statement expressing a majority of opinions there that as long as the public demands sound films as strongly as at present, exchange managers feel that elimination of silent films would result in greater revenue and reduce sales costs by doing away with serving small theatres with small film at low rentals. Most managers here feel that this year will see practically every theatre wired or closed and that the only objection to immediate elimination of silents by some managers is their moral obligation to some house not yet wired.

General trend of thought in Kansas City is that an all-talkie production program would greatly aid conditions in that it would result in the lowering of film rentals because supply and demand would be more evenly balanced. Managers and exhibitors also question how long producers will be able to make a living off silents, and one veteran exchange man pointed out that, with reasonably priced equipment now obtainable, the small owner would be able to book sound film. "The sooner silents are discontinued the better for us all," said another exchange manager. Other Kansas City sales heads believe that all-sound production would put thousands of small exhibitors out of business.

The opinion of Dallas exchange managers is that business would show a temporary slump if silent pictures were entirely dropped, but that this condition would be soon overcome by increased revenue. One manager said: "We are going talkie, but there will always be silents

"Close Harmony" Does $44,000 At L. A. Paramount

'Broadway Melody' And 'Iron Mask' Get Capacity Trade; Others Just Average

"Close Harmony" gathered $44,000 at the Paramount in seven days and the figures are rated as exceptional. They represent a one hundred and seventy per cent rating for this theatre.

The check-up of last week's grosses in Los Angeles houses shows "Broadway Melody," in the seventh week at Grauman's Chinese, still a sell out with a two hundred and twenty-five per cent average. The cash returns were $34,000.

Next in line was "Iron Mask," at the Carthay Circle, where in its second week this show took in $25,000. This house has capacity nights and the figures are rated as big, percentage going to two hundred, or double normal business.

"Sonny Boy" went to $24,000 in its second week at Warners Hollywood, or a one hundred and twenty per cent showing. "Abie's Irish Rose," at the Criterion in its third week, got $14,000 and made a rating of one hundred and twenty-five per cent.

"Godless Girl," at Loew's State, shows low for the week, getting $25,000, or a ten per cent below normal rating. "Hearts in Dixie" did a good third week's trade at the United Artists, gathering in $14,500, but was off about one-half from first and second week figures.

M. P. T. O. of Md. Elects Officers For The Year

At the annual meeting of the M. P. T. O. of Maryland, Inc., at the Southern Hotel in Baltimore, March 21, officers elected for the ensuing year were: Herman A. Blum, president; Louis Garman, vice-president; Frank A. Hornig, treasurer, and William E. Stumpf, secretary. The directors elected were Frank H. Durkee, J. Louis Rome, Charles E. Holte, William Kalb, Thomas D. Goldberg, George Gaertner, Phillip Miller, and P. Seiwell.

The outgoing president, J. Louis Rome, declined to accept the nomination for another term. Mr. Blum was president of the organization in 1926 and 1927.

Oscar Price Will Handle "The Wild Heart Of Africa"

A motion picture transcript of an expedition into Central Africa, photographed by and featuring the Walker-Arbuthnot Hunting Expedition, has been acquired for distribution by Oscar Price, head of Parthenon Pictures. The expedition was composed of Dr. Thomas S. Arbuthnot, Fletcher, Jr., and Kenneth R. Walker. Mack D. Weinberger, Parthenon general manager, is now negotiating for a Broadway theatre in which the film will be premiered.

Denver Theatres Set Up A New Record

IN spite of the most inclement weather conditions of the year, movie playhouses of Denver, Colo., last week realized their biggest intake in the history of the city, approximately $100,000 passing through the box-office tills of the leading houses. Theatre managers regard this as indicating beyond a doubt that Denver is snapping out of the apathy which they say it has had for a decade.

Defense Scores In Film Case In U. S. Court

Judge Indicates That Defense Has Proven Strongest Position

The U. S. Government suit against the membership of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors who are members of the Arbitration Boards of the Film Boards of Trade, is now up to the court. The final hearing was held on Monday of this week. There was a decided indication on the part of Federal Judge Thomas D. Thatcher that he thought the position of the defense much stronger than that of the Government. He asked, however, that briefs be submitted by both sides on April 22.

The Government asked that the distributors be enjoined forever from continuing an elleged conspiracy in restraint of trade, consisting of their insistence that exhibitors sign a standard form of contract, the clauses which compelled all matters of dispute between distributor and exhibitor be submitted to the Arbitration Boards.

C. Stanley Thompson, special assistant to the Attorney General, and Edwin P. Grosvenor, leading counsel for the ten biggest picture distributing firms, and the film boards of trade, took very different angles as they summed up.

Arbitration Principle

Mr. Thompson addressed himself to a point of law and cited decisions in cases somewhat similar. The principle of compulsory arbitration has never been passed upon by the United States Supreme Court, and it is there that this action is admittedly headed.

Mr. Grosvenor insisted that the arbitration system, and the standard contract works. Conditions in the industry are far better now than they were prior to adoption of the uniform contract, he said, and there is no conspiracy likely if, as is stipulated, there is keen competition in the distribution of films.

He pointed out such practical advantages as the removal from the regular courts of a great burden of potential litigation which is taken care of by the arbitration boards. He said that it has been shown

Merger Rumors Crop Up Again Linking 3 Cos.

Paramount-Warners And U.A. All Talked As Possibilities To Three Cornered Tie-Up

The Broadway rumor grind has been active again in the last week with the result that a three-corner tie-up between Paramount, Warner Bros. and United Artists is being talked about through film circles.

When Sam Katz left for the Coast last week there was immediate rumor that he was going west as an advance guard for Adolph Zukor, and that he would treat with Joseph M. Schenck when the latter arrived on the Coast this week. From Hollywood on Thursday came the word that Publix has closed a deal to take over the United Artists theatres and operate them for that organization. This added fresh fuel to the rumors that there was to be a deal.

It was stated this week that the purpose of Joseph M. Schenck's trip to the Coast was for the purpose of lining up his stars and obtain their consent to the merger. The only hold-out possibility being Charles Chaplin. But it was stated that Chaplin wanted to be an independent and offer his completed productions to the highest bidder in the releasing field. In that event Schenck is practically free to make any sort of a deal that he cares to for Douglas Fairbank and Mary Pickford undoubtedly would be willing to be guided by him in his figuring what was the best way out in the battle which seems certain to be waged.

Hearst A Factor

Another factor that enters into the lists is William Randolph Hearst, with Marion Davies and the Cosmopolitan productions. "The Broadway Melody" is a Cosmopolitan picture, and the outstanding hit of the music and dialogue films to date. In the new order of things, providing the three factors get together, Miss Davies, who has developed tremendously during the last three years at the box office, and as an actress as well, would be another star to be listed in the United Artists division, while the Cosmopolitan productions would be lined up as part of the First National.

At Paramount it was denied that there was any possibility that Adolph Zukor would go to the Coast in the near future. But, if a chance of a deal crops up, he will undoubtedly be on the ground when the final signing takes place.

Schenck, according to report, is to spend but a few weeks on the Coast, and then return to New York for the further negotiations.

Pathe Adds Mickey Neilan To Production Personnel

Marshall Neilan, veteran author and director, has been signed by Pathe and will be associated with the production staff at the Culver City studios of the company.

Capitol Throws Out Feature Film After Single Day

"Greater Power" Booed By Premiere Audiences Replaced By Keaton Film

"The Greater Power," an independently made talker, recorded by the Bristolphone process, with the same cast of stage players who had appeared in the production in New York and with the scenery originally used in the stage production, was withdrawn from the program at the Capitol Theatre after it had been shown for only a single day. The picture was replaced by a Buster Keaton silent comedy "Spite Marriage." The action on the part of the Capitol management came after the Saturday night audiences at the theatre had booed the picture.

The withdrawal is a record for a Broadway house and sets a precedent.

Myron C. Fagan, a theatrical producer, and Franklin Warner, no relation of the Warner Bros., were the sponsors for the film. Fagan was the producer of the play which was a flop on the stage. He engaged the facilities of the Bristolphone studio and made the picture. Later Joe Roek was called in to reshoot part of it. The picture was then placed with M-G-M for distribution.

Judge Indicates Defense Stronger In U. S. Gov't Case

that the supplemental agreements of which the Government complained are no longer in force, and never existed with the approval of headquarters.

After the closing arguments were in the Judge began to question the Government attorney.

"Either it is lawful for all of the distributors to agree together and dictate the form of the contract, or it is unlawful. Now which do you contend?" he asked.

"In view of the present state of decisions," said Mr. Thompson, "I should have to take the position that it is illegal."

"I have understood the Government's position to be that any agreement on any contract, however beneficial, is illegal?"

"The provisions of the specific case are not normal and reasonable."

"I'd like to know why they're not! Normal and reasonable provisions are what good business dictates—you don't contend that they're not that, do you?" .

"Not to the exhibitors—not in the enforcement provisions."

"Your testimony shows that the system is of great value to the entire industry."

Having thus brought the Government's legal point close to absurdity, and agreed with the defense contention that there is much benefit in the working of the system, the Judge called for briefs, apparently wishing to get more light on the Government's legal angle.

"Bellamy Trial" $69,751 At Capitol; "Iron Mask" Does $31,500; "Melody" Still Big

"Lilac Time" Hits 10c Level In Schenectady

"LILAC TIME," First National's war-in-the-air special released last year, first hit the ten cent level at a Schenectady theatre. The producer on March 1 authorized exhibitors to show the film at a ten-cent flat rate and the Van Curler, a small second run in Schenectady, was the first theatre in the country to do so.

RKO Is Seeking B'way Theatre For Next Year

"Syncopation" Frozen Out Of A Showing On The Main Stem Reason For Move

The executives of RKO Pictures are determined that they will have a house on Broadway by the time that next season comes 'round. They want a house so that their new product which is to be largely of the musical comedy order in sound will receive adequate representation on the theatrical Main Street.

The sales organization of the company has been trying to obtain a spot for its combination musical-talking feature "Syncopation" on Broadway, either in one of the run houses or for a two weeks' showing in one of the bigger houses. They were frozen out and, as a result, the picture will go into the N. Y. Hippodrome for a two weeks' run with an advertising campaign in the daily papers which will represent about $25,000 placed behind it.

Lee Marcus, general sales manager of RKO, stated this week that his company did not intend to accept the decree of the managers of the street that they were not to get a showing for their pictures, and they would in the future be protected by a theatre of their own.

R. H. Cochrane Announces Engagement of Daughter

The engagement of Miss Betty Cochrane, daughter of R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of Universal Pictures, and Mrs. Cochrane, was last Saturday announced by Mr. Cochrane. Miss Cochrane will wed John Howard Laeri, formerly of Youngstown, O., and now connected with the National City Bank of New York. No date has been fixed for the nuptials. Miss Cochrane will graduate from Smith College this June. Mr. Laeri is a Williams College graduate.

"Speakeasy" Held Over At Roxy For Third Week; "Queen Of Night Clubs" Disappoints

THERE were but two new arrivals in feature films on Broadway last week as far as the weekly change houses were concerned. They were "The Queen of the Night Clubs," at the Strand, with the irrepressible Texas Guinan as the star, and "The Cohens and The Kellys at Atlantic City," which Universal brought to the Colony. Neither one fared extra well at the box office and the former proved a distinct disappointment.

The highlights of the week were the fact that "Speakeasy," at the Roxy with the second anniversary program, held to $112,837.50, and was retained at the house for a third week, while at the Paramount, with the holding over for a second week of "The Canary Murder Case," the receipts there dropped to $57,000.

The "Queen of the Night Clubs" played to $29,500, while "Cohens and Kellys" turned in $12,851 at the Colony.

The Capitol, which had "The Bellamy Trial" for its first popular priced showing in town, played to $69,751.50, while at the little Cameo the British film "Mons" turned in $6,500 and stayed for second week there.

At the Rialto and the Rivoli, the two grind run houses, the receipts held up nicely. The former, with Lupe Velez making personal appearances with her picture "Lady of the Pavements," showed $35,500 on the second week, while Douglas Fairbanks in "The Iron Mask,' in its fourth week, came under the wire to the tune of $31,500.

"Broadway Melody" Holds On

But a single one of the features showing in legitimate houses for runs with two performances a day showed above a 100 per cent business average last week, and that one was "The Broadway Melody," which got $23,868.25, which gives it a rating of 162 4/5 per cent, and this is the sixth week of the picture at the house. The nearest rival was "The Letter," at the Criterion, where the returns were $13,178 or 98 9/10 per cent.

"Weary River," at the Central, played to $13,309.75 for its eighth week on Broadway, and to date the picture shows a profit of $60,000 on the engagement here. That is giving First National a new thrill. They had Colleen Moore in "Lilac Time" at the same house for 21 weeks and the profit on that run was only $3,000.

"The Wolf Song" departed last Sunday from the Embassy, having played to a gross of $6,615 in nine days. "The Trial of Mary Dugan" opened at the house on for the small exhibitor." Another believes that silents will disappear, as a natural course, and that his firm's revenue will not be affected if they do.

Sudden Dropping Of Silent Pictures Would Spell Ruin To Small House, Survey Reveals

Many Managers Believe Middle West Would Be Hard Hit Account Lack Of Apparatus

Milwaukee exchange managers' opinions vary: One thinks that if installations continue at the present rate it will not be long before every exhibitor will have sound equipment. A manager of a large distributing company stated that his trade would suffer approximately 20 per cent through dropping of silents. Another said that he would benefit considerably if others went all-talkie. Still another manager of a large exchange believed that his trade would be cut 50 per cent, with only 20 per cent of the houses wired at present.

Total abandonment of silents will not be beneficial to the territory, is the opinion of a majority of Omaha exchange managers, due to comparatively few installations in small towns. A sound picture distributor stated that his exchange was serving all they could possibly take care of, and another believed that the talkies would increase revenue. One other said that only when business in small towns increased in proportion to large cities, would all-sound product increase profits.

Minneapolis Viewpoint

Seven out of ten exchange managers in Minneapolis believe that the dropping of silents would ruin small houses and hurt business, and hold that the middle west would be hardest hit due to fewer wired houses. Also that competition would be limited to large theatres and universally disastrous to the smaller ones.

In Des Moines, one manager is doubtful as to whether 70 wired houses out of a total of 400 could possibly handle a 100 per cent increase in overhead for sound, as small town theatres predominate in Iowa. Des Moines managers would not mourn the passing of the several-times weekly-change house, however.

The consensus of New Orleans exchange managers is that it would be a costly error for producers to cease output of silents and confine production to all-sound.

Another declared that there must be no cessation in sound production on account of favorable public reaction.

San Francisco managers agree that there is but little demand at present for silents but that if they were suddenly discontinued the small theatre owner would probably be crippled and ruined in a business way. It is predicted here that most theatres will have sound equipment within six months to a year.

Ohio Senate Committee Kills Censor Bills

ALL censor bills were unanimously killed by the Ohio Senate Committee on Education last Tuesday. This action leaves state censorship unchanged for two years. The bills killed include the Johnson bills providing for talkie censorship and an inspection fee increase to $4, and the Bender bill repealing all censorship. Still pending are the 5 per cent gross receipt tax bill and the Sunday local option bill.

Publix Acquires Full Control Of A. H. Blank Chain

Approximately 25 Theatres Are Included In Deal; Blank To Take Rest

Sale of his entire interest in the A. H. Blank Theatre Corp. to Paramount-Famous-Lasky was announced in New York City last week by A. H. Blank, president of the company, and with this deal in effect Publix Theatres Corp. has stepped up a partial control of the circuit to full ownership. Approximately 25 houses are mentioned in the transaction and they are located in Iowa and Illinois. Included are de luxe houses in Omaha, Des Moines, Cedar Rapids, Davenport, Rock Island and Waterloo.

Exchange managers of Indianapolis are unanimous in the opinion that if producers altogether dropped silent pictures it would cause most smaller exhibitors to go out of business on account of lack of money for sound equipment. Also, that on account of keen competition resulting from all-talkie production, film prices would mount out of reach for the independent owners.

As but a small proportion of houses in Pittsburgh territory are wired at present, it is agreed that the dropping of silents at this time would have a bad effect on business as there would be nothing for the unequipped houses to book but repeats.

That extreme hardship would be brought to bear upon many small theatre owners of New York state is reflected in a communication from Albany. Exhibitors are complaining that they are losing a lot of trade due to hundreds motoring to nearby cities. Hard put by this fact they view with alarm the spending of additional money for expensive sound equipment. Many houses in the resort section only operate two or three days a week outside of the tourist season.

Patent Claimed On Photoelectric Cell For Sound

Company Announces Selling Plans For Disc And Sound-On-Film Reproducer

The claim that sound converted to film through a light device employing the photoelectric cell is protected by a patent awarded Theodore Nakken, was advanced at a luncheon in the Hotel Astor, New York, last Tuesday to announce the marketing plans for Traveltone, a combination disc and sound-on-film reproducer, by the Cinesonore Company, manufacturers and distributors of the machine, which is exclusively licensed under the Nakken patent through agreement with Lumophone Company.

The Traveltone synchronous reproducer, it was announced, will be sold to theatres for $2,950, with the provision that the theatre operating the equipment pay a weekly royalty fee of $5 to the Lumaphone Company for the life of the Nakken patent, which runs until 1932. The Traveltone was developed by Herman Heller, former musical director for Warner Bros., and a pioneer in the early experimentation by that company in the making of Vitaphone pictures. The machine is now in production and the Cinesonore Company will be prepared to install equipment in theatres by April 15, it was declared by Maurice Livingston, vice-president of Cinesonore and formerly associated with the foreign sales department of Warner Bros. and Paramount. Distinctive features of Traveltone as described by Mr. Livingston are a new type amplifying system which does not employ the negative grid bias, which latter is controlled under patent held by the Radio Corporation of America, and an electrically controlled re-synchronizing device operating on the disc reproducer. It was also said that the design provides for exact control of the correct length of loop—19 frames—necessary to proper synchronization of the sound on film recording.

Under an arrangement with the Lumophone Company, holder of the Nakken patent, Mr. Livingston announced, Traveltone now controls the exclusive rights to manufacture, lease, sell and in every way undertake the output of sound-on-film recording and reproducing machines to studios, theatres and places of entertainment.

Deny Passing Of Consolidated Lab. Stock Control

A statement issued from the offices of Doremus and Company, of Broad Street, this week set forth a denial on the part of H. Y. Yates, president of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., that the control of that corporation had been purchased over his head. The statement said that there had been rumors that leading motion picture interests or Eastman Kodak had obtained control of the company.

Eddie Bremer, manager of the Majestic, Houston, Tex.

How The Right Personnel Can Make A Theatre A "Home Town" Institution

CAPITALIZING personalities and injecting individuality into a theatre are two of the best bets a real showman has and they are too generally overlooked in these days of the chain houses with their constantly shifting personnel. Rarely is a chain theatre taken to the hearts of an amusement public as a "home town institution." But this can be done, and one way to do it is to train a staff right through the house from the box-office to the back-drop and keep them right on the premises over a period of years.

That's what Karl Hoblitzelle, president of the Interstate Amusement Company, succeeded in doing with the Majestic which he operates in Houston, Texas. The Majestic is a "home town institution."

Veteran Personnel

It has served Houston's amusement needs well for twenty-four years. And a good part of its success is due to the fact that the house personnel has at least a nodding acquaintance with a large number of the city's residents. In fact, they have come to be almost personally acquainted with a large percentage of the regular cusomers.

Mr. Hoblitzelle and his staff know just about what Houston wants in the way of entertainment and they know just how to serve it. They know for the most part just about what seats the regular clients want and they see to it that they get them as nearly as possible.

The Majestic opened as a vaudeville theatre twenty-four years ago. Eddie Bremer is the manager and just about as much an "institution" in the city as is the theatre he manages, for he has been with the company for the past twenty-three years. The year previously he was with the company, but not with the Majestic. Mr. Bremer knows his Houston. There are few in the city who can call more people by their first names. He has invited suggestions over all these years and he has made the patrons realize that the Majestic was THEIR amusement place.

Mr. Bremer is not the only veteran in the house personnel. There are Jim Trammell and Charles Williams. They were the first ushers at the opening of the theatre in 1905. When they graduated from the ranks of the ushers they were made stage hands, positions they still hold.

There's Buck Alexander. There are few vaudevillians and few residents of Houston who do not know Buck from seeing him around the Majestic, for he, too, has been a stage hand in that house for the past fifteen years. Mr. Hoblitzelle takes as good care of his house staff as he does of his customers at the box-office. Take the case of Bud Gleich, for instance. Bud was one of the first stage hands in the house. Then for years he served as stage manager. When he had completed twenty-four years of service Mr. Hoblitzelle told him he was all through; all washed up— but he handed Bud a pension that will take care of him for the rest of his life.

KARL HOBLITZELLE, head of an important circuit in the Southwest, knows how to make his theatres "home town" institutions. The Majestic, Houston, is an excellent example of the successful Hoblitzelle policy. The theatre has changed its location three times in 24 years with the progress of the city. But the chief members of the staff have been with the theatre for a long period.

Lloyd Calvin Finlay came to the Majestic as orchestra leader in 1912. He is as much a fixture now as the orchestra itself, and sound equipment holds no terrors for him. The announcement that Finlay's orchestra will give a ten-minute concert at a certain hour and day will pack the theatre. Everyone in Houston knows Finlay.

Miss Mickey Lawrence, pretty little box ticket exchange girl has handled so many tickets that if placed side by side they would stretch from here to there and back again. She has greeted the customers for ten years now.

Another faithful and proud employee is Hattie Morris, colored maid, who has been a familiar figure at the Majestic since it took up its location on Congress Avenue way back in 1905.

The Majestic has changed its location three different times with the progress and growth of the city. Mr. Hoblitzelle first built on a location in Congress Avenue, which since has developed into a wholesale section. The theatre flourished as a vaudeville house from the start.

In 1910 a new home for the Majestic was built; a two-story building with well appointed offices, rest rooms, mezzanine, balcony, gallery and elaborate auditorium and stage. It was at that time the last word in theatre construction and it was still confined exclusively to vaudeville.

Again the Majestic, still a vaudeville house, outgrew its quarters and, in January, 1923, the present theatre was opened with speeches by the Mayor and other eminent men and women. It continued vaudeville, but loosened up a bit by injecting a newsreel.

A Home Town Institution

With the opening of this house Mr. Hoblitzelle addressed the audience and said: "We want this new house to become more of a Houston institution than ever before; we want it a social and cultural life of the city. If we had wanted only a playhouse we should have built a substantial auditorium and stage, with necessary lobby and box-office and let it go at that." The Hoblitzelle wish came true.

It was in 1924 that feature pictures first became a regular part of the program. At present a feature picture, sound newsreel and a serial are shown with five acts of selected vaudeville.

Designed by John Eberson, the architect, and conforming to the accepted pattern for the present-day motion picture palaces, the Majestic, after six years of picture showing, remains unique in design among Texas theatres, appealing in beauty, and a rare example of a chain theatre taken to the hearts of an amusement public as a "home town institution."

No more important problem confronts the exhibitor whose house is wired than the proper reproduction of sound pictures. No matter how perfect the recording may be at the studios, or how well the players render their lines, all goes for naught if the theatre does not get the full sound value over to the audience. Here are practical helps on ways to control volume and definite suggestions on how the house staff may be co-ordinated in this work so that the patron may be fully satisfied with the picture and go out of the theatre boosting the talkies instead of knocking. With the industry's heavy investment in sound, the reaction of the public is of prime importance to the financial well-being of all branches of the business. A survey by Motion Picture News reveals the necessity for closer attention by the theatre to sound reproduction. Other articles of a practical nature on this subject will appear in succeeding issues.

Do Talking Pictures Talk or Screech At Your Audiences?

To Get The Best Results, You Must Give Sound Reproduction The Same Attention You Would Your Radio In Your Own Home

PRODUCERS have gone a long way in the perfection of talking pictures. Whether it be on film or on record the production of sound and its quality is greatly ahead of a short few months ago. Despite this there are many complaints and kicks about bad recording, ineffective reproduction and unnatural voice quality.

Production is being blamed for this—is production at fault?

Controlling Volume

This is a vital question for all exhibitors. Can a theatre owner fairly accuse the producers of not delivering the goods if he has not given the production, when presented in the theatre, the proper attention and followed the advice and thought for projection as outlined by the distributor?

In making a survey of the situation, Motion Picture News has found that in many cases theatres are the seat of complaints on talking pictures. Answer a few of these questions for yourself, then say whether the talking picture is poorly produced or whether it is properly offered to the public.

Does your floor man or head usher watch the effect of the volume of sound in the theatre when a talking picture is being run? Does he let it stay at the same tone when the house is half full and when the house is packed to the doors? Do you run a screening in an empty house, set your faders and then expect a full house to give the same tonal results? Does your operator answer the buzzer when the floor man indicates an increase or a decrease in volume?

To get the best results you must give your talking pictures the same attention you would your radio or phonograph in your own home. You don't let it blast through your rooms nor do you continue to listen to a meek quality of reproduction when the machine is not properly tuned in.

It is advisable to appoint your floor man or head usher as a guardian of the buzzer or monitor. Make it one of his duties to see to it that the proper volume is being offered in the theatre. Let him walk around the house, see what it sounds like half way down the center or side aisles, then from the back or from the balcony of the theatre. His proper regulation of the monitor will have a great deal to do with your audience reaction when you present a talking picture.

Change Of Shows

Every change of show will see a difference in reproduction. Different parts of the feature will call for the raising or lowering of the tonal volume. This is a big feature and when you have done this you have stepped ahead for better presentation of talking pictures in your theatre. The biggest strides in production perfection will come to naught if you do not do your part in the regulating of the talking picture you offer as entertainment to your patrons.

Go over the importance of this matter with your staff, let your operator understand that a great deal of the show depends upon him. He has more than good projection to watch now. It is greatly to his credit as an operator if his score is as good as his projection. Be sure that he is acquainted with the meaning of the monitor, make sure that he understands the meaning of the various rings, whether he is to raise or lower the volume of the picture. When this is done you have the cooperation of your operator.

Watch Your Settings

The distributor offering talking pictures gives you an idea as to what the tone of the number or reel being offered should be. He marks the fader and horn settings for you. Do not take this as the final word. Your theatre may be larger or smaller than the theatre in which these settings were made. It does give you an idea just about where the settings should be and from that it is up to you to regulate the tone according to your own situations.

Improper sound will do more to hurt talking pictures than bad projection could ever have done for the silent screen. Keep this in mind and follow the outlines above to keep your patrons satisfied with the talking pictures they see and hear in your theatre. Don't let them walk out saying that the talking pictures in the other houses are better than the ones in your house. This is not so; the pictures may be just as good but the offering of these pictures is where the trouble mostly lies. Correct it and keep your patronage and watch it grow.

What I Would Do If I Were A Chain Executive

The Viewpoint of An Experienced and Successful House Manager

By William A. Levey

Manager, Beacon Theatre, Port Washington, L. I.

I AM a house manager. I have been in the show business since I was 17, when I started as an usher at the old Academy of Music in New York. May I say, in all modesty, that I believe I am efficient and understand what is involved in the successful operation of a theatre.

It may be a bit unusual for a house manager to suggest what he would do if he were a chain executive, but I believe what I have to say is right.

If I were at the head of a theatre circuit, I would be very careful in engaging my managers. I would investigate their character and habits of each and would satisfy myself beyond a doubt that I was willing to place my theatre in his charge and feel satisfied that he would look after my interests as though they were his own.

After that, I would place implicit confidence in the man and give him leeway to make changes as he saw fit. After all, he, and not the man who sits in the office miles away dictating letters, is the captain on the bridge of the ship.

Give Manager Leeway

It is the manager who is faithful to his trust who knows just what is needed for the best interests of his house. He has the opportunity to study and learn just what the public, his audience, wants.

I honestly believe that business in many local houses, especially community theatres, would be immensely improved if the manager were given his own way regarding suggestions to improve conditions. If he is a faithful manager he will soon find out what's wrong and try to improve matters.

I am sure the great majority of managers are faithful. Those who are not are not worthy of the job. I know if I were at the head of a circuit it would not take me long to find out if my men were faithful to their trust, and, if not, I would certainly weed them out, as good men are to be had.

Praises Franklin's Maxims

As a chain theatre manager, I wish every theatre head and executive would read and digest Mr. Johnston's editorial in the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS for March 16. His statement that some circuit heads consider their managers as rubber-stamps is not exaggerated. I know a very competent general manager of a very progressive circuit who considers a manager "just one of the swabs." That's not exaggerating it one bit.

My idea of the ace in theatre management is Harold B. Franklin. I was among the first to buy his book, "Motion Picture Theatre Management," and it has always been on my desk in the office for ready reference on any subject about which I was in doubt.

Mr. Franklin's article in THE NEWS is a revelation. His maxims, "Were I a Theatre Manager," should find a place on every manager's memo pad.

Both the Johnston editorial and the Franklin article hit the nail on the head, and if they were only practiced by the man in the main office and the house manager in his everyday activity I am sure the result would be better business generally.

I have stated my feelings in this matter in a general way and want those who read this article to know that in my present connection I am, indeed, very happy. I have found A. H. Schwartz, the head of the Century Circuit, to be one of the fairest minded men in the show business and it is a distinct pleasure to be associated with his circuit.

And now may I address a word to house managers themselves? I have always cherished seven basic principles of theatre management handed to me by an oldtimer when I was an usher at the age of 17. He said to me: "Bill, if you want to make good follow these rules. I have always tried to follow them closely.

Seven Basic Rules

"Remember, as manager of the theatre, you are 'Master of the House,' and the 'Master of the House' is always a gracious dispenser of hospitality. Nothing costs less or counts for more than plain, unaffected courtesy in our daily relations with our fellow-man."

Then he told me his seven basic principles—the seven absolutely necessary qualifications for a successful theatre manager. They are: Service, Cleanliness, Courtesy, Efficiency, Economy, Honesty, and Hospitality.

The old timer has long since answered the final curtain call, but his advice to me is as good as the day he gave it. Let us live up to his suggestions and we cannot fail to succeed in our careers as dispensers of entertainment to the American people.

The WHAT—WHEN—WHERE and HOW MUCH for Sound Equipment

The essential problems concerning the decision to install sound equipment and what equipment can be bought—where and for how much it can be bought—will be an open book to exhibitor subscribers to MOTION PICTURE NEWS with the publication next week of THE SHOWMAN, including a complete listing of the available apparatus and accessories for synchronized and non-synchronized sound reproducers.

The Voice of the Screen

Ruffo's Voice Will Be Heard Through Medium Of Sound

The announcement made by Titta Ruffo, internationally known basso, that he had severed his connection with the Metropolitan Opera Company and would devote practically all of his time to the recording of short subject sound films, means that the voice of this famous singer will be heard in all parts of the country through the medium of the motion picture. The extensive distribution appeals to him and he predicts that other opera artists will follow his example.

Mr. Ruffo stated that he had contracts for ten short subjects and two feature length pictures, totalling $350,000. He has already completed four of ten shorts for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, he said, and that the first of these will be released during April. Arias from "Barber of Seville," "Othello," "Africana" and Italian folk songs are included in these four.

Tobis Is Now Producing Sound Installations Daily

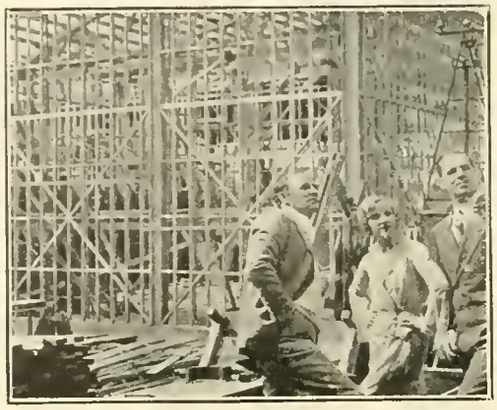
(Paris Correspondent, Motion Picture News)

Paris, March 14.—Tobis, the German talking film syndicate, is now understood to be producing one complete theatre installation daily in its German plant. Some thirty German houses have been wired to date, it is claimed.



The company recently launched a branch in Paris, where plans for manufacture of apparatus commencing May 1 are announced. It is claimed that contracts have already been signed for about one hundred houses in France. A studio at Epinay has been leased for one year.

"Meet The Family," Delf Talkie, Finished For Elbee

"Meet the Family," the first of a series of 18 two-reel all-talking comedies of American life which Harry Delf, comedian, is writing and directing for Elbee Pictures release, has been completed and Delf is now engaged in rehearsing for the shooting of another sketch, "At the Photographers." For these sketches, Delf plans a different cast with each release. They are being produced at the De Forrest Studios.

Tiffany-Stahl Will Make Two-Reel All-Talkfilms

Josephine Quirk, scenarist and writer, has been signed by Tiffany-Stahl and will produce 10 two-reel subjects. They are to be 100 per cent talkie. Up to the present time, George McIntosh has been engaged to play the leading boy role in the series.

Columbia's Sound Stages Now Nearing Completion

There are several sound stages now in the course of construction at the Columbia studios on the Coast. A crew of over 200 men, including builders, carpenters, plumbers, electricians, etc., will soon complete these structures.

The main stage of the new sound studios measures 92 feet by 140 feet all in one spread, the roof 37 feet above the floor. The latest developments in sound deadening have been adopted for the stages. The monitor room measures 55 feet by 47 feet, the projection booth 14 feet by 16 feet and the recording building 51 feet by 72 feet. Air ducts have been constructed between the studding of the buildings thus providing ventilation.

Pacent Devices Installed In B'klyn And Atlantic City

On St. Patrick's Day, Sam Berman's house, the Walker, in Brooklyn, 64th St. and 18th Ave., had its sound opening, playing "The Home Towners" as the production in sound. Mr. Berman also manages the Senate, in Brooklyn. The installation in the Walker is the Pacent device and the same is being installed in the Senate.

Another house to enjoy a premiere was the Globe, in Atlantic City, along the Boardwalk, which opened with sound last Tuesday, playing "Noah's Ark." The house seats 1,900. The installation is of the A type 4 Mda Pacent reproducer.

Twenty-Six New Movietone Acts For M-G-M Release

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has announced its release schedule for a new series of twenty-six Movietone acts. These will be available at the rate of two weekly, beginning April 6. Featured among the group, the third series to be released by the company, are the Gus Edwards Revue, International Revue, Metro Movietone Revue, Emil Boreo, Titta Ruffo, Happiness Boys, Van & Schenck, and The Revellers.

Progress is reported from the M-G-M Eastern sound studio, located at 127th street and second avenue, New York, where most of these Movietone acts were filmed. From three to six Metro Movietone features are being produced here weekly, under the supervision of Major Edward Bowes and Louis K. Sidney. Nick Grinde is guest director at this plant, and Larry Williams chief cameraman.

Movie-Phone Marketing A Sound-On-Film Device

A sound-on-film device, which sells for $1,000, is now being marketed by the Movie-Phone Corporation, Chicago. The company has been handling a disc system for some time and claims over 200 installations of the latter device to date. The sound-on-film apparatus is being sold in connection with the disc system and can be attached to the latter.

Pacent Leases Quarters In New Film Center Bldg.

The Pacent Reproducer Corp. has leased 5,000 square feet on the 10th floor of the Film Center Building, New York, and will install special laboratories and reproduction rooms there to be used in the demonstration of sound equipment. They also plan to conduct in these premises a school for their salesmen instructing them in the use of sound devices.

Pomeroy Will Experiment

Roy J. Pomeroy, technical expert on sound recording apparatus and amplification, who is now abroad vacationing, expects to stop on his return at the electrical experimental laboratories at Camden to further his technical knowledge of sound and dialogue films.

Dix In "Redskin" And "Fore" Revue At The Paramount

Feature's First Popular Price B'way Date Draws Nicely, Golf Champ A Hit

Richard Dix in "Redskin," the Paramount Technicolor release, coupled with a pleasing little Publix Unit headed by Alex Morrison, the champ trick shot golfer, seems to frame into a nice little show for the natives. In addition, Jesse Crawford is back at the console of the Wurlitzer again, and on the night that the show was reviewed Rubinoff wasn't in the orchestra pit, and that helped some, although his absence was something of a disappointment, as we had a friend from the Coast with us, and we had touted him that he was sure of a laugh when he got a load of the wriggling orchestra leader.

There was no overture for the band started immediately the house darkened and the Paramount News, with an insert of Technicolor Fashion Review, took the first nine minutes of the show. Jesse Crawford followed, and the chances are that Jesse did not get back from his vacation in time to prepare his program for this week, for it certainly was pretty flat musical fare that he offered.

The revue, "Fore," ran forty-two minutes, and handed the audience a lot of laughs. The honors of the show went to Wilton Crawley, a colored youngster working in blackface, with a hot clarinet and a couple of gags that are roof raisers. This boy will bear watching, for spotted in a Broadway revue, he will stop it just as cold as he does the Paramount show. Cliff Crane, the comedian of the unit, smacks strongly of burlesque both in his method of working and the material that he is using. He starts the proceedings in one with the dozen Albertina Rasch girls, after which there is a switch to full stage for Aline Faye and Brian McDonald to slip over a number. After this Ted Claire, the house M. C., and Crane put over a scene for a few laughs, which is followed by Aline with her guitar for a solid hit. She offers a dance number here that is sure fire for any audience. Another double number between her and McDonald and then that Crawley boy and how he wowed that audience. They simply couldn't get enough of him. He worked so hard and fast that he even broke up the stage orchestra and had Claire laughing his head off. His pantomime bit of singing "Sonny Boy" is a gem. The trick golf shots by Morrison finished off the unit in great shape.

Buster Keaton In "Spite Marriage" And "Black And Gold" Revue At Capitol

THE Capitol really had two features this week. On Saturday the house opened with "The Greater Power" an independently made talker. It was out after the first show on Sunday and Buster Keaton in "Spite Marriage" was substituted. The Keaton comedy was getting a lot of laughs as the week went on. The feature ran an hour and eleven minutes with the balance of the show running an hour. The "Black and Gold" Revue, an Arthur Knorr production, proved to be a tremendous flash and mighty pleasing to an afternoon audience.

Phil Spitalny is at the house as guest conductor for the week presenting a two part overture. The opening selection is "Capriccio Italienne" which was well received but "Lover Come Back To Me" which was the second selection was the real applause wow. In the latter number the Paul Sisters are introduced to sing a chorus in close harmony and the girls looked pretty and sang pleasingly. The combination took fourteen minutes.

An M-G-M short subject of William O'Neal in a series of three songs was the next offering. The numbers presented were "Loita," "Duna" and "Until." Eight minutes for these.

The next seven minutes were given over to the M-G-M News and Movietone News.

The revue ran a little more than half an hour. It was opened by Dave Schooler with a piano solo which seemed a little draggy. But right after going to full stage the action got underway with the chorus in a very novel costume effect, running from all gold at one end of the line of thirty-two girls to all black at the other. Evelyn Wilson is back at the house again and does her "souse" with "Let's Get Acquainted" a number that seemed a little rough for a picture house audience. Johnny Burke who has been on the coast doing pictures is back on the Main Stem and in the bill offering his former vaudeville monologue recounting his experiences in the World War. The material must have been new to the film theatre audience for they laughed long and loud. Benny and Western with their hoofing routine got over in snappy manner and earned a hand.

For a finale smash "Glad Rag Doll," with Dave Schooler and Evelyn Wilson working together, proved to be a winner. The dressing of this number and its manner of staging being on a par with anything that the Broadway musical shows have to offer. It was the class of the little revue.

New Policy For Cameo

The Cameo, the little RKO Theatre in New York which for the past several years has specialized in foreign film presentations, will experience a complete change of policy and will open on March 30 as a talkie house, the first feature presentation being "The Godless Girl," the Pathe dialogue film.

"Shady Lady" And O'Keefe's Gags Enliven Program At The Colony

PATHE'S release, "The Shady Lady," with Phyllis Haver starred, together with a great topical gag routine by Walter O'Keefe, master of ceremonies, made the Colony program this week one that the customers seemed to enjoy. Of course, a lot depends on the type of house that the entertainment is presented to as to the reception. On Sunday night with a crowded house the program was thoroughly enjoyed.

O'Keefe is following in Will Rogers' footsteps. He gets his material for gags from the news events of the day. The subject he picked for the current week's gagging was the reported engagement of one of the Siamese Twins. It was a subject that lent itself admirably to the application of double entendre, and O'Keefe made the most of it, but in a manner that was at once inoffensive, yet clever enough to pull a lot of laughs.

The whole show ran two hours and seven minutes with the feature taking an hour and four minutes.

Opening with an organ solo that was brief, a Pathe Sound News followed running for nine minutes. Pathe seemingly has not yet mastered the knack of outdoor shooting. Their Paris Island Marine Corps subject showed that. The whole reel as a matter of fact ran hot and cold, at times the sound reproduction was perfect while at others it was decidedly off.

A talking short of Bob Nelson of vaudeville, released by M-G-M, proved to be rather a flop. Whoever directed Bob should have known better than to ever shoot a close-up of this boy. In the medium close-up shots he will get by, but he needs a stronger song routine if he expects to make any more song shorts. Ten minutes was wasted on this one.

The stage show ran thirty-three minutes with O'Keefe and Sam Kahn's band carrying the greater portion of the time. Two additional specialties were added for the week. One of these, Sweet Sally Sweet, who is billed as "The Personality Girl" seemed to click with the house. She hasn't any voice to speak of, nor can she dance, but that gal has something that gets over with those in front. She is an excellent foil for O'Keefe, and she managed to handle "Everything I Do, I Do For You" in manner sufficient to get by. Her working in the audience got a lot of laughs. The other specialty was contributed by the Stuart Sisters, who offered a Hula as their opening number and followed it with a hard shoe routine later. The girls look pretty and will get by.

In his conducting of one number it looked as though Sam Kahn had gone down to the Paramount and gotten a load of Rubinoff, for he did more wiggles and gestures than has been his wont in the past. At one time I almost expected him to squawk "Mammy," that's how far he bent his knees. Sammy had better let Ruby do that contortionistic stuff for one of those directors on a street is enough.

Reduction In New York Theatre Rates

THE Auxiliary or Service Department of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America reports that a very substantial reduction in fire insurance rates for theatres in the New York City division has been effected. These savings will aggregate thousands of dollars for theatre owners on the premiums on buildings and contents. In a few instances individual reductions were previously effected. But in the main the special rate of reduction herein enumerated was brought about through a representative of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, named by National President R. F. Woodhull.

Just Ordinary Business Along B'way Last Week

Thursday night of this week. "Hearts in Dixie" also waltzed out on Friday night, not having been able to make the grade, and was replaced by the new William K. Howard production, "Christina," with Janet Gaynor as the star. The third week of the all-colored cast talker drew $8,881.25.

"Sonny Boy," at Warner's, slipped out last week to make room for "The Divine Lady," and is now current at the Strand, the final five days' business was $6,764.75, while "The Singing Fool," at the Harris in its 28th week, drew $12,484.50.

At the Winter Garden, "Noah's Ark" is not living up to expectations at the box office, despite the strong daily newspaper advertising campaign behind the picture. The receipts for the second week were $32,588.

New RKO House In Long Island Opens With Throng

A new B. F. Keith's theatre was opened last Friday, March 22, when the structure at Richmond Hill, Long Island, housed an audience for the first time. The feature at the opening was "Strange Cargo." The house, flying the RKO banner, seats 2,500. Civic leaders and notables in the entertainment field were on hand for the occasion. Also on the first program were The Fourteen Bricktops, Al Trahan, Davis and Darnell, Gordon and King and The Le Grohs.

RCA Photophone has been installed in the house. Louis Frohman was guest conductor for the opening. Fred Kinsley was guest organist but he will relinquish the niche to Abram Grayson.

"Passion Of Joan Of Arc" At Little Carnegie, N. Y.

"The Passion of Joan of Arc," the French film which the New York State Censor Board has just passed, had its gala premiere at the Little Carnegie Playhouse, N. Y., Thursday evening, March 28, under the sponsorship of the Societe Generale des Films of France, the producers. "Rouen," another French film, was included in the program. "Joan of Arc" was banned in England.

"Melody" At Regular Prices

AD TIPS—Play up talking sequences. Picture full of mystery and will appeal to all classes. —Capitol Theatre, Pat McGee, Manager, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Exploit talking trailer. Wonderful trial scene, fine plot, fine acting. Cast well fitted to picture, but not much at the box office. Serial in Saturday Evening Post ought to bring in a lot. Audience appeal: general.—Texas Theatre, W. C. O'Hare, Manager, San Antonio, Texas.

The mystery of who killed Mimi Bellamy and the fact that it is a talking picture draws for this picture. The courtroom scenes were played up. Audience appeal developed to be largely for the older folks, though receiving general patronage.—Jess Day, Manager, Capitol Theatre, Des Moines, Iowa.

Emphasized mystery theme and talking sequences.—Worth Theatre, Marsline Moore, Manager, Ft. Worth, Tex.

Mystery touch is angle here, not forgetting fact that film was adapted from widely-read story. Made some mention of members of cast and talking sequences, but confined biggest play to mystery touches. Audience appeal: high school age and over.—Loew's Theatre, Russell Bovim, Manager, Canton, O.

Exploited mystery and author. Audience appeal: high school age and over.—Empire Theatre, Tom Allen, Manager, Birmingham, Ala.

Mystery angle main feature to emphasize in exploitation. Used trailers, cards, and lobby displays. Audience appeal: all classes, but more particularly for adult minds.—Capitol Theatre, Herbert D. Grove, Manager, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Court room dialogue angle played up as much as mystery. Letters sent to every lawyer in city inviting attendance and comments. Stress laid on talking climax. Reputation of book mentioned in advance stories. Audience appeal: all classes, high school ages up.—Eastman Theatre, M. J. Murphy, Manager, Rochester, N. Y.

Advance showing two days before opening for members of Omaha Bar Association, city police and local bench got lots of talk. Picture out just before expose and guests asked to put name of character they thought committed crime on a card ushers passed around. Result: 108 cards turned in, 108 wrong guesses. During regular showing, also, picture was cut before expose of criminal, and announcement thrown on screen: "During this brief pause decide whom you think killed Mimi Bellamy. Talk it over with your seat neighbor." Audience appeal: general.—Riviera Theatre, Ray Jones, Manager, Omaha, Neb.

Rating—93%.

AD TIPS.—In advertising this picture, I figured that my best bet was to exploit MacLean, rather than to play up anything along the line of gang picture.—Troy Theatre, Walter Roberts, Manager, Troy, N. Y.

Douglas McLean in first talkie should be featured as he has following from old silent days. Then, too, Chicago gangster theme must not be overlooked in advertising.—Loew's State Theatre, Rodney Toups, Manager, New Orleans, La.

I did wish it would make up its mind whether it was a recorded play, a photoplay, an operetta, or a bull fight.—John S. Cohen, Jr., in a review of a talkie in The New York Sun.

Comedy, feature and star, Douglas MacLean, received equal boosting. Former local girl, Frances Lee (Myrna Tibbitts), mentioned in ads. Audience appeal: all ages and classes. —Minnesota Theatre, Murray Pennock, Manager, Minneapolis, Minn.

Exploit comedy angles and MacLean. Entertaining picture. Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—B. F. Keith's Theatre, John J. Burns, Manager, Syracuse, N. Y.

Exploit return of MacLean to screen in good, clean, exciting, funny crook picture. Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—Miller Theatre, H. E. Jameyson, Pub. Director, Wichita, Kans.

Exploit star in sound comedy. Audience appeal: all ages, from high school up, and all classes.—Fox Palace Theatre, Samuel Torgan, Manager, Springfield, Mass.

Best angle to use here is MacLean's first talking picture. MacLean draws well. Audience appeal: usual theatre goers.—Wisconsin Theatre, W. O. James, Manager, Milwaukee, Wis.

AD TIPS—Played it up as Sidney's first talking picture. Does not interest discriminating public.—Avon Theatre, Sid Lawrence, Manager, Utica, N. Y.

Another of series of Cohens and Kellys provided theme for advertising. Used general knowledge of resort to aid in interest winning. Audience appeal: all classes.—Allen Theatre, J. B. Allman, Manager, Akron, Ohio.

Those who have played the two previous pictures should exploit new episodes in adventures of two families. Play up Sidney as original Cohen, Kate Price and Vera Gordon and Mack Swain. Jewish-Irish comedy angle effective. Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—Strand Theatre, Andrew D. Mustard, Manager, Atlantic City, N. J.

Cohen and Kelly's bathing suit business became a pleasure when they discovered that the shorter they made "em" the more money they made. Will appeal to all classes of patrons and full houses should be expected when picture shown.—Liberty Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Exploit fact that noted farceurs are at America's famous playground with plenty of publicity on prevalence of bathing beauties. Appeal: to all lovers of hilarious comedy.—Victory Theatre Matt Riley, Manager, Providence, R. I.

Universal appeal. Play up title and Sidney's name.—State Theatre, Harold F. Wendt, Publicity Director, Toledo, Ohio.

Comedy angle and vanishing or nearly eliminated bathing costumes featured. Ravishing beauties in bathing suits. Adult appeal.—Pantages Theatre, E. C. Bostwick, Manager, Minneapolis, Minn.

Long line of bathing girls with letters on suits spelling title of picture used in advertising. Stars also should be played up. Audience appeal: all classes and ages.—Royal Theatre, J. H. Coppock, Manager, Kansas City, Mo.

Exploit previous successes of Cohen-Kelly pictures. Played up two comedy teams in one picture, emphasized picture was doubly funny. Audience appeal: comedy fans only.—Palace Theatre, Mrs. William Gordon, Manager, Newport News, Va.

Bathing beauty sequences one drawing point which should not be overlooked in advertising. Sidney's comic exhibits good for another argument; dialogue can be used as exploitation angle. Audience appeal: all classes.—Alamo Theatre, John Blunk, Manager, Louisville, Ky.

Reputations of Sidney, Gordon and Price given top place in ads. Throughout week, fact that film is latest Cohens and Kellys was played up. Film's reputation proved best point to stress, along with comedy element. No outside hookups used. Audience appeal: all ages and classes..—Rochester, H. M. Addison, Manager, Rochester, N. Y.

Tieup with national release: regular newspaper and outdoor advertising.—C. D. Miller, Manager, Pantages Theatre, Tacoma, Wash.

Principal emphasis in exploitation should be on fact that it's one of Cohen and Kelly series, which has a distinct following. Audience appeal: all classes and all ages.—Strand Theatre, Ray Swan, Manager, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Success of previous feature with same stars best selling angle. Atlantic City stuff, especially beauty parade, goes good.—Proctor's Theatre, Schenectady, N. Y.

Play up comedy with famous Jewish and Irish families. Audience appeal: for all classes that like comedy.—Lafayette Theatre, Wm. H. Raynor, Manager, Buffalo, N. Y.

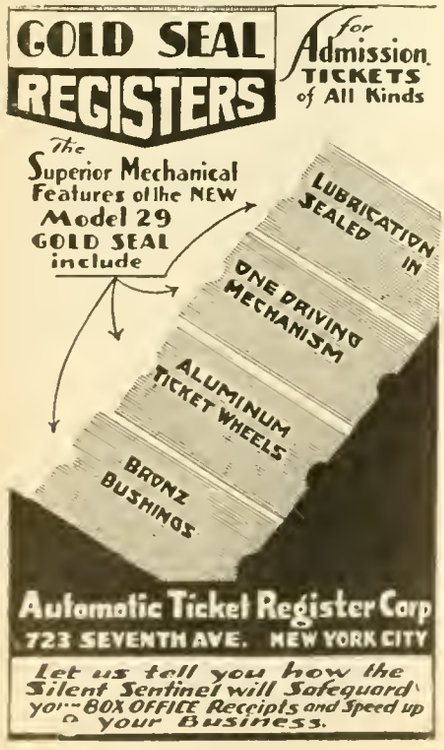
Play up comedy and perfected dialogue. Also fine work of Sidney, Gordon, Swain and rest of cast of "talking picture." Snappy theme, shots from Atlantic City bathing girl revue. Audience appeal: all classes.—Byrd Theatre, W. J. Coulter, Manager, Richmond, Va.

Series has always been popular. We called attention to fact this was first talkie of series and had dandy week.—Palace Theatre, Harry Gould, Manager, Ft. Worth, Tex.

Play up comedy angle and talking sequences first. Bathing girls good help, and it is season for that sort of thing in South Texas. Were agreeably surprised that this picture held up to normal business. The title is good—it tells story. Appeal is to young and old, because good comedy with some hilarious slapstick.—Metropolitan Theatre, Emil Bernstecker, Manager, Houston, Tex.



Exploit it as first talking feature of Cohen and Kelly series. Audience appeal: all ages and classes of people who like to be amused only.—Bijon Theatre, Al Anders, Manager, Springfield, Mass.

"Funnier than ever because they talk" was the line used. A talking Cohen and Kelly. Cast sufficiently well known to bear considerable stressing in advertising. Drew well. Audience appeal: Jewish people find picture very interesting. Usual movie audience.—Alhambra Theatre, Harry Wren, Manager, Milwaukee, Wis.

Sidney's personality alone, if well advertised, proves tremendous drawing card. He, individually, more than anything else, makes up drawing power of "Cohen-Kelly" series.—Pantages Theatre, A. B. Morrison, Manager, Memphis, Tenn.

Hail as event of season in talkies. Exploit lines: Hear them talk and see them act! Announce the stars. Tell them: You've seen them in New York—You've seen them in Paris—Now see them in America's playgrounnd —Wow! Audience appeal: crackerjack picture for whole family, will appeal to all classes.—Keith's Theatre, J. Lawrence Schanberger, Manager, Baltimore, Md.

Exploited it as first of "Cohen and Kelly" series done in sound plus three original stars and bathing beauty angle. Audience appeal: all ages.—Strand Theatre, Charles G. Branham, Manager, Birmingham, Alabama.

AD TIPS—Gilbert, deserts, Arabia, greatest lover of screen sure fire drawing points that prospective audience can't pass up.—Management Saenger Theatre, New Orleans, La.

Gilbert and love making ability played up in connection with title, picture being advertised as high point of romantic success. Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—Loew's Midland Theatre, Walter Maloney, Manager, Kansas City, Mo.

Picture divided space with vaud., with no outstanding ad feature. Audience appeal: largely women.—Loew's State Theatre, A. M. Sparrow, Manager, Norfolk, Va.

Used Gilbert name prominently. Stressed unusual romance. Mentioned clever diamond theft and battle of two men for love of woman in parching desert. Audience appeal: all classes.—Strand Theatre, Ray Brown, Manager, Akron, O.

Gilbert's personality still good for plenty of exploitation. State aided "atmosphere" by attiring ushers and indoor employes in "sheik" costumes, flowing turbans, etc. Coffee was served in foyer, oriental fashion, by courtesy of Memphis coffee packer.—Loew's State Theatre, City Manager, Memphis, Tenn.

Exploit racking trek over desert in search of water and lure of diamonds. Also strong cast. Gilbert, Nolan, Torrence. Audience appeal: general.—Miller Theatre, H. E. Jameyson, Publicity Director, Wichita, Kans.

Exploited the stars entirely. Outside stunts, special nights, feature news stories, theatre stunts. Audience appeal: general.—Loew's State Theatre, Harry Weiss, Manager, Syracuse, N. Y.

We opened strong on Saturday with this. Took an awful tumble Sunday and never picked up. Gilbert's unkempt appearance seemed to spoil matinee trade. We yelled Gilbert at top of our voices and kept mum on other features of picture.—Marsline Moore, Manager, Worth Theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex.

Gilbert's fame and name best feature. Audience appeal: poor.—Fox-Poli Theatre, New Haven, Conn.

Exploit Gilbert and Nolan; diamond mines, desert scenes. Good mystery-romance.—Rialto Theatre, Monty Salmon, Manager, Macon, Ga.

AD TIPS—Exploit as one that even blind can enjoy because of all-talking feature. Let all blind persons hear it free. Advertise it as first big all-talking melodrama dealing with boy detective. Play up snappy dialogue. Has universal appeal.—Rialto Theatre, Roy Rogan, Manager, Joliet, Ill.

Exploited Chatterton, whose name is good here. Also fact of stage adaptation. Melodramatic thrills and tickler lines on what happens when dummy speaks. Audience appeal: all classes; worth stressing youthful appeal.—Colonial Theatre, L. B. Cool, Manager, Akron, O.

New faces for old. Lupino Lane, ace comedian for Educational, is now starring in "Good Night Nurse," "Summer Saps," and 'Only Me," current releases

The starring player, Ruth Chatterton, was played up strongly, as was all-talking angle. Don't forget children interest. Audience appeal: good one for entire family, and one that will appeal strongly to children because of cast.—Loew's Theatre, Russell Bovin, Manager, Canton, O.

Play up Bennett, young star; also Chatterton, Pitts and others. Stress all-talking feature, that every word is clear and distinct. Fine comedy, as well as "thriller." "Clever Kid" is hit of this detective story. Audience appeal: all ages and all classes.—Colonial Theatre, Joel Levy, Manager, Richmond, Va.

Chatterton's name brings in patronage. Use it in advertising. Also may be exploited as all-talking thriller. Audience appeal: general audience, with strong juvenile patronage.—Strand Theatre, William Mick, Manager, Milwaukee, Wisc.

Film proved good draw for youngsters. Toy detective badges and suggestions to attend were distributed among school children. Comedy strain stressed to get adults. All talking angle emphasized in advance stories. Film drew well latter part of week after first two days gave it a reputation. Audience appeal: particularly youngsters, but all ages and classes.—Piccadilly Theatre, Herbert Chatkin, Manager, Rochester, N. Y.

AD TIPS—Exploitation featured Fairbanks, romantic appeal of film, and talking sequences. Audience appeal: all ages and classes. State Theatre, G. E. Greene, Manager, Minneapolis, Minn.

Exploited Fairbanks, sword in hand, in fighting pose, emphasizing fact he would speak and sing, and comparing this with other Fairbanks pictures. Audience appeal: all classes.—Norva Theatre, John J. Madden, Manager, Norfolk, Va.

Fact that it is first picture in which Fairbanks talks and that it is sequel to stories featuring the "one for all and all for one" which forms theme song, was emphasized in exploitation. Audience appeal was 100%; there is always a big juvenile following for Fairbanks.—Des Moines Theatre, Lionel Wesson, Manager, Des Moines, Iowa.

Play up Fairbanks in sequel to "Three Musketeers." His first sound picture. Romance and adventure of 18th century. Appeal to all classes.—State Theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Play up Fairbanks in one of his best and first talking drama.—Century Theatre, Geo. Mason, Manager, Buffalo, N. Y.

Exploit Fairbanks and fact that he breaks screen and stage silence of 14 years. Also that this shows further adventures of Three Musketeers and D'Artagnan. Further stress lavish sets and costliness of production. Audience appeal: all ages, all classes.—Loew's Theatre, Harold W. Evens, Manager, Richmond, Va.

Play up old Musketeers story and colorful surrounding. Man wearing Musketeer's uniform walked streets with another wearing "iron mask," so labeled. One day they led all newsboys of two leading papers in "treasure hunt" in loop district, all carrying "Iron Mask" banners. Palace also conducted coloring contest in one paper, which fitted particularly well with colorful costuming of the period.—Loew's Palace Theatre, Ernest Emerling, City Manager, Memphis, Tenn.

Lay all possible stress on fact that this picture is sequel to "Three Musketeers," using Dumas characters and showing adventures of later years. Play up prologue in which Doug speaks for first time to theatre audience in 14 years. Material in picture is particularly adapted to Fairbanks, and all Fairbanks enthusiasts will feel satisfied, so you can play up big. Audience appeal: fine for all classes and all ages.—Loew's and U. A. State, Col. Harry E. Long, Manager, Louisville, Ky.

Exploit Fairbanks first sound picture, and fact that this will be his only picture this year. Play up as sequel to "Three Musketeers." Suitable for all audiences.—Robert Murray, Manager, Music Box Theatre, Seattle, Wash.

Fairbanks' name and fact that he speaks. Distributed advertising napkins in restaurants and masks to school children. Audience appeal: all classes.—Olympia Theatre, Wallace Allen, Advertising Manager, New Haven, Conn.

The fact that it's a Fairbanks picture offers strongest exploitation possibilities. Medieval romance and adventure makes tie-ups difficult. Audience appeal: all classes and all ages. —Capitol Theatre, Herbert D. Grove, Manager, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

AD TIPS—Exploit Guinan, playing her own famous role in night club. Audience appeal: all ages, all classes beyond ninth grade.—Capitol Theatre, Walter Merkel, Manager, Springfield, Mass.

Guinan's name popular, and is best feature to advertise; title gives theme of picture, which in itself has drawing power. Audience appeal: all types of adult patronage.—Garden Theatre, L. K. Brin, Manager, Milwaukee, Wis.

James Kirkwood, actor of stage and screen, fits right into the talkie roles. One of his first spoken screen roles is in "The Time, The Place and The Girl," new Vitaphone special

Used Guinan's name prominently. Audience appeal: mild. Will do business in houses where audiences are lured by night life in New York.—Allen Theatre, F. H. Clary, Manager, Cleveland, O.

Go heavily on Guinan as star, calling her world's foremost night club hostess. Let them know they will hear and see her and exploit story of Whoopee. Picture of wine, women and wrong. Urge them to see New York all dressed up and ready for thrills and to make whoopee with "Whoopee Girls." Use Vita. signature cut. Audience appeal: to tired business men generally and to all who like good drama, romance and action.—Warners' Metropolitan, C. S. Langne, Manager, Baltimore, Md.

Exploit Guinan as famous night club hostess. Chance to see her in action. Audience appeal: general.—Strand Theatre, Walter McDowell, Manager, Syracuse, N. Y.

Play up background of big New York night club with name of Guinan world's hostess. Audience appeal: all classes.—Great Lakes Theatre, Lawrence P. Stuart, Manager, Buffalo, N. Y.

Worked up elaborate teaser, ran it four or five days preceding opening, ballyhooing "touring night club" to locate for one week at theatre address. Had lots of 'phone calls for reservations, etc., and worked up good interest in film. For current ads, exploited night club atmosphere and Guinan in familiar setting.—Strand Theatre, Schenectady, N. Y.

Rating—90%.

AD TIPS—Drawing power of star should be played up big in exploitation. Bill as hectic story of modern age with cuts showing frills of modern youth. Appeal: to all classes of adults, particularly collegiates.—Strand Theatre, Ed Reed, Manager, Providence, R. I.

Appeal to younger set. Let Moore's name bring them in.—Pantheon Theatre, Langdon W. Kumler, Manager, Toledo, Ohio.

Moore featured in advertising and picture played up as her whoppiest picture since "Flaming Youth." Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—Mainstreet Theatre, Lawrence Lehman, Manager, Kansas City, Mo.

Semi-comedy and picture of human life exploited and telling reasons to be good. Audience appeal — especially young generation. Some older.—Loew's Warfield Theatre, Lou Golden, Manager, San Francisco, Calif.

Advertised red hot features of film. Called Collegian week. Appeal: only fair, not as strong previous Moore films. Appeal to school and college ages.—Fox Broadway Theatre, Floyd Maxwell, Manager, Portland, Ore.

Rating—90%.

AD TIPS—In newspaper advertising I figured it would be good bet to call attention to fact that picture was made from Maughan's latest story, and that he was author of "Rain." Also featured fact that Asther and Garbo constituted new and perfect love team.—Mark Strand, Tom Clark, Manager, Albany, N. Y.

Liberal use of Garbo's name will help more than anything in putting picture across. Audience appeal: Theatre's usual patrons.—Majestic Theatre, H. Israel, Manager, Milwaukee, Wisc.

Exploit work of three members of cast, scenic angle, intelligent handling. Suitable for better type adults.—James Q. Clemmer, Manager, Fifth Avenue Theatre, Seattle, Wash.

Wolf Song, The (Paramount)

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—Weather cool and fair, Embassy Theatre (596), 7 days, 2 shows a day, 3 Sat. and Sun., $1-$2, Paramount shorts. Fourth week. Rating based on nine days' business.

Rating—140%.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Fair and warm weather, Loew's State Theatre (3,400), 7 days, 35c-50c, 2 sound acts, Fox and M-G-M News, organlogue.

Rating—100%.

AD TIPS—Exploit George Bancroft, the star of "Underworld and "The Dragnet," in his first talking role. Also the stock market angle where even the big ones get trimmed. Baclanova is also good for a day. Audience appeal: mostly for adults.—S. Chambers, Manager Palace Theatre, Wichita, Kans.

Plenty of angles for exploitation, but featured especially the all-talking angle and the name of George Bancroft. Played up the Wall Street angle with the present interest in the market. Audience appeal: all ages, both sexes.—Russell Bovim, Manager Loew's Theatre, Canton, O.

Exploit the picture by using Bancroft's name. Stress the amount of talking in the picture—a 100 per cent talkie. Audience appeal: adult patronage of all classes.—William Mick, Manager, Strand Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.

George Bancroft has the best voice on the screen and it always shows itself. It's worth emphasizing together with the marvelous talking cast. The high finance angle also has a popular appeal. We used a tie-up with the auto dealers in a "Wall Street" parade of new cars, carrying money bags. Pennies thrown to the children in the street crowds also had a good effect. Audience appeal: The picture is of interest mostly to those of mature years and to city folk rather than country residents.—Herbert D. Grove, Manager, Capitol Theatre, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Melodrama of general appeal, especially timely on account of present interest and public participation in stock trading, which angle is heavily played, bearing down on the stock pit scene. All-talking angle, also Baclanova's songs help sell it. Suitable for adult audiences.—Proctor's Theatre, Schenectady, N. Y.

Advertise Bancroft as proving ability to hold leading place in talking pictures. Play up lesson value of picture as it not only

Woman Disputed, The (U.A.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—Victoria Theatre (1,000), 5 days, 25c-35c, comedy, news reel. Weather, fair.

Rating—75%.

ANN ARBOR, MICH.—Majestic Theatre (1,050), 4 days, 10c-50c, "All Set," Aesop's Fables (Pathe), Pathe Review, Par. News. Weather, mild.

Rating—70%.

WICHITA, KANS.—Fair weather, Miller Theatre, (1,981), 3 days, 25c-50c, Int'l News, comedy.

Rating—100%.

AD TIPS—Exploit Norma Talmadge, also the acting of Kent as a new star of the movies. The "disputed" angle is also good, particularly if it can be played discreetly in a tie-up with the "bad woman" situation. Not so much on the war stuff, a little overworked now. Audience appeal: for adults only.—S. Chambers, Manager, Miller Theatre, Wichita, Kans.

Exploit fact that here is one of screen's most beautiful love stories pictured against war scenes of realism. Talmadge at her best. Might arouse interest by calling attention to striking similarity between Roland and Gilbert, particularly when camera catches Roland's face straight on. Audience appeal: general.—Majestic Theatre, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Woman From Moscow (Par.)

SPRINGFIELD, O.—Mild weather, Regent Theatre, (1,500), 4 days, 10c-15c-25c-30c-50c, "Half-Back Hannah," M-G-M News, 5 acts vaud.

OTTAWA, ONT.—Weather: mild and cold, Regent Theatre, (1,225), 6 days, 25c-65c, "Miss Information" (Vita.), Fox M. and Para. News, orchestra.

Rating—60%.

AD TIPS—Draw close relationship with Michael Arlen's "Green Hat" with this story. Greta Garbo does her best acting and more or less redeems herself. John Gilbert loves better than ever. Audience appeal: a feature that will particularly hold women and stir manly emotions as well.—Ray Tubman, Manager, Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Ont.

Younger Generation (Col.)

COLUMBUS, O.—Fair and cold weather, Grand Theatre, (1,200), 2 days, 25c-35c-50c, Fox News, Movietone vaude.

Talent May Be Around Corner, Says Schulberg

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 28.—Pointing out that studio executives have a habit of overlooking potential talent within the gates of their own studios, and get wildly excited over some person working for another company, Ben P. Schulberg, general manager of West Coast production for Paramount, impressed his corps of production assistants with the importance of giving more attention to the possibilities of players, writers and others currently working for Paramount.

Schulberg said that every studio, Paramount included, had time and again let exceptional bets get away from them, mainly because the studio executives had not taken the time to watch the people working on the lot. He continued that many executives had their eyes on what the other companies were doing, rather than keeping in closer contact with their own studio activities and personnel.

Paul Bern Joining M-G-M As Production Supervisor

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 28.—Paul Bern, who has been supervisor of production at Pathe until he asked to be released from his contract a week ago, has been signed as a production supervisor by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He was formerly scenario editor for that company.

There were rumors that Bern was slated as general manager for Universal, but those reports were denied by both Carl Laemmle, Jr., and Robert Welch, present general manager of U. City.

Will Remake "Grounds For Divorce" As Menjou Film

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 28.—"Grounds for Divorce," an all-talker, will be Adolphe Menjou's final picture under his current contract with Paramount. It will be a remake, the first version having been produced in 1925 with Florence Vidor starring. "The Prince Consort," announced as a forthcoming Menjou vehicle, will be produced by Paramount within the next two months as an all-talker with a featured cast.

Walter Stern Leaving "U"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 21.—Walter Stern, for the past two years business manager at Universal City, Cal., resigned last week. No appointment has been made to fill the vacancy.

Jerry Hoffman Resigns From M. P. News

WITH regret, Motion Picture News announces the resignation of Jerry Hoffman, who has been Western News Editor for this publication. Mr. Hoffman will devote all his energies to Universal Service and The Los Angeles Examiner in the future. He has been contributing to Universal Service and is now film critic for The Examiner, as assistant to Louella Parsons.

Motion Picture News takes pleasure in expressing our appreciation of Mr. Hoffman's excellent work for us and in extending sincere best wishes for his future success.

Paramount Will Remake "The Fighting Coward" In Sound

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 28.—"Magnolia," from story by Booth Tarkington, will be produced by Paramount as an all-talker and sounder. It will be a remake, having been produced by Paramount in 1924 under release title of "The Fighting Coward," with James Cruze directing.

Dorothy Arzner, who will direct the new version of "Magnolia," was assistant to James Cruze when the latter directed the former picture several years ago.

Lucille Powers has been signed by Paramount for a feature part in the picture, mainly on account of her natural Southern accent. The story is laid in the South along the Mississippi River.

Pathe To Make Series of 2-Reel All-Negro Comedies

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Mar. 28.—Pathe will produce a series of two reel all talker comedies with all-negro casts. The company purchased sixteen Hugh Wiley short stories that have appeared in the Saturday Evening Post from time to time. Monty Brice has been signed to write the adaptations and dialogue for the pictures, and Paul Powell will direct. Production will start as soon as selection is made of player to take the part of "Wildcat," the negro around whom the stories revolve.

New Film Company

The Arnold Production and Releasing Corporation has been formed for production of feature pictures based on animation of miniatures. The company hopes to raise $50,000 for cost of the first picture. Officers and directors of the organization include Richard K. Arnold, Jr., Henry Weyler, Henry B. Rickard, and Glen Lambert. J. L. Roop is named as technical director.

New Call Bureau Checks Production For Coming Month

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 28.—The recently established Call Bureau has become the production barometer of the industry. By checking on the number of calls received daily or weekly, it is possible to tell immediately just what ratio of production is scheduled in Southern California studios for the coming month.

The Central Casting Bureau has not been able to serve in this way, since five thousand extras might be required with only one production being made in the entire group of studios. Another reason is that extras are called for work twenty-four hours before needed. The Call Bureau, listing all standard feature players, is checked with by producers from three to four weeks ahead when certain individuals are required.

Although the Bureau has been operating but five weeks, there are over 4,000 feature players now listed. The office has become international in scope, since producers phone requests for individuals who are now located in all parts of the world. Many such cases have not been registered with the bureau and it is difficult to locate them.

Christies Will Not Renew Contract With Billie Dooley

Hollywood, Mar. 28.—Christies will not renew the term contract of Billy Dooley, starred for several years on the Christie program. This is because of a change in production policy by the company whereby all future releases will be full dialogue and sound with big names from pictures and the stage. Christie's are not likely to renew expiring contracts with their other term comedians and players.

Cruze, Inc., Buys Studio And Property of Chadwick

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 28.—James Cruze, Inc., headed by the director, has purchased the studio, real estate adjacent to the studios and the entire studio equipment of Chadwick Pictures, Inc., in Hollywood. Cruze is making a series of short and feature-length talking pictures.

De Sano And Chevalier

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 28.—Marcel De Sano has been signed by Paramount to direct Maurice Chevalier in his next talker for Paramount.

Burr Plans Series Of Talk Shorts For Inde. Market

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 28.—C. C. Burr, former producer of Torchy Comedies and the Johnny Hines features for First National, will produce and release a series of two-reel talking pictures for the independent market, under brand of Burr Comedies, Inc.

Burr's first series will be titled "Storm and Strife" comedies, with domestic farce background. Both stage and screen players will be used in the all-talkers, with sound recordings to be reproduced by both film and disc methods.

New "U" Special

Carl Laemmle, Jr., has launched a "Surprise" production at Universal City. It is "College Spirit," and is promised for release well before summer, and will be handled as a special. It will have college and "hot" songs written for it, will contain sound and dialogue, and will also feature the Glee Club of the University of California.

New Educational Player

The work of Al Alt in several of Educational's one-reel Cameo Comedies in which he has been featured this season, has won him the featured comedy part in a Mermaid about to go into production under the direction of Charles Lamont.

Baclanova-Soussanin Honeymoon

Following a four-day honeymoon at Lake Arrowhead, Baclanova, actress, and her husband Nicholas Soussanin, have returned to the Hollywood film colony. The couple were married in Riverside, Cal., March 7.

Chevalier and Wallace

Maurice Chevalier and Richard Wallace, who directed him in "Innocents of Paris," have returned to Hollywood. The picture is scheduled for release late next month.

Educational Writer

Author of many clever sub-titles in Educational's comedies this year, Al Martin now is turning his talent for humor in another direction. He is writing dialogue for Jack White's series of talking comedies.

Dotty Jottings

Paramount Looks Out For Material To Star Green

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 28.—Paramount is looking for possible material to feature Harry Green in talking features. Green, former comedian on the stage and a featured player in three Paramount talkies since he came to the Coast several months ago, has been assigned a role in Moran and Mack's vehicle.

"U" Sounding "Southern Cross"

Universal is sounding and synchronizing "Under the Southern Cross," produced in New Zealand last summer. A chorus of fifty is being rehearsed to sing native songs.

Will Re-make "Broken Wing"

Paramount will re-make "The Broken Wing" as an all talker and sound production under direction of William Wellman.

"Green Goddess," New Talkie

Al Green has been signed by Warners to direct "The Green Goddess" an all talker with George Arliss; marking Green's introduction to talking pictures.

Change In "U" Schedule

"You Can't Buy Love" replaces "Climax" as Jean Hersholt's next Universal vehicle. It will be a 100 per cent talker, directed by Arch Heath. Charley Chase has been borrowed for the comedy lead. Kathryn Crawford will be ingenue.

"Protection" For Dorothy Burgess

"Protection" will be Dorothy Burgess' first vehicle for Fox under her long term contract. Benjamin Stoloff will direct; the story based on original by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan. Roy Stewart, Robert Elliott and Paul Page are principals.

Work Halted On "The Gob"

After shooting for several days on "The Gob," M-G-M has stopped production on the picture, and is now re-vamping the story.

Rinaldo In "Trader Horn"

Duncan Rinaldo will play the role of Little Peru in M-G-M's production of "Trader Horn."

Opinions on Pictures

The Donovan Affair

One Of The Best Talkies
(Dialogue Version)
(Reviewed by Bill Furman)

FOR sustained interest and belt line laughs, this is easily one of the best talkers of the season. Jack Holt, recently from the wide open spaces in westerns, brings out the fact that he is a comedian of high calibre, and an actor who can go through his routine without being stagey. Holt has an excellent voice for recording purposes; well modulated, and getting over without apparent effort.

"The Donovan Affair" is a fast moving comedy-drama in which a series of triangles and two cold blooded murders in the dark keep audience interest at highest pitch. There is no inkling as to the identity of the perpetrator of the crimes, both of which occur around a banquet table; until the murderer is captured by a clever ruse for a smashing climax. Any one of four members of the cast seem guilty of the crimes, until the real criminal is revealed to the audience.

High class comedy runs riot through the tragic sequences. Fred Kelsey as the clumsy but faithful assistant to Inspector Killian (Jack Holt) getting the biggest share of laughs; with Hank Mann, a stuttering doctor, and Ethel Wales getting plenty of attention for their portrayals.

Columbia has assembled a notable cast for their initial plunge into the all-talker field. Every one has been seen in pictures for several years, and all voices register satisfactorily.

The sound effects inserted are very realistic and tend to provide additional thrills for the audience. The dialogue by Howard J. Green is sparkling and interesting throughout.

The picture should be an exceptional box office draw, and will likely bring back many repeaters, as it is well worth seeing two or three times. It's packed with laughs throughout, clean comedy and a thriller of the first water.

Drawing Power: 100 per cent either as a talker or silent. It has plenty of audience qualities, and enough featured "names" to help bring in capacity houses. It's a picture that will interest all types and ages.

The Shady Lady

A Likeable Melo-Comedy
(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

ALTHOUGH this is listed as a talking picture, there is but one sequence in dialogue. That comes along at the finish of the picture and runs for nine minutes. But the picture is a well worth while melodramatic comedy that will please any audience. It is light entertainment, but with closely knit action and the plot carried by four people it will hold audience and send them out satisfied.

There is a cast of four people programmed. The names are worth while. Phyllis Haver is starred, with Robert Armstrong and Louis Wolheim supporting her and Russell Gleason playing the role of a sap reporter getting all the laughs.

The story has its scene laid in Havana. Louis Wolheim, an exiled American because he almost "occupied the Chair of Applied Electricity at Sing Sing," as Prof. Holbrook is running a gaming establishment and doing a little gun running to other Central American countries. It has been profitable for him, but of late there has been a fly in the ointment. His shipments have been hijacked, with the result that his profits have been fast dwindling. The cause is Blake, a "gentleman adventurer" in the person of Robert Armstrong. The Professor knows who is doing the jobs, but he cannot come out and openly accuse him of it. That is the situation when the Shady Lady enters his gaming establishment. She is "wanted" in New York. A wealthy admirer of hers has has been slain and she is supposed to have committed the crime. The Professor invites her into his private office and then unfolds a plot. She is to lure the reason for the hijacked shipments into the Professor's hands and in return the Professor will forget that she is the girl that they are looking for in New York.

Well, the Shady Lady, who is no one else than Phyllis Haver, steps out to get her man. But she falls in love with him.

It is the final scene in the gunrunner's den that is in dialogue. The four principals, Miss Haver, Wolheim, Armstrong and Gleason, all take part in it. The scene is a tense one, and as it is the finish of the picture the audience carry away the impression of the talking kick at the finish.

Drawing Power: This will fit almost anywhere. The fact that the greater part of the picture is silent won't mitigate against it, for the nine minutes at the finish is just enough to punch it.

The Wild Party

Clara Bow Scores In Talkie
(100 Per Cent Dialogue)
(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

CLARA BOW makes her debut in the talker field with "The Wild Party," and she still remains the delightful, effervescing, audience-catching personality that brought her to the top of Paramount box office "draws." Neither Clara nor Paramount have any worries over her ability to talk in front of the microphone—she puts everything across without difficulty. One fact is brought out in looking at this picture—Clara can be even a bigger favorite in the talkers than she has been in the silent form of film entertainment.

Paramount did not give the girl such a hot story for her first venture in front of the mike. The story, from a novel of the same name by Warner Fabian, is rather episodic and forced in its presentation. It doesn't just seem to ring true—but Clara Bow in the lead puts the picture over by sheer force of her personality.

Clara is portrayed as a wild student at a girl's college, leader of a sorority group or something like that. Then Frederic March appears as the new professor of Anthropology. Clara sets out to show the professor his rightful place and falls in love with him. The affair is dragged through the balance of the picture; with wild doings by the girls under leadership of Clara; until the usual clinch for the finish.

There is no need for detailing the story; it's one of those college yarns that have been done many times before.

Just because the story is not original is no reason to believe the picture will not prove a success. "The Wild Party" should get over big in any locality—chiefly because Clara Bow is starred, and does fine work in her first picture with talking throughout.

Drawing Power: One of the sure-fire money-makers in the talker field—Clara Bow talks for the first time, and she is certain to win new popularity in the sounders. Audiences will overlook story in admiration for Clara.

Produced by Paramount-Famous-Lasky. Released by Paramount. From novel by Warner Fabian. Adaptation and dialogue by E. Lloyd Sheldon. Directed by Dorothy Arzner. Photographed by Victor Milner. Sound footage about 7,000 feet. Release date not determined.

Syncopation

Good Triangle Meller With Songs

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

HERE is another Broadway story, dealing with small time vaudevillians, night clubs and Park Avenue society, with a lot of good music, three corking song numbers, and looks like it should be a good box office bet. It has got a couple of good kicks and, while it is shy on picture names, the combination of Bobby Watson and Morton Downey should mean something to the customers. The one weak spot in the picture is Barbara Bennett who handles the lead.

"Syncopation" is the first feature length production with dialogue and music that has been made by R-K-O in the east and, considering the limitations of the studio, they have turned out an extraordinary piece of work.

It is the story of a small time team, man and wife, who have finally been given a chance on Broadway in a production. The show is a flop but a night club owner, who is a society man, falls for the wife and gives the combination a job in his club. The girl gets society ideas and believes that she is destined to be society's pet, except for the fact that her husband is a hick. The result is that, after they have achieved a Park Avenue apartment, she gives hubby plenty of air, then tries to make good on her own in a new club that the society admirer has financed for her. She does a flop, and then when the admirer makes her a proposition to go abroad, without benefit of clergy, the wise vaudeville girl sez: "Well I guess you must of have made a mistake, I'm not that kind of a girl." Heh! time.

In the cast, Bobby Watson plays the role of the husband dancer, while Barbara Bennett is the wife. Watson scores, Miss Bennett, however, does not make a pleasing impression. She does not photograph particularly well, and after all though they be talkies we are still in the picture business, and her voice is harsh and disagreeable. Morton Downey plays a hick song writer and he with Dorothy Lee walk off with the honors when it comes to song and the flat roles. Dorothy Lee, as a Dumb Dora, is a wow. And she handles one of the song numbers, "Do Something," in great shape. To Downey's lot falls a number entitled "Jericho," which is going to be a real hot hit, and "I'll Always Love You," both of which are destined to be danced to for a long while, and Downey puts them over in great shape.

The production was made under the supervision of Robert Kane, while Bert Glenon directed.

Drawing Power: This one will go anywhere and is worthy of an extended run in the biggest houses.

Produced and distributed by R-K-O Productions. Length: 7,626 feet. Running time: an hour and twenty-two minutes. Adapted from the Gene Markey novel "Stepping High. Adaptation by Frances Agnew, directed by Bert Glennon.

"Those Two Boys"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

MONTY COLLINS and Vernon Dent act goofy enough in this one to delight the most exacting fan craving nutty proceedings, embellished with simple tomfoolery and setting forth doltish comedy absolutely devoid of sense. That's how the majority of fans desire their screen humor; the crazier and more nonsensical, the better they like it. Well, the two Educational "nuts" carry on in this Mermaid in a childish manner. Big Vernon is as dense as any one could possibly be and his companion in humor, Monty, is equally dumb. The silly things they do make one gurgle.

The two arrive at an exclusive club where old and dignified men play their quiet games and where the loudest noise is a cough or a muffled sneeze. Vernon and Monty dislike the dignity of the place so they indulge in a few of their own rough games. They play hide and seek among the guests, cause a fight in the billiard room, insult the chief steward, argue among themselves and before they are through have thoroughly demoralized the conservative club-members so that they, too, indulge in fights and argument. A kicking bee, in which practically every person on the set participates, brings the fun to an amusing finish.

It's very good comedy, easily one of the best of the Collins-Dent team. It clearly defines the influence of Hal Roach upon other comedy producers. The gags are excellently detailed. Robert Graves and Al Thompson support. Stephen Roberts directed.

"The Newlyweds in Society"

(Universal-Stern—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

SUNNY McKEEN, Derelys Perdue and Jack Egan—the screen "Newlyweds' Family"—are featured in this comedy directed by Gus Meins. It employs an old idea—that of a couple who go to make a big impression at a house gathering and who are dreadfully embarrassed by their precocious child.

It has its moments, the best of which exhibits Egan as entertaining the gathering with selections on the piano. He is really supposed to be playing himself, but through an arrangement with Snookums, who helps him run the instrument via the electric plug, he is able to get away with his performance. The appearance of a couple of crooks, who lift the hostess' jewels so that suspicion is cast upon Egan and the cleverness of the child in recovering the gems and rendering the crooks helpless supply the other stem upon which the laughs are built, although these laughs are never the genuine article.

The producers have made of little Sunny just a rough, bouncing boy. His performance would be greatly enhanced if ever so often they would have him come across with a touch of wistfulness or baby tenderness. As it is his talent is not being realized to its proper extent. Or so it seems to the writer.

"Matchmaking Mamas"

(Pathe-Sennett—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

MACK SENNETT has an assortment of talent in this release, part of which was shot in Technicolor, that is not often gathered together for a two-reeler. In it are featured Johnny Burke, Carol Lombard, Sally Eilers and Matty Kemp. It is easy to see because of her work in a small role why Miss Eilers is rapidly becoming a new movie star, for here she exhibits a deal of charm, devoid of coquetry. She is a nice little girl to watch and shines brightly in this picture.

Sally is Burke's daughter, fresh from school, and falls in love with Matty. Burke's wife is planning to marry off Carol to Matty and in Sally sees a hindrance to her plans. So she whispers in her ear that Matty is a flirt and that he is already promised to Carol. Of course, that breaks Sally's heart until Burke finds out what's the matter, and eggs Matty on to run off with Sally to the minister. The two of them follow his advice, and Carol, much to her mother's horror, weds a dancing master.

The Technicolor is nice and that's about all. It is noticeable that it doesn't improve the comedy to any great extent and just adds a touch of novelty. A good gag used in the reels has Burke, who is considerably henpecked, heaving heavy books at his wife at the most unexpected times. The comedy, on the whole, is good, although at times it looks (if one is to judge by the photography) a trifle old.

Harry Edwards directed.

"Watch My Smoke"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

BEING a new "Smitty" comedy, co-starring Donald Haines and Jackie Coombs, with Betty Jane supporting and Bull Montana the featured guest artist, with direction from Harry Edwards, this new two-reeler, adapted from the newspaper strip by the Amadee Van Beuren unit, provides fair amusement. It is a typical kid comedy and contains appeal, therefore, for adults as well as youngsters.

The kids play at the game of firemen, Donald and Jackie acting as the chiefs. After considerable footage devoted to their unique methods of fire-house training, the gist of the story comes around when a jealous rival of the gang starts a fake fire in a nearby building and beguiles Donald into thinking that his girl, Vera, is in danger of her life in the smoking structure. Donald and his cohorts endeavor to combat the supposed fire but without avail, everything going topsy-turvy during the excitement.

The film contains laughs in spots and at times is quite tame. The series raised a pretty fine standard when "No Picnic," its first release, appeared, but seems to have deteriorated since then.

"Four Wheel Brakes"

(Educational—One Reel)

THE style of comedy put over by Jerry Mandy in this Cameo is so old-fashioned and unproductive of real fun that the subject appears best suited for an audience of children. Their young minds—and not those of older and wiser fans—may find it amusing.

Besides its inadequate star are Eleanor Frederick, a newcomer with considerable charm, little Jackie Levine and Roberts Burns. Jules White directed while Dwight Warren tended to the cameras.

Jerry, street car conductor and head of a family, is shown getting in Dutch with his landlord so that he has to run out of the house in preference to being kicked out. He, Eleanor and Jackie go joy-riding in a newly-purchased roadster and of course the ride is characterized by dumb antics from groggy Jerry. The finale is reached when he unsuccessfully tries to beat a train at a grade crossing.

Not so hot, nor good, nor funny. There have been better Cameos.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"King Of The Campus"
(Universal—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS "Collegians" is different from and far in advance of the hitherto silent comedies of the same name for it has sound.

Sound demonstrates clearly in this instance how a series can be considerably pepped up even rejuvenated. Certainly, this subject, togged out as it is with effects and snappy music, possesses more appealing characteristics than its silent predecessors. This one exhibits a snappier tempo, a breezier stride. If the series of new "Collegians," the fourth by the way, holds up to the calibre of this, its first release, then Universal salesmen have a fine line of product to sell exhibitors.

With the re-opening of school there is resumed that friendly feud between Don (Eddie Phillips) and Ed (George Lewis) over June (Dorothy Gulliver) at the co-educational college of Calford. It doesn't take long before the seniors led by Don and the juniors led by Ed are clashing and they bury the hatchet temporarily at the suggestion of the coach (Hayden Stevenson) who asks them to let the push-ball game on the following day decide which of the two classes shall have the privilege of sleeping in the dormitory, the losers to sleep on the roof. When the time for the contest comes around, the juniors are losing as their leader, Ed. and others have been spirited away by the seniors during the night. But they arrive back in time to defeat the seniors and all ends happily for Ed. and his friends. Nat Ross directed.

The Movietone system is employed and on the occasion of its showing at the Universal projection room the voices, on the whole, were recorded well. The synchronized score is fine.

"The Cloud Patrol"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

THIS is another of the Sky Ranger series starring Reed Howes as Russ Farrell, air hero and crack pilot. It has an assortment of heighty air thrills and a thread of story that is colored with some adventurous incident. Exhibitors can rely on it as pleasing audience fare for it deserves that adjective.

Marjorie Daw is the heroine playing opposite Howes. The latter is thrown into an adventure in which he is pitted against the wile and craft of air villains. Somewhat after the vein of westerns, only he uses a plane instead of a horse, he pursues the villains, rescues the heroine and likewise rights wrongs. Even if the story material is thin, it holds the interest and the air scenes boost it up to a pleasing level.

"The Best Dressed Woman In the World"
(Educational—One Reel)

THAT'S a title for you, and one that the ladies can't resist. Their curiosity is bound to be awakened and for the same reason that they buy "Vogue" and the other fashion books they will be anxious to examine this reel closely to discover the creations their sisters are wearing. So it's a lively reel for the exhibitor to book, and is just the thing for a matinee where women generally predominate or for a night showing when the ladies and their husbands both go to the movies.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Shifting Scenes"
(Educational—One Reel)

THIS issue of the Hodge-Podge series from the studio of Lyman H. Howe, contains some good screen entertainment in the form of a diversified and well balanced stories of sense with nonsense after the Howe fashion. The scenes are in regular screen magazine style except that they are leavened with animation and the two and varied types of screen presentation in this instance go to make a suitable little short. —GEORGE J. REDDY.

Olive Borden, as a gypsy girl of fiery temperament, John Miljan and Josef Swickard in a climactic scene from "Eternal Women," a new Columbia feature photoplay

"A Rider of the Sierras"
(Universal—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

EDMOND COBB, directed by Ray Taylor and with Marjorie Bonner as his leading lady, is the star of this new featurette of Western happenings. Ed is a ranger and Marjorie is the daughter of a wealthy financier roughing it in the mountains.

It comes to pass that a desperado for whom Ed is searching is instrumental in bringing Marjorie back to her father when her horse throws her. However, his kindness is only momentary for he forces her and her father to mount their horses and come along to his rendezvous, probably to hold them for ransom. The ranger, who had first come to the girl's assistance when she was hurt and who was kayoed by the desperado when he took the girl back to her dad, follows the group. The villain, seeing he is followed, suddenly decides he will have to make a break for it and, hoisting the girl onto his saddle, he attempts to gallop off with her, but his horse, overburdened, cannot keep ahead of Ed's steed and when the two men come abreast the villain is thrown from his perch and pummeled by the ranger.

"Going Places"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

GEORGE DAVIS, a fine English pantomimist, is probably one of the goofiest screen performers. He can carry on as if he had not a brain in his head and his half-witted type of humor is ever so effective. This "Going Places," in which he stars, is easily one of his funniest recent vehicles.

It has a fair amount of gags which are pushed along effectively by the star, who is good in facial expression. The comedy moves along at a fast pace and it shapes up as a number equipped with a number of advantageous points—enough of them in fact to brand it "a good comedy."

"Bridle Byways"
(Pathe—One Reel)

GRANTLAND RICE reaches the chase, trotting and similar types of horseback exercise in his Sportlight focused on the world at play. The subject deals in mass movement, particularly, showing groups of riders cantering and the like. It is slower in pace than most Sportlights, but it is interesting nevertheless and is bound to provide about ten minutes of relaxation and enjoyment to audiences partial to the sport.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Smart Steppers"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

AL ST. JOHN is an old funster and one who knows all the tricks in the bag of screen humor. This vehicle he can be proud of because it is chock-ful of funny happenings and can readily be classified as a winner. You feel bound to laugh and laugh you do whether you want to or not. Stephen Roberts directed and he strongly reinforces a conviction that he is one of the best of Educational's megaphone wielders.

Al is first seen as a soda store clerk, and out of this job arise many possibilities for laughter. Lloyd, Tryon, Hamilton and other comedians have utilized the soda-clerk as a means for eliciting laughs and St. John also gets over some chortles with his gay goofiness. He gets fired by the boss who tells the girl demonstrating the wonders of bunion plaster to hustle up or she'll joint Al, too. So with a hammer Al drums or rather bangs up business on the sore toes and other nether extremities of various pedestrians with the result that the store where the girl works is the center of a furious throng. It is all very good fun.

"Auntie's Mistake"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

WITH this release Dorothy Devore lags behind as a funster. It is a tepid affair and even when striving mightiest to be funny it only reaches about a lukewarm intensity. The gags could be better. For one thing, they couldn't be any worse. It's too bad to see Miss Devore trying to carry the burden of a gagless yarn. Although labeled "comedy," this one is misleading. Charles Lamont directed, but he has demonstrated that when given the material to work with he can do much better. And so can Dorothy.

"The Under Dog"
(Pathe—One Reel)

THE staff of the Terry studio turned out a lemon when they released this Aesop. It is way below the standard of cartoon entertainment and to this spectator it seemed poor all the way through, in the execution and design of its drawings, its humor and the slipshod calibre apparent throughout. It is true that the cartoon, generally, is just light entertainment and is used primarily as an introductory short on a program; nevertheless, the bulk of them have had considerable care expended upon them. This one looks like a rush job and one that's nothing to be proud of.—RAYMOND GANLY.

George LeMaire and Louis Simon indulge in some uproarious comedy in Pathe's new talkie comedy, "At the Dentist's," which LeMaire produced

"Summer Saps"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

LUPINO LANE steps out with another different screen comedy and one boasting many artistic and subtle flashes of humor. It is an unusual type of comedy, distinct from the Roach and Sennett standards, and similar schools of screen fun, and individually reflecting Lane's own brand of entertainment. Some of the comedy is sly, other bits broadly painted, and wittily put. Although it is slow in pace, and that because of the mood of the character it portrays, it is always entertaining.

Lane is practically marooned in a summer hotel and one who has ever been housed in such a place with a rain pelting outside and everything inside seemingly repellent can sympathize with him. His nerves are in a ragged state and to add to his discomforture there are a nagging wife, a squalling child and in his immediate neighborhood a demon saxophone player. Quite a chamber of horrors! Against this background Lane gives vent to some mighty clever comedy.

"Fishing Fools"
(Universal—One Reel)

SOUND fits a cartoon like the proverbial rubber glove, and, if these joking creations in black and white were amusing before the sound era, they are doubly so now. This Oswald is one of the best we've seen. It is greatly heightened in effectiveness by amusing sound interpolations.

The cartoon shows Oswald fishing. He is a poor hand at the game for nary a fish does he catch. Finally he casts his rod away in disgust, and resorts to strategy. He plays phonograph records of Delilah's song and similar music and an entranced fish begins to to flit back and forth over the sands in the rhythms of the dance. This is an amusing scene, and the fun is maintained when Oswald, his phonograph horn smashed, used his tail as a needle and his mouth as an amplifier for the reproduction of the music.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Magic"
(Universal-Stern—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS Buster Brown comedy won't galvanize them into uproarious laughter. It caters mainly to juvenile minds and is just program fare. Tige, the clever canine, gives about the best performance in it when all is said and done. Samuel Newfield is chalked up with the direction.

Buster, Mary Jane and Tige spoil the well laid plans of a couple of magicians entertaining at a house party. Tige shows up their foibles so that they are disgraced before the gathering. A small riot results when the birds used by the magicians run about the room, creating a hurricane of feathers and driving the guests from their chairs.

"Husbands Must Play"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

THE Lupino family is represented on the screen not only by Lupino Lane, but by another talented artist who happens to be a brother of the former Ziegfeld star. Wallace Lupino is his name and ever so often he performs in the Lupino duets; that is, he assists Lane as the principal supporting player in the Lane burlesques. He has starred in solo roles for Educational before and in this, "A Mermaid," he again essays the leading part.

The comedy is a successful affair, for its possesses laughs in abundance, a gentle and smooth brand of humor intermingling with slapstick, and putting forth a capable characterization by Wallace. After a while he is sure to create a following of his own and this comedy will do its bit to make that come about.

"Pathe Review No. 14"
(Pathe—One Reel)

TERRY RAMSEY, like Ray Long, editor of the Cosmopolitan Magazine, with the wise belief that with the descent of Cal Coolidge from the White House to plain Mr. Citizen he makes good copy for readers and movie fans, has made from the newsreel shots of the former president an interesting collection. Cal in various poses—yes, even with the spurs and cowboy regalia with which he startled an unsuspecting nation while sojourning in the Black Hills—is good copy for the camera as well as the headlines. The Review also offers shots of flowers blossoming and the cavalry of Bangkok's monarch. All good screen magazine material.—RAYMOND GANLY.

Educational Comediennes

Two comediennes have the featured part in "Delicious and Refreshing," a new Educational-Cameo comedy. They are Adrienne Dore and Tania Akron.

"Ginger Snaps"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

THIS "Big Boy" does not make the high grade achieved by other issues of the Juvenile series of comedies. But that is not the youngster's fault. All complaints can be laid at the door of the story, for it is not strong enough, or so it appeared to this reviewer, to keep effervescing for the whole of two reels.

As is always the case with "Big Boy," Charles Lamont coached the youthful comedian. Really, the kid is more than a comic because he can at times put over some very fine pathos and in doing so he rises far above the category of comedian. He is, as has been said innumerable times before, talented. But his talent could have been put to better advantage. "Ginger Snaps" is just a weak sister in a good series of shorts. All stars sooner or later are handed stories that do not fit in with their other fine contributions.

"Red Romance"
(Universal—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

GEORGE CHANDLER appears in a better-than-average two-reeler from the Tenderfoot Thriller series of Westernettes. This one was directed by Walter Fabian and contains a fairly interesting story and suitable acting from its principal.

George is supposed to be an Eastern aesthete who revels in the great open spaces and fondly believes that the bad old days of the West still exist. When he is told that there are no more bandits hiding in the chaparral, he is tempted to pack up and go East. But just as he is about to carry out this decision, the father of the girl he loves is kidnapped by an escaped jailbird and George (who can be quite heroic at times), jumps astride a horse and dashes to the rescue. After capturing the villain, he and the girl exchange love-sick glances until the final fadeout.

"The Cop's Bride"
(Pathe—One Reel)

CARTOONIST PAUL TERRY presents some more of the Aesop high jinks, but not as successfully as on some former occasions. Turning out 52 of these animated creations is no easy job, as anyone could guess, but it often happens that humor suffers from this prolificacy in output. This opus from Terry's portfolio is about an average affair.

Old Al, passionately fond of Kitty Kat, calls on Waffles, a motorcycle cop, to rescue her when she is kidnapped by gangland. Waffles goes into the thugs' stronghold, battles them, and after the explosion that results in the gunplay and fighting, rescues her from the ruins of the wrecked house.

One happy feature of this Aesop is that for once the piece ends without the always-to-be-expected chase down the road, an old stand-by which the Terryites have so often used that it is worn thin.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"The Night Watch"
(Universal—One Reel)

THIS is one of the "Horace in Hollywood" series of one-reelers with which Universal utilizes sets for various feature productions as a background for comedy trivialities. Arthur Lake, young, sincere but often inadequate as a comedian, stars with more or less success. It is really just a fair laugh number. Doran Cox is credited with the direction.

Horace, his mind aflame with medieval romance, falls asleep on a movie set and awakens to find himself the melodramatic center of a plot. He rescues a maiden from a pair of bravos, besting them with the swords and proving his superiority in a dashing manner. He awakens to find that it is all a phantasmagoria and that instead of buffeting the villains he is really cuffing an angry movie set janitor.—RAYMOND GANLY.

MANAGER'S ROUND TABLE CLUB

CHARLES E. LEWIS Chairman and Editor

A National Association of Theatre Managers Meeting in

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Every Week—for Mutual Benefit and Progress

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

How Far Is Distance?

TALK about your funny questions, why not tackle the one at the head of this story and see how you figure it out. But after you are through we have our answer all ready for you.

As far as the Club is concerned there is no distance where the linking together of our large membership is concerned. You are as close to your brother members as your nearest mail box, and thereby hangs the tale of this great brotherhood of showmen. If it were only possible to make an accurate check-up, we have no doubt that the outcome would emphatically show that hundreds of the members have become intimate friends and correspondents through the medium of their membership and because they have started and maintained a contact, via the mail, with the friends they have thus created.

That is what we so often refer to as "Inter-communication," the secret of the success of the Managers' Round Table Club. Perhaps you have not tried this new method of making friends in different parts of the country, or the whole world for that matter, by writing to them about some particular item that you read on these Club pages. To ask them for a copy of their house program. To ask for more details about some exploitation campaign you have read about, or a hundred other good reasons. Well if you haven't you are missing out on a great thing, and something that may someday mean a whole lot to you.

Take the convention up at Cedar Point, Ohio, last summer, many of the managers attending were heard to ask each other whether they belonged to the Round Table Club, new friendships were started and to this day they are just as close as at that time because they keep up their contact thru the mail.

We don't care which nationally famous theatre executive you select in this country; but were you to ask him what kind of managers he favors he would no doubt, instantly reply, "The man who watches what the other fellow is doing." And so to those hundreds of members and readers of the Managers' Round Table Club who keep in touch with their brother members either through their Chairman, or direct, we say: "You are on the right track to great success and achievement in the theatrical industry."

What thrill is there greater than to create and execute a successful campaign on some particular attraction than to pass it on for the benefit of those who can possibly make use of such an idea? What greater confidence in your own ability is there than to tell other showmen, like yourself, how you cater to your public, how you offer them more than just a show, how you trained your staff until it is the talk of your town?

By virtue of the same argument: isn't it great to be able to read how Manager So and So engineered his advertising campaign on a certain picture and then sit down and apply his original idea to suit your own theatre and community? Like all good rules it works both ways, but you are given every possible aid to encourage such inter-communication. We open up the pages of this Club in the Motion Picture News every week where you can tell the whole darned world how you do things, where you can ask any kind of a question and then know that it is going to be read by hundreds of men in the same position that you are in.

Organization of Regional Chairmen Is Now Underway

The great success of the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB has prompted us to start a campaign of expansion, and the first move was to organize and appoint Chairmen for the Regional Membership Committees. The purpose of these committees is to create a closer contact between the members coming within a selected zone and the Chairman of the Membership Committee for that zone.

The first of the members to accept such appointments were: Jack O'Connell of the Vita-Temple Theatre in Toledo, Ohio, whose committee zone covers Northern Ohio and Michigan. The exact boundaries of the zones will be set forth in detail in an early issue. W. E. Belcher, of Schine's Riviera Theatre in Rochester, who will cover the upper part of New York State north of Albany. W. A. Levey of the Beacon Theatre in Port Washington, L. I., will head the committee for Long Island. For the Porto Rico (foreign) zone, we have received the acceptance of Lorenzo Gelabert of the San Jose Theatre in San Juan. He intends to establish immediate contact with over 80 theatre managers in his zone and writes with enthusiasm to say that he is going to line up every one of them for the CLUB membership rolls. A spirit that meets with the hearty approval of every CLUB member.

Additional Regional Chairmen will be announced from week to week until the entire country has been mapped out into zones. From that point each Chairman will start his contacts with all members coming within his section. The next moves will be of great interest to every member of the CLUB and if you are looking for plenty of happy news, then watch the CLUB pages from now on. We won't stop until every living showman is in the CLUB or is wishing he were.

Lloyd Sinclair Is On The Alert For Patron's Good Will

Lloyd Sinclair's theatre experience covers so long a period of years that his advice and ideas are more than worthy of passing attention. Lloyd "keeps the pot boiling" in Minneapolis at the New Southern Theatre, with many novel stunts, all tending to keep his clientele alert for news from his theatre. This latest suggestion from him is one that will go a long ways towards cementing good relations between theatre and patron.

He secures through many different ways, the date of birth of patrons on his mailing list and a few days previous to their birthday sends them the following letter with a complimentary pass:

Dear Friend:

We take this means to extend to you our sincere wishes for many happy returns of this, your birthday.

Accept the enclosed small gift with our compliments, and our earnest hope that you will thoroughly enjoy the entertainment it entitles you to attend.

Yours most sincerely,
(Theatre name)

Not bad, is it boys? Well, see if you can pull the same gag in your own town. Or if you want more details, write direct to Mr. Sinclair at the New Southern Theatre, Washington at Cedar Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Trumble Attracts Crowds on "Wolf" Up In Boston, Mass.

An attractive and inexpensive stunt that brought plenty of business and comment from local theatre goers was cleverly put over by Manager James P. Trumble of the Scollay Square Theatre in Boston when he ran "The Wolf of Wall Street." This picture offers many different methods of exploitation, but we singled out this particular one because it was so well done. You will note on the photo that Mr. Trumble carried the Stock Exchange idea right through his stunt by erecting a blackboard and ticker at the theatre entrance and had a boy chalking up the quotations as they came over the ticker. This stunt was used for a full week prior to the opening of the picture and the ticker was installed and serviced by Western Union free of charge. It certainly proved itself a crowd puller.

This is just different enough to warrant our passing it on to the members of the CLUB who expect to run this picture and the fact that you run it silent or with sound does not in any way affect the method which Trumble used. Even if a ticker were not available, you could easily fake up something to cover this phase, so set this one aside for use when you need it.

Conditions on the stock market today are known the world over and you will hardly find a town or hamlet, let alone a fair sized city, where these conditions are not well known. Now is the time to cash in on such a topic so if you are playing "Wolf" in the immediate future, go out after it as much as you can and don't stint, because it IS a corking picture.

A. H. Schwartz Returns From His Southern Vacation

A. H. Schwartz, head of the Century Circuit in Brooklyn and Long Island, and rated as one of the finest of the smaller chains in the country, just returned from an extended trip in the south where while engaged in one of his favorite pastimes, fishing, he landed a 50-pound beauty which he is having mounted and will recall some of the happy times he spent down in Florida.

Work on the newest of the Schwartz Chain at Sheepshead Bay, Brooklyn, is progressing rapidly and will no doubt open this fall as another achievement of this great circuit. Additional houses are contemplated for Rockville Centre and Baldwin On Long Island. When these are completed the Schwartz Chain will exceed thirty houses in and around the Metropolitan district. The Sheepshead Bay house will specialize in the presentation of "sound" pictures and special attention is being given to this angle in the construction of the house. It will be modernistic in design and in keeping with the beauty of the other houses on the circuit. We will try to secure a picture of the theatre front for publication in the near future. But we can honestly say that it will be a beautiful house.

Leonard Freund's "All Girl" Show Surprised Them

This little story about Leonard Freund's "All Girl" show stunt will just serve as a means of introducing him to the other CLUB members so that they will all know who he is. Leonard is one of those boys who actually "climbed the ladder" through his own efforts and ability. Starting some years back as a sort of head usher, he gradually worked his way up until now he is the manager of the well-known Albemarle Theatre of the Schwartz Circuit in Brooklyn. Personally knowing him over a period of years qualifies me to say that he is a darned good manager and we hope to see him reach great heights in the business.

Now to get back to his "All Girl" stunt. We will let him tell it to you in his own way—"Of the many stunts and contests that I have pulled, I look back with pride to the "Bathing Beauty Frolic" made up entirely of local girls that had a little talent, such as singing, whistling, dancing, and those that could play musical instruments. This Frolic was in the making for three weeks, presents being offered by naborhood merchants; tie-ups were made for bathing apparel window displays and the theatre was getting a lot of free publicity. Merchants were giving 100 per cent co-operation, applications from entries were coming in fast, I was busy with rehearsing and eliminating besides giving the Frolic an "airtight" publicity campaign. Now for the "pride" part—the date set for this "Frolic" was Thursday evening, the second day of the film's run and it was only a fair program picture, weather was not the kind that brings good business, and it was the opening date for a popular amusement park in the city. Some of the boys in the "know" smiled a little and said 'Well, well, we'll see!' But I knew my theatre, my community, my patrons and my attraction. Result—Sold out completely. We hung them from the chandeliers, so to speak, breaking all previous records for the theatre." So there you have Leonard's own story about the "Frolic" and since we are reaching the time of the year when such stunts are, not only in order, but very profitable, it would do well to keep this handy for your own use with such revisions as will suit your own locality. Let's hear some more from you, and very soon, Freund.

Foreign Countries Are Adopting Our American Methods

The idea of printing pictures here was certainly not to tell you what you should do with a picture that you probably played last season, but it's exact purpose was to just let you know that even way off in Bombay, in what they call the Cinema Precious, they ballyhooed "The Blood Ship" in the good old American manner, in fact it was crude enough to be credited to a lot of theatres that I could mention — but won't. At any rate, it's a good piece of work and whoever did get behind it must have been on the east side of New York at some stage of his life. Wow, how they did bally 'em in that community in the old days. Witness the M. & S. Circuit today. I think it was started on a ballyhoo, and never quite got over it. Well, maybe this story and the pictures will be the means of getting some more stuff from the Near (or Far) East. We hope so.

Theatre Programs Should Be Made Very Attractive

The programs selected this week for showing on the CLUB pages are varied types and popular in their respective communities. House organs differ in make-up according to either the chain theatre management's policy, or the independent's ideas on what a theatre program should be.

The one used last week was distinctly of the "announcing" type of program and did not give any space to readers or theatre gossip of any kind. For its purpose it was well laid out. Now we show another kind which gives plenty of space to theatre news, stories of the stars and the pictures and still plays up the programs of the current and coming weeks.

The Olympia Theatre program is made up by Milton J. Gorson, manager of the house for the Brecher Circuit and is very attractive from many angles. The current week's attractions are followed by a little chatter about the picture and tends to create interest in each production.

The Metro Theatre program prefers the use of cuts on the different attractions and the use of plenty of black makes much of it stand out from the small type used for news in the weekly.

If you have not already done so, kindly put the CLUB on your regular mailing list and see that we get a copy regularly. We want to show off these different programs to the other members so that they might get some ideas to incorporate into their own. The same applies to you. You may find much of interest that you could use.

Allerton Is Using Marquee Cut-Outs To Attract Crowds

Still harping on the cut-out and marquee dressing, brings to light the use of large and attractive cut-outs now becoming very popular up in the Allerton Theatre in the Bronx, N. Y. Sydney Oshrin, manager of the house, and a peppy individual at that (we ought to know 'cause he drops in to see us) gets these cut-outs at a very low cost by arranging to use them after some of the larger playhouses up in his part of the city. The two pictured here show the layout for "Interference" and "Abie's Irish Rose" and both these pictures played to good business during their runs at the Allerton Theatre.

Blair & Hitchcock Knocking 'Em Dead Out In Seattle

Bob Blair, house manager and Eddie Hitchcock, publicity director of the Seattle Theatre in Seattle, Washington, engineered and executed one of the finest campaigns ever brought to our attention recently when they put over "The Canary Murder Case."

Their first step was the preparation of a simple trailer which read—"Who Killed The Canary?". This strip was inserted between every film subject for over two weeks before the showing. In this way public interest was aroused several weeks before the announcement of the film's coming to the theatre. Similar wording was used in the newspapers a week in advance of the showing in a two column by two inch teaser ad.

However, the big smash of the entire campaign was the distribution of a newspaper front page herald with the flaring headline—"ACTRESS MURDERED" and the balance of the sheet representing a spectacular newspaper story of the "Canary's death." The whole idea was executed with the idea of creating plenty of talk and that it succeeded is a surprise to no one. Such campaign must meet with some measure of success when handled as this one was.

During the run of the picture the mystery and murder angle was not lost sight of, as the ad. reproduced herewith will show. You will note the "crime angle" of this ad, and the "Cross Marks the Spot" which were played up prominently in both papers and house display.

This is the reproduction of the front page throwaway used by Blair & Hitchcock in their big exploitation campaign on "The Canary Murder Case" when that picture played Seattle Theatre in Seattle, Wash.

The flaring headline would attract plenty of attention the moment it hits the eye and the balance of the copy has been set so as to make you want to read it all.

On news-print it is by no means an expensive herald.

While a campaign of this type is well suited for the larger cities, it could, with a little thought and planning, be reduced and revised to meet any local smaller city condition. We heartily recommend it to members and readers of the CLUB. More about Blair-Hitchcock-Seattle in the near future.

Hall Creates Fine Front Display In Baton Rouge, La.

Manager W. H. Hall of the Columbia Theatre in Baton Rouge, La., created quickly an attractive front setting on "The Barker" as you will note in the picture. The atmosphere of the carnival was carried out and in addition he used an electrola behind the cut-out in the center of the setting showing, Princess Kelina and "The Barker." The whole idea started a lot of talk down in Baton Rouge and business at the B. O. was perfect, according to Mr. Hall.

Theatres large and small, all over the country are going in strong for atmospheric fronts and banners of some sort and its appeal must be greater than ever since we got so much favorable comment regarding this type of exploitation from our readers. I think it would be a great idea to forget that "Class" distinction which we used to talk a lot about when it came to classifying theatres, and get down to brass tacks. If a front ballyhoo or setting will bring the customers to the box office, then the devil with the "class" angle. It doesn't cheapen any theatre in my estimation. What say?

Send us some more pictures, W. H., we always like to show off our various member's achievements.

"Action" Cut-Outs A Great Asset In These Fast Times

Here's a hot one right off the griddle when it comes to an advance tip on a snappy lobby display for your theatre. This one is on "Syncopation," RKO's newest "talkie, singer, and whatnot." This display was originated and used by the Mainstreet Theatre in Kansas City, Mo. (Seem's to me that K. C. is breaking into a lot of space lately) and the whole stunt is this: If you are fortunate enough to have someone who can make it up it's a darn good display, if not, well you're not exactly out o' luck, but you're not far from it. But passing that up for a moment brings to light the fact that this circular section is made to revolve with the aid of a small motor mounted on the rear with pulley, etc. Properly lighted, possibly with a changing color spot or two should make this especially attractive and with some tinsel thrown on it while the paint is still wet, "hot dorgs," it would pull their eyes like a magnet.

But since the picture will not hit most of your towns for a few weeks, you can put the old thinker to work and figure out how you can best use the idea in your theatre.

Montague Salmon's Quick Thinking Is B. O. Booster

When a theatre manager is alert to every move that is going on about him, and when he is quick to take advantage of every opportunity to capitalize for his theatre something new or novel, then that manager has one of the most important qualifications for his job Rather a lengthy way to lead up to Montague Salmon's rapid-fire idea of cashing in on his opposition's ballyhoo. The other house was playing a minstrel show and, of course, the street parade and band stunt was being pulled every day, and right through the main business section of the town. Salmon had a truck fixed up with twenty-four sheets on "Wolf of Wall Street" and altogether the stunt looked rather attractive. On the inside of the truck he placed a large bell which was rung at frequent intervals to attract attention from those who might not see the truck. Letting the truck tarry a while after the minstrel band had passed, he had his truck follow the band for the entire parade. Many, without a doubt, seeing this parade must have thought it was for the purpose of attracting attention to the "Wall Street" picture and so, without all the expense of hiring a band etc., he had a corking good ballyhoo, due entirely to his ability to think quick. Montague Salmon, by the way, is an old timer in the CLUB having joined when he was out on the Pacific Coast, and he is now directing the Publix Rialto Theatre in Macon, Ga. Here's hoping we hear some more about Montague.

Goldquist Wants Cleaner Comedies In The Future

Frank C. Goldquist, manager of the Web Theatre in Savanna, Ill., has been a regular contributor to the CLUB columns ever since he joined us some time ago. Frank can always be counted on to pass out some good sound common sense and his latest offering is very timely due to the number of letters received on this same subject from other parts of the country. This time he brings up the question about "Smut" comedies and his point is well taken. Says Goldquist: "When are we going to be allowed to cease offending our patrons by not having every comedian at some stage of the comedy lose his pants? They have been doing this for quite a while and are still at it." Well, Frank, perhaps some "mighty" power in the short subject field will see this little story and keep it in mind when passing on some material for his product. But it is a fact, and I have had the same experience—that many parents object to having their youngsters see such stuff in picture houses, especially where the kiddies are regular patrons. Since we have always preached to members and readers alike, that they should keep their shows as clean as possible and above such objections, we take pleasure in stressing the point.

Up-To-The-Minute News About Our Members & Readers

Frank S. Mickley, formerly of the Earle Theatre in Allentown, has resigned from that theatre to take full charge of the Cameo in the same city. Mickley has always been a regular and active member of the CLUB and now with greater possibilities for the expansion of his ideas and more leeway to work, we should get some fine "stuff" from him. We all have our eyes on you, Frank.

Practically every member of the Club is now centering his interest on the advertising Survey being sponsored by the Club. In the event that you have not received your post cards, on which to make your report, you can use the form which will be found on one of the Club pages.

R. W. Sykes, owner of the King Theatre in Troy N. Y., pulled a fast one when he played up in his advertising the fact that his was the only theatre in Troy showing "Silent Pictures." Why not. It's a good angle.

C. Floyd Hopkins, head of the Wilmer & Vincent Theatres in Harrisburg, collected more than a thousand books on a local campaign to establish libraries for seamen on American Ships. The stunt was a "Book Matinee" in conjunction with Dick Barthelmess in "Scarlet Seas." A good publicity idea and for a mighty worthy cause. A case where two and two makes more than four.

H. Jernberg, manager of the Province Theatre in Winnipeg, Canada, pulled an odd one when he ran Tom Mix in "The Lone Star Ranger" and boldly announced the fact that it was four years old. How's that for telling 'em the truth and cashing in on the statement. Another one he put over was "Danger Street" against the opposition of two sound theatres. His ad read: "Silent as far as music and sound are concerned—but the greatest thriller ever presented." But Jernberg has pulled a lot of "fast" ones in the past and will probably continue to pull them in the future. Right, Jernberg?

George B. Peck, manager of the Victory Theatre in Tampa earned a lot of laughs, publicity and business when he ballyhooed "The Carnation Kid" by using a regulation hearse with banners on each side reading—"This man laughed himself to death watching Douglas McLean in 'The Carnation Kid.'" Not bad, George, but how about some of the other stunts you put over down in Tampa?

The State Theatre in Louisville, Ky., reached the front page recently when they invited 850 carriers of the Courier-Journal to the theatre. In addition to the story they also had a corking picture in conjunction with the story.

The Circle Theatre in Indianapolis, Ind., made all their patrons movie critics when they asked for 200 word criticisms on "Weary River." The idea went over rather big and resulted in a lot of letters from the patrons giving their views of the picture.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Meet Some More New Members!

MERTON L. OSBORNE of the Winter Garden Theatre, in Fredonia, N. Y., is now on the jump preparing for sound pictures, but, while they are putting in the equipment, there is no reason why Mert. can't drop us a line and give us some of the "dirt" about Fredonia and the show game up there. Come on, Mert., get busy and become a "regular" with the other boys. They want to know you better.

FRANCIS A. CASA, handles the Riant Theatre, in Conshohocken, Pa., and it is from towns of the size of Conshohocken that we want to know how they sell the picture to the public. There is no more interesting reading than that furnished by members, for members, situated in the average smaller city and town. Francis has had enough experience to be well fitted for the subject. Come on, Fran.

ROY H. BROWN, is the hustling manager of the Blank-Rialto Theatre in Boone, Ia., and with a house devoted solely to sound we should hear early and often just how Roy puts 'em over in Boone. Come on, Roy, let's have a good little stunt or two for a starter, sort of just to get acquainted.

THOMAS DI LORENZO, is still another Long Island showman to join the Club, and we have every reason to suspect that Tom can deliver some darned interesting stuff for the benefit of his brother members. The Calderone Circuit and the Valley Stream Theatre are his pet hobbies right now, so better keep us informed about the theatre game out on Long Island.

CHARLES D. CARROLL, manager of the Senator Theatre, in Oakland, Cal., is another live-wire westerner to get into the Club line-up. But he is no stranger to your Chairman as I know several good things about him from other coast members. Still I would like to hear how he handles his big West Coast house. What do you say, Charlie?

CHARLES D. MERVIS, manager of the Hippodrome and Temple Theatres, in Newport, Kentucky, and those two enterprising houses keep him well on the jump. But not so busy that he will not be able to write often to keep us acquainted with how he runs those houses and sells the picture and show to the public. Can we hear from you soon, Charlie? Atta boy!

CHARLES P. GILMORE, with all modesty we must admit that Charlie's are becoming quite popular in the Club; Gilmore makes about the ninety-fifth one so far. But if he happens to be as active as a lot of the other Charlies, then we will most certainly welcome him with three cheers. How about a photo and a little story that would sort of introduce you more directly to the other members? They all want to know you more intimately.

WILLIAM J. DALY, brother members, is the manager of the Fox Uptown Theatre, in Milwaukee, Wisc., and we are glad to welcome you into the Club, Bill. Let us hope you will follow the example of our other midwestern members, and send us something that might be of interest to other showmen. We would also like to have your photo by return mail. We are watching the mail bag from now on.

SIDNEY JACOBS, manager of the Lansdowne Theatre, in Lansdowne, Pa., a 2,000 seater on the Stanley Circuit playing sound pictures, and for that reason Sidney should make a perfect member. We are all interested in sound right now and to learn how Jacobs puts them over in his town will be just the thing for these Club pages. How about it, Sidney? Can we count on you?

NOTE: These are just a few of the many new members of the Club, others will appear in succeeding issues. Members who have forwarded their applications are requested to give us time to reach their names.

WILL YOU BE NEXT??

HARRY D. STEARN, runs the Rialto Theatre, in Allentown, Pa., for the Wilmer & Vincent outfit, and should be well qualified to contribute some peppy news for the benefit of his brother members. Particularly on the subject of sound. Maybe, Harry, you can find a few moments to give me some idea how you handle the sound equipment in your house, that's a subject on which we receive many letters. Thanks in advance, old scout, but do it soon.

J. H. WEBSTER, whose business address is the Carolina Theatre, in Elizabeth City, N. C., is another southern member to hop aboard the Good Ship of NEWS and now he is a full-fledged Round Table Clubber. J. H., what are the chances of getting a little story from you about how you put the picture over in Elizabeth City?

WALTER E. WOODWARD, another Pennsylvania showman, hails from the Park Theatre, in Philly, and since this is another Vitaphone house, we are expecting lots of good news from Walter telling the members all about talkies and how to sell them. Can we expect your photo and a story soon? That's the spirit.

* * *

GEORGE E. WILLIAMS, is the busy manager of the Regent and Avon Theatres, in Syracuse, N. Y., and from the stories we have heard about that city, we would not be surprised to get some mighty fine letters from George. We would also like to show off his photo to the other members, that is if he will send it on to me. What say, George? Let's hear from you early and often.

IRVING P. ALEXANDER, manages the Rivoli Theatre, in Roxbury, Mass., for the big Netoco outfit, of Boston, and with all the activity taking place on that circuit we shouldn't wonder that Irving will become a regular active member. Photo, stories and letters are what we are looking for, so get busy, Alex.

DICK BRADLEY, is the directing head of the Palace in Antigo, Wisc., and since we are in need of some stories from members who run combination houses, we must insist that Dick favor us with a little letter on what kind of vaudeville he recommends for the average house in cities of his own size. Okay?

* * *

E. A. McAULIFFE, is the man who guides the destinies of the Strand and Grand Theatres, in Bellefontaine, Ohio, a town that we missed on our trip last summer, but we won't pass it up next time. E. A., we would all like to hear a little something from you about the show business in your section of the country, so please favor us with an early letter so we can all become better acquainted with you.

What Is A Record Smasher?

Does a record smashing picture contain some secret, mysterious element that makes it click grosses far beyond the average picture?

Is it star, story, direction, titles, novelty, heart interest, melo-drama, comedy, spectacle, thrills, or all of these in combination, plus real showmanship?

Adoption Of Sound In Ia. Circles Widespread

A GREAT many Iowa exhibitors are showing interest in sound pictures this spring, and many are getting their installations in this week. The Hidreth theatre at Charles City and the Casino at Sac City are installing sound this week, while the Garden at Guthrie Centre is now showing talking pictures. At Fort Dodge, the Plaza theatre is installing the Dramaphone, and at LeMars the Film-o-Fone has been installed at the Royal. At the Neu at Carroll the Columbia portable machine has been making a good showing. The Empress at Shenandoah has installed the Han-a-Phone.

The theatre at Wilton Junction, Ia., has been reopened and has been operated for the past two months by Mr. Robertson, who formerly had the theatre at Lohrville, Ia.

Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson, of the Princess theatre at Boone, Ia., called at the "U" office last week. They are making plans for wiring their house for sound.

John Waller, of the Lyric theatre at Osceola, Ia., reports that he is figuring on installing sound equipment.

Mr. Jacobs, who has had the Palace theatre at Burlington, Ia., for a number of years, sold out last week. The theatre was bought by Harry Weinberg, head of Commonwealth Theatres.

Ralph Pratt this week concluded the installation of a sound equipment at his theatre, the Fox, at Washington, Ia.

Another theatre installing sound equipment is the Granada at Webster City, which is owned by Stephens and Puffer.

Visitors at the Paramount office, Des Moines, were S. R. Peake, of the Pastime theatre at Maquoketa, who reports that he is interested in sound equipment for his theatre; F. W. Curtis, of the Peoples theatre at Redfield, and A. R. Cramer, of the Princess at Mt. Ayr.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Graham, of the Grand at Knoxville, Ia., are leaving soon for a vacation trip in California.

RKO entertained among visitors last week W. L. Dixon, of the Temple theatre at Mt. Pleasant, Ia.; F. W. Wolcott, of the Grand at Eldora, and W. C. Treloar of the Treloar at Ogden, Ia.

The Empress at Grundy Center, Ia., closed temporarily during bad weather.

The business men of Franhamville, Iowa, are backing a free movie which is given twice a week.

The American Legion Post at Amelia, Iowa, are interested in the opening of another theatre there and have been negotiating with J. C. Eding in regard to managing the house.

Work of preparing the Armory Theatre, a new house over which Messrs. Bluechel and Lamon preside, is progressing steadily. Men are now doing the decorating, both the exterior and interior of the house. While the management does not feel that the work has progressed enough to definitely set an opening date they hope to announce the first show around the first of April.

Mrs. Joe Ayerly, owner of the building housing the Strand at Newton, Ia., took over the theatre this week and secured Fred Wayt to act as her manager.

Walter Waldorf, of Waldorf & Johnson, exhibitors at Estherville and Atlantic, was in Des Moines last week.

Sound Installations in Portland, Ore. Area

WITH the installation of Photophone at Tebbett's Oriental on March 15th, all first run houses in Portland have gone "sound and talkie." Also a number of the suburban houses have fallen into line.

Pacent reproducer installations have been made in the Granada theatre, Portland, and also Granada theatre, Camas, Wash. The Venetian theatre at Hillsboro, Ore., will shortly install a device.

Bill Morelan, of Cottage Grove, Ore., has installed Western Electric sound equipment, and the house at LaGrande, Ore., will be similarly equipped in April.

Guy Matthews and Jim Moran have opened their new Granada theatre at The Dalles, March 15th. It is equipped for sound productions.

Joe Moore, of the Lyric theatre, Butte, Mont., has also taken over the Orpheum theatre, and will install Western Electric sound equipment in July.

Bob Hill, formerly head of Warner Bros., Portland, has been advanced to manager of the Seattle office.

Paul De Mourdant, formerly manager of the American and later the Ansonia theatre at Butte, has opened the Gaiety theatre at Idaho Falls, Ida.

Marc K. Bowman has returned to Portland and will be publicity director of Fox Broadway and Hollywood theatres, and will again be associated with Manager Floyd Maxwell. Bart Wheeler will be transferred to San Francisco to direct publicity for Fox.

A new branch manager was appointed this week for the Warner Bros. exchange in Portland, Sam E. Morris, vice-president of the company, announcing that A. H. Huot has been placed in charge.

3 Theatres Sold In New England District

THE Circle, at Pawtucket, R. I., has been sold by E. Markel to Ernest E. Bettez.

The Scenic theatre, at Oakland Beach, has been sold to Albert J. Lambert to A. H. Lambert.

The Colonial theatre, at Belfast, Me., a Publix theatre, has been sold to Sam Kurson.

The Porter Square theatre in Cambridge, operated by J. Rednick and E. Markel, has been sold to B. Pearlman and P. Markel.

The new Franklin, at Springfield, Mass., with about 900 seats, was opened by Frank Lombard last week.

The Town Hall, at Hopkinton, Mass., has been closed.

The Strand at Fitchburg is closed indefinitely.

The Lancaster, in Boston, is installing Photophone equipment. The Universal theatre, at Cambridge, opens March 31st with Photophone, and the Keith Memorial, Boston, will open about the same time with Photophone equipment. The Keith theatres at Lowell and Portland, Me., are installing sound equipment.

It is understood that Nat Hockburn, who operates the Hingham, Millville and Scituate theatres, is negotiating for the Shea theatres at Valley Falls, R. I., operated by Joe Shea.

The Capitol theatre, at Arlington, is to install Vitaphone and Movietone equipment.

The Medford theatre, at Medford, opens with Vitaphone and Movietone equipment next Monday.

The site of the new theatre at Manchester, N. H., is being cleared for the new 2,200-seat theatre to be erected by the States Theatres, Inc.

Phonofilm equipment is being installed in the Auburn theatre, at Auburn, Me.; Star, at Concord, N. H.; Capitol, at Lynn; Bijou, at Springfield; Park, at Lebanon, N. H.; Colonial, at Portsmouth, N. H.; Notre Dame, at Manchester; Conn and Metropolitan, at Leominster.

George J. Elmore, who has been manager for the Strand theatre, at Westfield, is now managing the Victory theatre at Holyoke. He is succeeded at Westfield by Israel Shancupp.

Netoco Theatres have made several changes in managers. James Wall goes from the Regent, at Norfolk Downs, to the Central Square, Waltham. Harold Gordon goes from the Central Square to the new Embassy as assistant manager. J. J. McDermott, acting manager of the Jamaica, goes to the Regent at Norfolk Downs. George Kinnaley goes to manage the new Seville in East Boston, and Max Nayor has been made manager at the Globe.

San Diego Houses Unaffected By Flu

DWIGHT L. HILL, manager of the San Diego houses of the National theatre chain, recently addressed the monthly luncheon of the San Diego County Federation of Women's Clubs on "Talkies, or Sound Pictures."

The flu epidemic which worked havoc on motion picture houses in many other places made but little change in the operation of the San Diego theatres. For a few days only children were kept away from the shows.

Milwaukee Theatre Is Mysteriously Bombed

THE Whitehouse, Milwaukee, managed by Otto Meister, was the scene of an attempted bombing on Sunday night. A stick of dynamite was set against the side of the building. The mystery remains unsolved. Damage to the theatre was slight.

Nate Blumberg has been appointed Midwest division manager RKO theatres. About a year ago he was associated with Universal as manager of the Milwaukee theatre circuit.

John J. Frueler, owner of the Butterfly, Milwaukee, recently announced his intention of remodeling and rebuilding it.

George Beyer, who formerly managed the Comet in this section, has retired from the show business and is going into the retail grocery business in Wauwatosa.

The theatre which has been building in Bay View for a considerable time, is finally reaching completion and will soon be ready, judging from outward appearances.

Installation of sound equipment in the Adler Theatre at Marshfield was delayed for a few weeks and consequently does not open until March 30th.

An unusually large number of exhibitors came to Milwaukee during the past week. Among those who visited the exchanges were: F. J. Martin, People's Theatre, Laurium, Mich.; Ray Kerridge and son, Hancock, Mich.; Len Brown, Capitol, Madison; Jack Yeo, Beaver Dam; George Panka, Metropolitan, Prairie du Chien; Al Merritt, Princess, Oconto; Neil Duffy, Elite, Appleton; George Herzog, Strand, Manitowoc, and Mrs. M. Gilman, Princess, Plymouth.

This week's bowling tournament resulted in the Scenics taking coveted first place from George Beyer's team, which has long held the lead.

The Rex Theatre at Sheboygan, managed by Ernest Hoefer, opens with Pacent equipment on March 31st.

In the February 23rd issue of the News, in the Milwaukee column, there appeared a news note to the effect that "Reinhold Wallach, who has been in charge of the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., in Milwaukee for some time, has gone to California to take a position in the executive offices of Universal Pictures." This item was in error inasmuch as Fred S. Myer is manager of the Universal Chain Theatres (Milwaukee Theatre Circuit) and we were unintentionally doing him an injustice. However, the slight was not premeditated and Mr. Myer has our apologies.

So to have everything clearly defined we desire to make known that Mr. Myer is manager of the Universal Chain Theatres and has been for some time. Whereas Mr. Wallach was once manager of the Lake, a U chain theatre in Milwaukee.

Yeggs Lift $1,000 From Wash. Theatre

MANAGER AL RALEIGH, of the Liberty theatre, Olympia, Washington, last week reported that his office had been entered by safe-crackers who had garnered $1,000 in cash from the theatre strong-box, and had then replaced the burglary insurance policy in the ruined safe.

Exhibitors who visited film row, Seattle, last week included Fred Mercy and Junior from Eastern Washington, to buy and book for their chain. And from Southern Washington, Bill Ripley, of Longview and Kelso, to accomplish the same thing.

Bernard Mulligan, of the Tokay theatre in Raymond and the South Bend in South Bend, Washington, with his partners, known as the Willipa Harbor Amusement Company, has taken over the Basil theatre at Raymond from A. G. Basil.

Manager Neal East, of Paramount, in Seattle, last week announced the resignation of H. M. Glanfield, who has moved over to Tiffany-Stahl branch.

The latter part of March last week was announced as the opening date for the Stadium theatre, formerly the Montlake, in Seattle, which has been leased to the Metropolitan Talking Picture Company by Bob Mayea. A sound film policy will prevail.

Among the houses to install equipment in the near future are C. C. Ervine's theatre at Okanogan, Washington; Buckmiller's theatre at Baker, Oregon, and Allender's Rex and Ritz theatres in Spokane.

H. A. Black, president of Aust & Black's Theatre Display Company, Seattle, this week reported that his son Donald, who was rushed to the hospital for an emergency appendix operation last week, is out of danger.

R. C. Hill has been made manager of the Warner Bros. exchange in Seattle.

70-Year Old House In Md. Closes Its Doors

AFTER having been used as a theatre for over 70 years, the Belvedere, Cumberland, Md., has given up the ghost. It was one of the film pioneers when admission prices used to be 5 and 10 cents.

John Sadowski, for 15 years treasurer of the Palace burlesque house in Baltimore, has become associated with the staff of the Hippodrome, managed by Nat Keene. He is guest host at the main entrance.

Frank Price, Jr., manager of the Rivoli, Baltimore, is running a close second to the leader in the popularity contest being conducted by the Baltimore Daily Post. Another entrant in the contest is Frederick Clement Weber, former exhibitor.

An election of officers for the ensuing year of the Musical Union of Baltimore City, Local No. 40, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, occurred March 22. Oscar Apple succeeds Henry Mayers as president and will be also delegate to the national convention. Other officers are: R. M. Pachark, vice-president; Elmer Martin, recording secretary; Joseph J. Benick, financial secretary; Paul I. Grossi, treasurer.

Samuel E. Fried, a veteran in the distribution field, has been appointed salesman out of the Washington, D. C., exchange of Columbia.

Happenings Along Salt Lake City's Film Row

N. B. GROSSMAN, of the Capitol theatre at Pocatello, Idaho, was in Salt Lake City last week

Arthur Lewis is reported to have purchased the Forum theatre of Sugar House here from Don Tibbs. The Bonita theatre at Provo, Utah, has been taken over recently by S. C. Ruschmeier, who will reopen next week after redecorating and remodeling. Powers Cinephone has been installed.

The Lyric theatre of Richfield, Utah, operated by G. D. Johnstone, is being remodeled and will seat about 800 when it is opened about April 1st.

John Rugar of the Egyptian, Orpheum and American theatres of Park City, was a visitor here this week.

Photophone has been installed at the Majestic theatre of Nampa, Idaho, operated by Herman Brown.

The Orpheum theatre at Pocatello, Idaho, operated by Don Corruthers, opened a few days after installing Bristolphone.

The New Egyptian theatre of Boise, Idaho, will be ready for their reopening with Photophone by April 1st.

Thomas Berto, operating the Rialto theatre at Rock Springs, Wyoming, was among exhibitor visitors here this past week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Littlejohn of the Lyric and Star theatres at Price, Utah, spent a few days at the local film mart this week.

After being completely remodeled at a cost of $100,000, the Granada theatre, formerly the American, had a brilliant opening March 8th. A. L. Glasmann of Ogden, Utah, owner of the theatre, and Dave Schayer, manager, were on hand to welcome the crowds.

EASTMAN

the proved sound film

LABORATORY measurement of its sound fidelity —actual use in the studios—Reprotone Negative has undergone these two tests and has emerged as the pre-eminent medium for the recording of sound with motion pictures. Developed through the joint efforts of the industry and the Eastman organization, it makes possible a hitherto unapproached standard of realistic, pleasing sound reproduction.
